DISEASE GERMS

she would go to California with me, and wouldn't know why; and then I could make her well again out there. I wanted to break off with the other woman and get away."

While Baring was being arraigned his wife, in their trim cottage on the slope of Park avenue, one of the town's best streets, paced the floor of her parlor.

She wrung her hands, could not bear the knowledge that her counsel, Emanuel M. Steindler, was talking to newspaper people outside, and sent word to him that she was "becoming extremely nervous," and to "come inside."

On one of these occasions Mr. Steindler brought back the message:

"Mrs. Baring does not wish to be in a false position before the public. She asks me to say that her action in this matter has been through no desire to prosecute her husband, but that she had been persuaded it was a public duty."

The White Plains authorities made public the cunning and ghoulish trail that they have followed since April 10, when Mrs. Baring complained to the district attorney.

Lieutenant Frank S. McGarvey and Sergeant William Fahncow, of the State troopers, were assigned to hunt out this trail. One said:

"We weren't trying to horn in on the work of the police or the sheriff. The fact is she telephoned to us first that she was suspicious. This was the night of April 3 or 4."

The authorities learned that after the Atlantic City trip, Baring had protested to his wife that cut sugar was impure and insisted that thereafter she herself should have nothing but the best—granulated sugar. He continued to use cut sugar, however, explaining that he had not been sick. Then he brought up to her bed a cup of coffee containing this new form of sugar and she began to suspect.

In the basement of the house, the troopers found an old fish bowl containing a pasty substance which upon examination at Bellevue Hospital was found to contain the culture of diphtheria.

Wrapped in a newspaper they found the fragments of a vial, and then a torn label which pieced together bore the name of the Willard Parker Hospital, and the name of "C. Barnes."

Ignorant of Germs.

Bacteriologists attached to the Williard Parker Hospital for contagious diseases, asserted that it is quite apparent Clarence O. Baring had very little knowledge of the effect of pneumonia and diphtheria germs, if the charges made against him are true. Here is what they say:

Dr. William H. Park—Only 20 per cent of New York people are susceptible to diphtheria germs. Pneumonia germs abound in the throats of everybody. aBring evidently knew very little of what effect these germs would have on his wife.

Dr. Anna W. Williams — The chances of innoculation by giving pneumonia or diphtheria germs through the mouth are practically nil. After they once pass through the throat they are perfectly harmless.

Dr. Charles Krumwiede — Baring must have been trying to immunize his wife. After these germs had passed through her throat they would more than likely give her immunity to the disease, rather than innoculate her.

LIFE OF MISSIONARY ON ISLAND OF JAPAN

Miss Mary Haig, Well-Known In Cavan Township, Writes Interesting Letter.

CAVAN, April 30.—One of the girls of Cavan Centre received a letter this week from Miss Mary Haig, Tarhoku, Formosa, Japan, who is a missionary in that place.

Before commencing her training for work in a mission field, Miss Haig taught in Beechwood, Cavan school, and also for a short time in Cavan Centre School. In both sections she has many friends.

She enclosed in her letter a sketch describing a day's duties. She asked her former pupil to read her letter in her C.G.I.T. meeting, as it would be interesting to Canadian girls to know how one of their own missionaries lived. As many readers of this paper are personal friends of Miss Haig's, and many more deeply interested in missionary work, I am giving the sketch:—

A Day in Tan?a?Kha.

Morning! One would like a little more sleep, but it's time to get up. The Bible woman brings me water to wash and a charcoal fire, over which I boil a cup of coffee, scramble an egg, and toast a slice of bread for breakfast. I hurry with the meal that I may have a few minutes in which to prepare the afternoon Bible lesson, before the pastor's family gather for morning prayers.

At 8.30 two Christian women come to take us calling. First we visit a Christian home, but the woman is busy, so with a word of greeting we pass on. Next we go to the Mayor's home. The Mayor is, perhaps, the richest man in the town. He lives in a fine brick house, and has a large household, which includes his brother's family as well as his own two wives, his children, and a host of servants. None of the household are christians, but they have heard the gospel preached once or twice and are eager to hear more. A dozen or more women and children gather in the big front room. We sing a hymn, then produce a picture illustrating the Parable of the Prodigal Son. For an hour or more we continue to tell of the Heavenly Father and His love for us, His children. As we leave we promise to return another day to teach them to read.

Next we enter a mud brick house with thatched roof. A poor widow lives here. She is a christian. We are greeted most heartily and seated on the bed, which is against the wall on one side of the living-room, while a fanning mill occupies a corner opposite. A heap of sweet potatoes are in another corner, and a chicken is under a basket at the foot of the bed. Our hostess disappears and we suppose she has gone to bring the usual cup of tea. Presently she returns, grabs the chicken and proceeds to the kitchen again. We know then that she is about to prepare it for the pot and detain us for dinner. We protest. It is only 10.30, and we have more calls to make, but we are not allowed to leave until we have promised to come back for dinner. Our next call is at the home of another wealthy family. Some young women and children appear, but the mother is an opium smoker; and although it is nearly noon, she is still sleeping. She would be awake at her opium until two or three in the morning and so must get her sleep during the day. We make two or three more brief calls, then return to the widow's home for dinner.

The steaming bowls come in until there isn't room to place another one on the table—a feast of chicken and fish and pork and vegetables and soups cooked in a great variety of ways, and three kinds of New Years cake, for it is the first week of the Chinese New Year

Dinner over, we hurry back to the church for our afternoon class. Already women have begun to arrive. Some are learning to read, some to write; others are memorizing scripture verses and hope to receive a certificate by the end of the week. By 2.30 fifteen or twenty women and a few children have gathered and we practice new hymns. Two of the younger women have studied in the Mission School. They, and a few others, are quick to learn new tunes. For some of the older women it is harder. One old lady of sixty-eight learns to memorize the words (for she can't read), and warbles away, quite unconscious of the fact that her tune never once hits the right note. Our Bible lesson for the afternoon is from the Book of Acts, which we have been studying a chapter each day. We review, trying to recall what each chapter contains. When we come to the eighth chapter a small boy proudly volunteers the information that it is about a man named Enoch. Enoch in the Book of Acts! Where did he get that idea? Then I remember that the boy has two playmates, one named Enoch, the other Philip. He knew that Bible story had the name of one one of his chums—but he guessed the wrong one. Those stories of Peter and John, of Philip, Stephen and Paul, who all so courageously witnessed for Jesus, in the face of opposition, imprisonment and death, make us long to be more earnest in telling of Jesus, to the many round about us who still worship images of wood and paper, and who live in constant dread of evil spirits. Several women lead in prayer, praying that we may be faithful in the Master's service and that the non-Christian women may be led to know the true God. Special prayer is made for Ku, North Formosa, W.M.S., and the Bible Women whom its members support, who works in towns and villages where there are no chapels and few, if any, Christians.

It is four o'clock when our meeting is over, and most of the women must go home to cook supper. About half-a-dozen remain to study until five. They would stay longer, but I must have time to prepare my own supper before the children come at seven for the evening class.

By 6.30 it is dark, and it is raining. The roads are muddy, and the village streets are not lighted. Surely very few will come to-night. Seven o'clock finds more than forty boys and girls gathered in the church. They are a lively group. Noisy? Well, yes; they are rather noisy. They all study aloud. But they are eager to learn. For the first half-hour, they study Romanized. Many of them are new comers and are still at their A. B. C's. A few have read through the Primer, and are reading from the Catechism. The next study period they practise Chinese characters. The pastor has written the hymn "The Sweet Bye and Bye" on a big sheet of paper and hung it up in front. So they read until they have become familiar with the characters of one verse and the chorus. Then we sing. I have great difficulty in convincing them that shouting with all the energy they have does not make the sweetest of music. But they shout with very evident pleasure.

Then comes the Bible story from a picture roll. If we delay a few minutes in beginning there are insistent reminders—Story! Story! It's time for the story.

At 8.30 they light their lanterns and put on their huge hats, which resemble umbrellas in size and usefulness. They all file out and after a few minutes chat with the pastor's wife and the Bible woman, I tumble into bed, tired, yet rejoicing that God is giving us such a wonderful opportunity to witness for Him. In my heart I thank Him for friends in Canada who are praying for us. For "He who is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think" heareth prayer, and the blessings He bestows are, indeed, "above all that we ask or think."

Card of Thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Kennedy, of Cavan, desire in this way to express their sincere thanks to Dr. Turner and his hospital staff, to the Cavan Ladies' Aid for floral tribute, and also to the many friends for sympathy and kindness shown to Mrs. Kennedy in her illness.

BOY'S BAD COLD TURNED TO BRONCHITIS

The frequency with which bronchitis develops into pneumonia is appreciated by very few mothers. The danger of pneumonia is, probably, well understood too, but how many mothers take into consideration that a neglected attack of bronchitis frequently leads to this dangerous disease.

We would advise all mothers to give their children Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup the first moment they show any symptoms of a cold or cough as by doing this they save them from an attack of bronchitis or pneumonia.

Mrs. Lawrence Quick, Sandwich, Ont, writes:—"My little boy, six years old, had a bad cold which turned to bronchitis. I tried every thing I thought would be best for it but did not see him getting any better. I was told to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after giving him two bottles he got wonderful relief. I cannot praise it enough.'

COLLIE DOG SAVED LIVES OF 8 PERSONS

LAMBERTON, N.Y., April 29 (Canadian Press). — The lives of eight persons were saved by a collie dog when the farmhouse of Leslie S. Morrison burned to the ground early this morning.

The dog sacrificed its own life in its efforts.

Morrison was awakened by the dog's tugging at the bed clothes to find the house in flames.

With the help of his wife and his cousin, James Morrison, he carried five children, ranging in age from three to nine years, to safety.

When the embers cooled, the body of the dog was found buried in the debris in the cellar.

CHEMONG PARK HOMES OPENING FOR SUMMER

Mr. Dan. Sullivan Among the First — Bridgenorth Has Two Milk Vendors.

BRIDGENORTH, Apr. 30. — Mr. Dan Sullivan motored from Oakville on Wednesday, April 23, to his cottage in Chemong Park. Mrs. Sullivan accompanied him. They are getting things in shape around the cottage where they intend spending the summer. Everything wintered well at the cottage during his absence with the exception of a wheelbarrow which was missing.

Occupy Chapel

The chapel, which is situated on the Hungerford property, was to have been converted into a cottage this summer, but Rev. Father J. McCauley has made arrangements to occupy it for service as usual.

Long Motor Trip

Capt. W. H. White has moved into Mr. Fraser's cottage at Burleigh, and has taken charge of the Wanderer for the annual cruise during the summer. He motored to Bridgenorth on Saturday evening, where he spent the night with some friends and on Sunday he motored to Trenton, the speedometer registering 164 miles from Bridgenorth to Trenton and return. If any of the boys around the village would like to take a run down to Trenton some evening they will find the roads in good condition.

Using the Car

The mail stage, which runs daily return trips between Peterboro' and Lakehurst, has dispensed with horses and is at present running the car. Rollie says it is quite an agreeable change.

Dance a Success

The dance in the hall on Friday night was quite a success. A good orchestra supplied the music. Mr. Forsythe, of Peterboro', supplied the refreshments. A number of young men gathered in front of the hall to hear the music.

A New Colt

Mr. Fred Jopling has been seen on the street in Bridgenorth during the past week with a colt which he has been attempting to break to the halter. It is quite an attraction and some of the horsemen are jealous of Fred.

Spring Seeding

Mr. Eli Burston put in a field of wheat on Monday, April 21. This is the first seeding in this district but if the weather man can stave the rain off for a few days, all the farmers will be on the land seeding.

Easy For County

A portion of the railing on the floating bridge was broken off by the ice. It was a lucky year for the county, as the ice went out without doing any damage to the floating part. Mr. Aaron Mann, with a few men, made the necessary repairs in a few days.

Assessor on Job

Mr. C. O. Northey, the township assessor, has been through the village last week, serving each and every householder with a summons to pay their taxes next December. From a glance at the notices taxes won't be any lower for 1924.

Two Milk Vendors

Bridgenorth is the only village in the township which can boast of two milk vendors making a daily delivery of bottled milk, and now when the park opens up no doubt business will increase.

Holding Its Own

Mr. J. A. Jobe, while in Colborne last week, called on his old friend, Mr. G. R. Keys, formerly of Varna, Ont. Mr. Keys is in business in that town at present and states that Colborne is holding its own with the other small towns along the front.

Farm Help Supply

Farmers in this district have been very fortunate in securing help for the farm. There are a number of Irishmen in this district which, they claim, are amongst the very best workmen on the farm. Mr. Lewis Fowler engaged one for $30 per month and board, but left last week and is now with Mr. Charlie Moore, where he is getting $40 for the summer and $30 for the winter months, which is considered a fair wage for farm labor in this district.

Mr. McIntosh spent the Easter holiday with his family at Stirling, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark have moved into their cottage for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. John Fligg have been up to the park. Mr. Fligg is anxiously waiting for the fishing season to open, as he is about the only fisherman who caught fish last summer.

KINGSTON IS BOTHERED WITH CHINESE LAUNDRYS

KINGSTON, April 29 (Canadian Press). — Kingston is having quite a time over the Chinese laundries.

Ratepayers stormed the Council meeting and protested against the location of a Chinese laundry on Division Street, in the residential section, and as a result a committee was appointed to see the City Solicitor and see if an area could be laid out in which laundries could be banned.

HASTINGS AND THE DISTRICT

Farmers Are Busy at Their Spring Work—Personals.

HASTINGS, Apr. 30.—Local farmers have commenced work on the land with a vengeance. Although it was thought by several that it would be a late and backward spring, the beautiful weather of the past few days has speeded things up. One farmer stated that planting time this year has been no later than last, as on Friday he sowed his wheat and on looking up the date of last year's planting, which he had marked on his seeder, it proved to be the same date.

The Hyraticas or May flowers, which are the first of the wild flowers, are now in full bloom, and many bouquets of the different delicate shades are being gathered in the woods by the nature lovers.

Fishing Season

Now that the weather has turned warmer, the small boy is seen with the fishing rod and also the proud possessor of the first string of perch, the first fish to be caught in the Trent waters here.

Dr. Greene, Mr. and Mrs. R. Soden and daughter were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Sisson on Sunday.

The Sunday evening services of the Methodist Church was held under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society. Miss Aston, a missionary, home on furlough, gave a very enthusiastic and impressive talk on conditions and needs in China. Miss Aston impressed the congregation with the progress which has taken place during her fourteen years' service in that country, but also pointed out the grave need of further work as China today is a nation under great unrest and bandittry. Before China is a Christianized country a great deal has yet to be accomplished. A missionary thankoffering was taken up at the close of the service. The music was furnished by a choir of ladies, assisted by the young ladies of the Mission Circle.

Miss Jennie Hadden's Death

The death occurred at her home here on Saturday morning, April 25, of a well-known citizen in the person of Miss Jennie Hadden, daughter of Mr. Joseph and the late Mrs. Hadden, in her 39th year. The late Miss Hadden has been confined to the house more or less during the last two years with a lingering illness, and her death was not unlooked for. During the long period of her confinement, Miss Hadden, being of a most loving disposition, bore her burden with true Christian devotion and always had a ready smile and a kind word for all. She leaves to mourn her loss, besides a multitude of friends, a loving father. The funeral will be held from the family residence on Monday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. for St. Paul's Church, thence to St. Mary's Cemetery, where interment will take place.

Examine Linoleum for Yourself —Then Buy it with Assurance

Swatch reproductions above are of three popular Dominion Linoleum Rugs; those opposite are of Dominion Linoleum by the yard.

IT is easy to tell genuine Linoleum—the high grade modern floor covering. But if you do not protect yourself by following these simple tests you may easily be fooled.

Always turn over a piece of linoleum or a linoleum rug and make sure that it has genuine burlap backing—all real linoleum has. Then look at the edge—it should have a natural brown tint, much like an ordinary, unused cork.

Nowadays it is well to be careful in buying linoleum, for there are many products on the market that look like it, but which have neither burlap nor cork in their make-up. And if you buy, and do not get real linoleum you will probably be disappointed.

Linoleum is made of cork, oxidized linseed oil, kauri gum and other materials pressed firmly into a backing of strong, tough burlap. The processes used combine to make a floor covering that is very smooth, durable, clean and highly sanitary. For every type of floor it is ideal.

You can buy linoleum by the yard or in the form of rugs, in sizes to suit all rooms. Write us today for rug folder in colors, showing patterns that will please you. Or your nearest house furnishing store will show you the actual patterns of

ALNWICK TOWNSHIP COUNCIL

ROSENEATH, April 30.— The regular council meeting was held in the town hall, Roseneath at two o'clock with Councillors Arnold, Parker, Shearer and Blodgett present. Reeve Honey was not able to be present as he has not yet returned from the hospital at Peterboro.

The clerk in a few opening remarks stated that this was the first occasion during his term of office extending over a period of twelve years, that this township council has set without a reeve and he hoped Reeve Honey's illness would be of short duration. He said in case of a special meeting being called the clerk had the power of naming the acting reeve but where it was the regular meeting with the reeve absent a leader had to be appointed by the councillors themselve. He also read a letter from Reeve Honey stating that he had expected to be home for the council meeting but owing to his condition is would be impossible. He suggested that Councillor Arnold would be appointed as acting reeve. On resolution of Councillors Blodgett and Shearer Councillor Arnold was chosen to act. Councillor Arnold thanked them and asked for the first item of business.

Correspondence was read from D. W. Bews of Port Hope soliciting their patronage for construction and engineering stating that he had experience and was prepared to undertake such work.

The next letter was read from J. B. Wilkinson in regard to building culverts, bridges, etc., asking for their work and that he was prepared to send plans of the above.

There was also a communication from Smith and Smith, land surveyors and engineers offering their services.

The last letter to be read was from the Department of Drainage, O.A.C. regarding the Tile Drainage Act, stating what a great benefit it was to farmers and so few understood it. Farmers in some places are badly in need of drainage but cannot undertake it owing to financial conditions. They can be helped individually and through the municipality. Councils may borrow money not exceeding $2,000 by issuing debentures to the Provincial Treasurer bearing interest at five per cent. Farmers through this source may borrow seevnty-five per cent of their cost of drainage paying it back by installments of from ten to twenty years. An inspector must make a report to the council before money is advanced to the individual.

On motion these communications were received and fyled.

On motion of Councillors Parke and Shearer the clerk was instructed to send a letter of cheer from the council to Reeve Honey.

Mr. Alfred Sherwin interviewed the council in regard to building a sidewalk of about one hundred and fifty feet in front of his property, as the one now there was badly in need of repair. On motion of Councillors Parke and Shearer it was laid on the table till next meeting and the clerk was instructed to interview the local county road overseer as the street in question is one the county provincial highway.

Moved by Councillors Arnold and Parker that Councillor Blodgett be appointed a committee to look after the cement supply.

The superintendent of the county provincial highway sent word that there was grading to be done on the boundary between Haldimand and Alnwick townships but owing to conditions the council thought it was not their duty to do anything at present.

The assessor returned his role to the council. It was found that Mr. Barney Blastoria had a cottage on the third concession line which was not assessed. The clerk said that no letter of occupation had ever been given in his time to anybody for this line in question. Also other cottages along the lake shore were not assessed and thus were evading paying taxes. They had been let off from time to time but the council thought that it was now time these summer resorters were paying taxes for their property. The assessor was instructed to assess all the cottages on the lake shore including C. Browns, Jas. Barr, Geo. McQuad, along with the cottage afore mentioned.

Councillor Arnold reported on the committee which he had acted in place of Reeve Honey re measuring road at Stoney Creek. It was found that twenty feet from the centre of the road included all the brush in question and Councillor Shearer was appointed to secure someone to cut and burn brush.

Councillor Shearer reported that he had engaged L. Harvey to cut and burn brush. The said work to be completed by the first day of June and that he had also informed the Indian Council of such and they were perfectly satisfied.

Councillor Parker voiced a complaint that had been laid to him in regard to brush that had not been burned after wood was cut on the fourth concession line. On motion of Councillors Parker and Arnold the clerk was instructed to notify the parties that have not fulfilled their agreement in this matter and informing them that all brush must be burned at once.

On motion of Councillors Shearer and Arnold Councillor Parker was appointed to see after the signs on West's Hill.

On motion of Councillor Shearer and Blodgett the assessor's role was accepted.

On motion of Councillors Shearer and Blodgett notification of tenders were to be posted for three men and two teams to operate the grade for the coming season. Tenders to be in the clerk's hands not later than 8 p.m. Saturday, May 17th.

Moved by Councillor Shearer, seconded by Councillor Blodgett that the township council hold a court of revision on May 1st at 10 a.m.

On motion of Councillors Parke and Shearer the clerk was authorized to write orders on the treasurer for the following accounts:

John Burrison, breaking roads, $10.13; John Blodgett, breaking roads, $5.60; Ross McCracken, breaking roads, $4.95; Earl Thackeray, breaking roads, $4.75; Arthur Tucker truant officer, $4.50; E. Shearer, committee work, $1.50; G. Parker, committee work, $1.50; W. Arnold, committee work, $1.50; Austin Lean, part assessor salary, $25.00.

The council adjourned to meet May 31 at ten o'clock.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Warkworth Team May Drop Out of the League --Personals.

CAMPBELLFORD, April 29 — Word was received here that the Warkworth baseball team had decided, owing to a lack of players, to withdraw from the Northumberland League for this season. Those in the team comprised almost entirely of war veterans, who made such a good showing in the league last year and who now hold the championship trophy for Northumberland County. Archie Zufelt, their pitcher, has gone to Belleville with the Central Ontario League, and others of last year's men have been obliged to retire from the game. Five of the best of the players, however, will be in the Orland line-up this season. Harry Zufelt, first baseman, and Harold Mulhall, short stop. The latter has been captain of the veterans since they entered the league, and he will be at the helm for Orland. Last year the Orland's had had some of the best individual players in the league. It was their first season, and it is fully expected that they will be a team to be reckoned with in 1924.

Division Court Case

At the Grafton Division Court a case of much interest to the Township of Haldimand came up for hearing before Judge Ward. Mr. Joseph Calnan, of Haldimand, brought action against S. E. Robinson to recover from the latter his commission on the sale of the Kenneth Warner property at Vernonville which Mr. Calnan purchased. The reason given for this was that plaintiff could not secure a deed, it was alleged. It was claimed by the defence that although there was some trouble at first, this was overcome, and that it was now possible to secure a clear deed. Judgment was given in favor of the plaintiff for $30 and Mr. Calnan was allowed his commission.

LIBERALS SUBSCRIBE TO SNOWDEN'S BUDGET

Hailed By Asquith As A Free Trade Budget—Even Conservatives Regarded It As Sound In The First Informal Expressions of Opinion—Door Open To U. S. Auto Manufacturers.

LONDON, Apr. 30.—The first budget ever prepared for the Government of Great Britain by a Socialist was presented in the House of Commons Tuesday afternoon by Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer. There was very little obvious socialism in it, if any. Indeed, the Liberal leaders hailed it as a "free trade budget," and H. H. Asquith, head of the Liberal Party, informed the House that there was nothing in the budget to which a single one of the Liberals could not heartily subscribe.

Thus, its speedy passage through parliament is probably assured. Whatever the Conservatives may think about Chancellor Snowden's proposed method of dealing with the public purse, their feeling will not be publicly known until the debate is resumed. But in the pleasantries that passed from one side of the House to the other yesterday afternoon there were jests about Philip Snowden giving away Conservative Government money on non-socialistic lines. Many of the Tories frankly described the Labor Budget as a good one and a sound one.

Halves Duty on Tea

So far as the great bulk of the people is concerned the big thing about this budget is its appeal to the heart of every Britisher through his stomach as well as his pocketbook. The duty on tea, the great daily beverage of rich and poor alike, is cut in half, to a figure three and one-third pence per pound less than before the war. The duty on sugar that goes into the teacups and elsewhere in the national diet, is reduced more than one-half, from 23/4 to 11/4 pence per pound, the Chancellor pointing out that it is now being taxed fourteen times as heavily as before the war.

The effect of these reductions in the cost of Great Britain's great indoor pastime and rite—afternoon tea—will be immediate. The dealers have already announced the price would drop today.

War Measures Lapse

Coffee, cocoa and chicory also get off with half the duty heretofore imposed, and the duty on dried fruit will pass out of existence August 1. On that date also will lapse the duties known as the McKenna Duties, imposed as a war revenue measure on imported automobiles, foreign films, motorcycles, clocks, watches and other manufactured goods.

This should be good news for the United States manufacturers of these commodities, as they are active competitors in the British market, where their sales have been somewhat restricted in the past through import taxes in the neighborhood of 33 13 per cent. ad valorem.

Referring to the McKenna Duties, which in the last fiscal year yielded £2,247,000, Chancellor Snowden said:

"These have never been a part of our fiscal system; they were intended as temporary war measures and have been justified since by the need of revenue. I think the time has come for them to disappear."

This statement, greeted by Liberal and Labor cheers, was later repeated in substance by Mr. Asquith, who warmly welcomed the abolition of the McKenna Duties. What the Conservatives think about it is something else again. One of their strongest talking points for protection in the last election was the progress made by British automobile manufacturers under protection against the United States manufacturers.

Loud complaints went up last night from British motor manufacturers who say the country will be flooded with foreign cars, and the British motor industry given a setback just when it was beginning to achieve a relatively large production. Some of them are of the opinion that the workers themselves will complain, since protection has secured for them their jobs, and perhaps by complaining strongly enough will have Mr. Snowden's proposal killed in committee.

Even with the duties on foreign films, the British motion picture industry has had a hard time of it, and with the taxes abolished next Summer, the way will not be made easier. The taxes on sixpenny seats in the moving picture houses, and other theatres, have been abolished, and those on seats up to one shilling, three pence have been reduced. But this will affect only the cheaper theatres of the country, those in the West End having few or none of these low-priced accommodations.

Profits Tax Ended

Mr. Snowden made but one gesture toward accommodating capitalism—absolute abolition of the corporations profits tax, which means the loss of £12,000,000 yearly by the Exchequer.

Of the profits tax, the Chancellor said:

"It was not loved by its parents; it was reviled by its subsequent guardians; it was condemned by every party, not least by the Labor Party. It quite obviously has only been awaiting its final doom."

He went on to remark that when the tax was imposed, the most that could be said for it was that it was less objectionable than some other taxes which might have been suggested, but now that trade was bad, the captains of industry united in saying that it was one of the factors hindering the development of trade.

This money will be held in trust and the two sisters, and Madeline Small and Percy Small (half sister and half brother respectively) will share an income in equal shares; in the event of one of the participants dying the sum of $100,000 representing the amount from which income is individually derived, will revert to the estate. HEARTS AFIRE

by May Christie

The Brilliant Novelist of Modern Society

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

Prudence Page—a pretty country girl has awakened from a brief and unhappy love affair with unreliable

Bert Traymore—a fascinating philanderer, guest at the home of Mrs. Vansittart—wealthy woman, who owns Winston Towers, a charming country home. Another of her guests is

Virginia Dale—a blase beauty, who sees a rival in Prudence, and who has set her mind on capturing

Peter Armstrong—a clever young inventor, much attracted to Prudence. The latter goes to New York, is caught in a fire and taken to hospital. Peter comes to see her, but the arrival of Bert Traymore leads Peter to think that Prudence cares for Traymore, and not for him.

Virginia, meantime, thrown herself on Peter's chivalry, saying he must marry her, as he has involved her in a scandal by having her in his cottage on the night of the thunderstorm.

Prudence, returning to her home in the country, and knowing nothing of this, awaits the coming of Peter.

CHAPTER LVII.

Janet's Honesty.

A soft night, the moon high in a deep-blue sky, and the nightingale trilling a song of ecstacy!

Prudence, who had awaited Peter's coming for two hours, had not abandoned hope.

Something—she knew not what—had detained the man she loved.

But he would come; of course he would.

In the wide, low-ceiled room upstairs, that was her own special sanctum, she sat curled up on the shallow window-seat and leaned out out into the perfumed night.

The honeysuckle round the leaded pans had newly bloomed, and Prudence broke a spray off and fastened it in the quaint blue gown that she was wearing.

With her short, curling hair a halo round her head, she looked like the illustration of a fairy-story—too lovely to be real.

So thought someone who approached the garden-gate at that moment and saw the phantom vision at the upstairs window.

"Poor child! I haven't the heart to meet her! Seems a shame that such a pretty creature shouldn't have more out of life, and that all the troubles aren't confined to us homely, unattractive women, who, by rights, oughtn't to expect too much of men!"

This odd bit of philosophy rose to the heart of Janet Mercer as she hesitated for a moment underneath the liliac-tree beside the gate.

Her love-affair with Will Ogilvie was running with remarkable smoothness, these days. They hadn't even had a tiff. Even his selfish old mother had stilled her tongue, and however temporary such a state of affairs might prove to be, it was entirely satisfactory.

"Who is it?" Prudence's fresh, young voice, vibrant with expectation, cut into Janet's thoughts.

So the child was expecting someone was she?

Peter Armstrong.

Janet hoped—knowing what she did know—that it wasn't he.

But it must be Peter, because Prudence's only other man-friend (save the word!) was—or had been—that Traymore fellow, and, thank heaven! that affair was definitely "off."

"Hello, there? It's only me, Janet Mercer." The woman moved out into the radius of the moon, clicking open the garden-gate and coming swiftly up the path.

Prudence's heart contracted with the pain of disappointment. But immediately she was ashamed of not being more pleased at seeing Janet, her staunch friend.

She slid off the window-seat and went at once downstairs to the brightly-lit parlor, where her mother sat sewing and her father nodding over his newspaper.

The two young women greeted each other warmly, though in Janet's manner was a certain odd constraint.

It didn't arise from the story of the theft at Winston Towers, nor from Prudence's flight to town and her adventures there. Janet was afraid for Prudence's young heart. . . .

They talked about the fire.

"The Smith's oughtn't to have left the building. They're paid to be the caretakers and had no right to go away," vouchsafed Janet.

"I hope it won't cost them their job," commented Mrs. Page, glancing up from her sewing for the hundreth time to gaze lovingly at Prudence.

"Oh, they won't mind that; they were sick and tired of it. And, besides, there can't be any more job when the building's gone!" Janet's eyes lighted on Prudence's bobbed head. "Such a shorn lamb! But it's becoming, Prudence.

The young girl smiled a little wistfully.

Why wasn't Peter coming?

Something had detained him.

She screwed up her courage to try and bring his name into the conversation. Maybe Janet had seen him.

But Janet's manner was a little queer to-night. Sort of nervous, wasn't it?

Then, in a lull of talk, Prudence blurted out:

"Does—does Mr. Armstrong still come and talk to little Lucia?"

Janet's lips tightened oddly.

"No; not so much." And then she added: "He's been rather taken up of late."

Of course, that meant the one thing—Work.

But why did Prudence's heart throb painfully and her breath catch in her throat, as though with a strange, unbearable premonition.

John Page got up to go to bed. He had a hard day before him on the morrow, so he said, and excused himself, leaving the women to their gossip.

The moment he had gone, his wife remarked, in a would-be casual tone that didn't deceive Janet in the least:

"He's a very clever man, is Peter Armstrong, and one that I've a great admiration for."

Then Janet said a most extraordinary thing.

"Oh, I wouldn't let your admiration run away with you, Peter Armstrong's like all the men, where a pretty woman is concerned. I've no patience with him just now."

Prudence felt her whole body grow cold and rigid.

"W—why?" (Was it her own voice that spoke?)

"He's let himself be hooked by that Virginia Dale, and by the way he's going on, he's hers, and crazy over her!"

MIRACLE OF SPRING.

If spring came but once in a century, instead of once a year, or burst forth with the sound of an earthquake, and not in silence, what wonder and expectation there would be in all hearts to behold the miraculous change! But now the silent succession suggests nothing but necessity. To most men only the cessation of the miracle would be miraculous, and the perpetual exercise of God's power seems less wonderful than its withdrawal would be.—Longfellow.

BLACKLEG

Leading Druggists throughout Ontario, inform us that already a great many farmers are buying Blacklegoids preparatory to vaccinating their cattle this spring. There is no question but that this is a good move; something that every owner of cattle ought to attend to before it is too late. Veterinarians are agreed that there is little use trying to treat a case of Blackleg. It is almost invariably fatal and a single case is likely to so inoculate the soil with germs that the infection will linger for years to come.

Since it is a well established fact that vaccination will protect against the disease, no one ought to neglect this precaution. The next time you have an opportunity, go to Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter Street, where you will get booklets and full instruction how to use Blackleg Vaccine

INTERNAL AND POLITICAL ROWS MARKED EARLY LIFE OF CHURCH

Methodists Achieved Unity Among Themselves In Spite Of Episcopal Interference and Family Quarrels —Some Ancient History That Applies Today.

Unions and disunions are frequent occurrences in church life in Canada a century ago, and were accompanied with intrigues and bickerings that sound strangely modern, judging by a summary of earlier movements within Methodism as recounted in the current issue of the Christian Guardian by Rev. J. H. Arnup, B.A., who writes as follows:

In Canada Methodist disunion was accentuated by streams flowing from separate national sources. In considerable measure and in its earliest stages this was true in the Maritime Provinces. In Upper and Lower Canada it was the dominating feature of Methodist organization for nearly fifty years. Our earliest Methodist preachers, and a majority of their immediate successors, came from the United States. Most Methodist settlers, however, and many who became Methodists as a result of itinerant missionary effort in frontier neighborhoods, either came direct from the Old Country or were Loyalists who sought shelter under the old flag during the stormy period of revolution among the colonies to the South.

Then came the unnatural war of 1812-15. American ministers were necessarily withdrawn, British Wesleyan missionaries were called for, and after the war they naturally remained. But when the Methodist Episcopal Church resumed activities in full force there was confusion. Along the St. Lawrence, from Kingston to Quebec, the English Wesleyans were in the majority. Farther West their work was limited to circuits based on Niagara and York. Finally in 1820 all the work of Lower Canada passed under charge of the Canada Eastern (missionary) District of the Wesleyan Church. Methodism in the upper Province, erected into a separate conference four years later, became the Canada Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Henry Ryan, once a presiding elder, withdrew from the work in 1827 and two years later with a handful of followers organized the Canadian Wesleyan Methodist Church, commonly known as Ryanites. It is rumored that in this new venture Elder Ryan received aid and comfort, with assistance in funds, both private and Provincial, from no less a person than Bishop Strachan! That mighty churchman and astute politician evidently hoped thereby to divide and conquer his most troublesome ecclesiastical opponents. Though undoubtedly full of high explosives, as a wrecker of Methodism, the redoubtable Ryan proved to be a dud. The new movement languished and a few years after his death in 1833 the remnant was absorbed into the Methodist New Connexion Church in Canada.

The Canada Conference joined the British Wesleyan Church. In 1828 the Canada Conference achieved its independence of the church in the United States. The bulk of its territory was essentially a mission field. Nothing daunted, its leaders planned great things by way of Christian conquest among pagan tribes and itinerant extension into backwoods settlements, even more remote.

In addition to pressing this work of the Missionary Society, organized in 1824, within five years the new church launched three great connexional enterprises, and laid the foundations of practically all the departmental activity of the present day. The fruits of their far vision and ready sacrifices are to be seen in the Christian Guardian, the Book Room and Victoria College. Temperance societies and Sunday school work had been begun, establishing a Methodist leadership which has never been lost.

Nevertheless, Wesleyan brethren in Lower Canada discerned a great discrepency—it was real—between Methodist opportunity and Methodist resources in the upper Province. Available records indicate also a sense of having become the victims of doubtful strategy when the Home Committee consented to limit their activities to the least promising portion of the new land. Roman Catholics were many and Methodists were few. As a net result the Missionary Committee in London once more sent its representatives into Upper Canada. Another five years of rival extension followed, or more; also, grace and good sense prevailed to bring order out of chaos and substitute union for relations more mixed than helpful.

The new organization was known as the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Canada. It possessed local autonomy, limited, by appointment of its president by the British Conference. Missionary work became the object of direct supervision and support on the part of the Home Committee. Already a membership of 1,000 had been gather among Indians almost wholly pagan ten years before. But the resources of the young conference were far too limited to meet the demands of multiplying settlements and leave a margin for this essentially foreign missionary service. Under the terms of union the Canadian Missionary Society became auxiliary to the strong parent society of the Weslayan Church.

An effort was made to include Lower Canada in the union, and to use the new conference as the nucleus of a united Methodism for the whole of British North America. That dream, however, was to be realized only after full fifty years. For the present, Weslayan leaders in the lower Province were still suspicious of the Americanizing tendencies of their "Western" brethren. Montreal was more loyal than London itself.

The union of 1833 was not unanimous. To some the new body was too English rather than too American. Opposition—even as now—was directed against both the polity proposed and the methods adopted to reach the end desired. It was even charged that Egerton Ryerson had turned Conservative! Indeed, he was actually credited with having gone over to Doctor Strachan, press, types and all! After union was effected leaders of a dissentient minority came together and organized the "Methodist Episcopal Church of Canada." For half a century this organization ran an honorable course in Canadian life until the final reunion of 1884.

REVOLVERS FOUND NEAR CAR HOLDUP

Believed To Have Been Used By The Bandits Who Robbed Bank of Hochelaga Messengers.

MONTREAL, April 30.—Two revolvers, thought to have been used by the bandits who held up the Bank of Hochelaga collection automobile on April 1 here when $142,238 was stolen and the chauffeur and a bandit shot dead, were discovered in a sewer gulley here yesterday. The find was made close to the spot where the car containing the body of the dead bandit was found abandoned.

The revolvers are of .45 calibre and were fully loaded. They were handed over to the police who will give them to Dr. Wilfrid Derome, medico-legal expert attached to the Coroner's Court for examination to determine whether the bullets and revolvers can be positively identified as belonging to any of the accused now under arrest in connection with the case.

Local detectives are still searching the city for the three members of the gang suspected of being connected with the hold-up, who were named on the warrant issued last Saturday. Police of other cities have been requested to be on the lookout for members of this trio.

NOT GUILTY OF MURDER.

TORONTO, April 30.— A jury yesterday afternoon acquitted Wm. A. Steadman on a charge of murder of Herbert McClure on March 8 last, on grounds of insanity. He will be detained, however, during his Majesty's pleasure, in the Ontario Hospital for the Insane.

COLONEL POWLEY VISITED TEMPLE

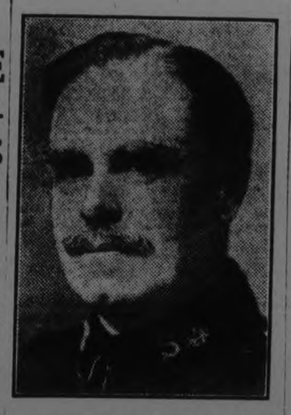
Mr. Powley the Chief Secretary for Canada East, Paid His First Visit to Peterboro.

Colonel Powley, new Chief Secretary for Canada East, paid his first visit to Peterborough last Saturday and Sunday. He was met at the station by the Temple Band and members and marched to the Temple, where a number of the ladies had already a table spread with good things. After the cup of tea the Colonel had his first talk to the members of the Band. A few speeches of welcome were given by Adjutant Smith, Bandmaster F. Robinson, Treas. Cunningham, Sergt. T. Brooks, Brigadier Moore. After the open air service Colonel Powley was introduced to the citizens at the Temple at 8 p.m. Sunday afternoon His Worship Mayor Turner presided over the service and also gave the Colonel a very warm welcome to Peterborough. His Worship Mayor Turner then called upon the visitor to give a lecture, which was very interesting.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, M.P., and Alderman Crowe were present. Mr. Gordon moved a vote of thanks to the Colonel for some very interesting information about Australia he had given in his lecture.

Adjutant Smith moved a vote of thanks to His Worship Mayor Turner, who so ably piloted the programme through. The service was brought to a close by the singing of the Doxology.

Monday brought in a number of Army officers from the outside corps for conference by Brigadier Moore at 8 p.m. The Temple Band and Songsters gave a musical festival for the visitors which was much appreciated. Colonel Powley's services were a great success. He was very much impressed with the local organization and the clever musicians and also the great plant we have in the city. The new Chief is a very clever teacher and also a clever speaker. He found a very warm spot in the hearts of the local members before leaving the city.



COMMISSIONER CHARLES SOWTON, who is the executive head of The Salvation Army's activities in Canada East, from Port Arthur to the Atlantic and Bermuda. In order that the Army may continue its welfare against poverty, sickness and distress the Annual Self-Denial Appeal for new "working capital" is now being held throughout this Territory.

LIFE'S FRAGRANCES.

There are dear lives that like rare gardens tended
By loving hands, or like sweet dells in spring
Enrich life's atmosphere with fragrance blended,
In honor of their King.

There are bright homes wherein the fragrant essence
Of love and service gladdens and makes fair,
And entering, one feels the gracious presence
Of Christ, the Savious there.

No matter if those lives be great or lowly,
No matter on what ways those homes be found,
Where Christ's sweet spirit enters and makes holy,
Life's fragrances abound.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S PRAYER.

This little prayer written in her own hand in a small prayer-book belonging to Queen Elizabeth:

May I so rule others with my sceptre that I govern myself by Thy word. In guiding the State may reason so dominate the mind, faith dominate reason, Thy grace dominate faith, that nothing may please me which is displeasing to Thee.

STATES TO BUILD OVERSIZE CRUISER

British Government is Aware That the Irish Free State Will Soon Have Its Own Diplomatic Representative in Washington.

LONDON, April 30. — (United Press.) — The British government is "fully aware that the Irish Free State soon will have its own diplomatic representative in Washington, J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for Colonies, said, in answer to a question in the House of Commons this afternoon.

"The whole matter is now under discussion," Thomas said. Captain Burkeley questioned Premier MacDonald on whether or not the United States proposed to construct cruisers of eight to ten thouusand tons."

John Harris declared the United States proposed several cruisers of this type, outside of the Washington Treaty. He urged the government to approach Washington with a view to another conference.

Such a conference should prevent another race for the construction of this type of warship," he said.

MAKING MAKE MONEY MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons In Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

When building a home it is well to consider how it might suit others as well as yourself. A house built to suit one's whims or fancies may not be a good house to rent or sell.

A home built to suit your particular fancy may well prove a poor investment in the end. Hanging lanterns, arcades and balconies may give your home a castle-like appearance that satisfies a longing desire in your own heart, but what about the rental or resale valug of such a house should you have to leave it? How would the average home buyer regard it?

The gingerbead home is more expensive to build and harder to dispose of, for the average family wants convenience more than anything else. A sensible, practical, well planned house with plenty of closet room, a good attic, wall space well arranged, and where the housewife's steps are reduced to the minimum is the type of home that will prove the best investment in the end.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Earton

ONCE-UPON-A-TIME LAND

A gray rat in pumpkin colored satin took their cards.

Away to Once-Upon-a-Time Land went Nancy and Nick with Mister Muggs in his magic automobile.

They rode over seven hills of seven colors, and on the top of the last hill, all covered with blue forget-me-nots and violets, stood the blue castle of Cinderella and her prince.

The little car stopped at the front door of the palace and a gray mouse in pumpkin-colored velvet let them in.

A gray rat in pumpkin-colored satin took their cards on a card tray and said he would tell the queen that they were there, also the prince, who was now called King Charming instead of Prince Charming.

They all sat down in a lovely blue and pumpkin-colored room and waited and by and by Cinderella came running down the marble stairs and burst into the room.

"Oh, I forgot," she laughed, "they are always telling me that I should be dignified now that I am a queen. But it's so hard! There!" And she spread out her train and straightened her crown.

"But I'm so glad to see you, you dears!" she beamed. "Hello, Nancy! Hello, Nick! Hello, Mister Muggs! You see, I know your names from your cards. And now do sit down and tell me about all the news and everything. How is my dear godmother, the Fairy Queen?"

"She's fine and dandy," said Mister Muggs. "She sent me to find out if you are happy, and if not, why, and all about it. These Twins just came along for a ride."

Cinderella—I mean Queen Cinderella—laughed and gave Nancy a hug. Then she sighed. "I am happy, all except one thing," she said. "My two older sisters live with me, and although they mean to be kind, they are always telling me what I should do—now that I am queen I suppose they think I should pull a long face and sit with my hands in my lap and all state. And when I give a party it's just awful. They just sit against a wall and make remarks about everybody, and nobody dances with them, and they get cross and then they scold me."

"Is that all you have to be unhappy about?" laughed Mister Muggs.

"I don't think it is a laughing matter," declared Cinderella. "And even my husband is getting tired of them sitting around croaking all the time."

"Why, it is only a laughing matter," said Mister Muggs, "because it is so easily fixed. The trouble with your poor sisters is that they want to be young and lovely, too. So I am going to give you some beauty cream I brought along. Rub a little on their faces while they are asleep, and to-morrow they will be young and as pretty as you are, and of course that will make them happy and kind-hearted."

"Oh, thank you!" cried Cinderella. "I'll put it on the minute they get to sleep. "I am so glad you came."

"We must be going now," said Mister Muggs, so they all left the blue castle, Cinderella waving to them from a window.

"I always did feel sorry for those old sisters," said Nancy. "I never thought Cinderella could be happy either as long as they were old and ugly."

PROCEED WITH NORWOOD ROAD

Board of Works Committee Hear Report of Suburban Road Commission.

At last night's meeting of the Board of Works Committee of the City Council, Chairman Ald. R. Morrison made a verbal report on the work proposed this summer by the Suburban Road Commission of which he is a member. It is the intention of the commission to proceed with the Norwood Road, as originally planned. The alternative road proposed by Mr. Samuel Armstrong, was brought up by Ald. Maher, but Ald. Morrison assured the committee that the commission had carefully investigated all angles of the situation with competent engineers and had reached the conclusion that the construction work carried out on the Norwood road last year was justified, and it will be continued towards Peterboro this summer. It is also the intention of the commission to widen Montgomery's swamp on the Chemong road, widen the Lakefield road at Nassau and eliminate the gooseneck farther on.

Engineers from the Department of Public Highways visited Peterboro, and with members of the Suburban Road Commission, made an inspection of the roads. They found the roads in good condition.

Ald. Stocker brought up the question of the auditors' report covering the work of the Suburban Road Commission which he said was difficult to understand because figures were used instead of names.

Ald. Morrison said all the information was available on "the hill," but did not identify the hill.

Ald. Stocker replied that a man would have little chance of getting information from that source.

A wordy debate followed that did not get anywhere and the committee turned its attention to street paving in the city.

Ald. Malcolm McIntyre put in an application for two blocks of Tarvia paving on Aylmer street between McDonnell and Dublin streets.

The application will go through the council in the regular way and the work authorized. The aldermen were in favour of making a test on the piece of road.

The pros and cons of various types of paving were discussed, and the whole question will come before the council at an early date.

Road Oil Coming.

The Board decided to accept the Imperial Oil Company's tender for road oil, and also give the calcium chloride a trial. The latter is not so objectionable when first applied. Aylmer street, Reid street and George street north were suggested as a proving ground for the calcium chloride.

The Imperial Oil Company quoted 11½ cents a gallon, which is half a cent higher than last year for the same quality of oil. The price quoted for calcium chloride was $38.40 a ton f.o.b. Peterborough.

City Engineer R. H. Parsons was given authority to purchase whatever sewer pipe he requires.

R. E. Ivey, Cobourg, wants the city to build a sidewalk to his home at the corner of Barnardo avenue and Wolseley street, on the south side. An inspection will be made by the engineering department.

Ald Maher brought up the question of a sewer to serve the property of Mr. Menzie and three others, at the south end of Bethune street.

The railway tracks present a difficulty. An effort will be made to secure permission from the Canadian National Railway to construct a sewer across the right of way.

A sidewalk will be constructed on the north side of Dublin street to Waterford street and on the east side of Waterford street to London street.

The Peter Hamilton Company want a sewer on King street, west of George street. The request was granted and the sewer will be carried along a distance of 300 feet to the creek.

A sewer will also be constructed on Donegal street from McDonnel street to London.

The board sanctioned the construction of a sidewalk past the new sub-station.

A request from Mr. W. Carpentier for a sidewalk on Armour Road will be included in the Board of Works' annual tour of inspection

A petition signed by a name that was undecipherable, requested a new sidewalk on the south side of Smith street between Reid and Downie Sts.

The Board of Works will inspect the site.

A request for a sidewalk on Gilmour street west of Monaghan Road will be acceeded to.

The local Board of Health askde the council to investigate the possibility of giving a sewer service on Smith street, east of the end of the present sewer; and on Harvey St. street between Antrim and Smith streets.

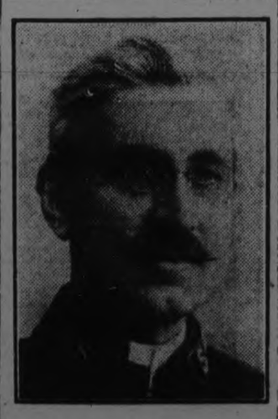
City Engineer Parsons said this was a job for a pumping station as the land is low in that neighborhood.

The City Engineer was asked to make a report.

The Board of Health inquired into the possibility of securing a dumping ground on the sewage disposal site. The request was received.

Those present were Ald. Morrison, McIntyre, Meyers, Maher, Phelan, Stocker and Crowe.

COLONEL JOHN NOBLE,
Financial Secretary of The Salvation Army in the Canada East territory, is this year directing the annual self-denial appeal, which has as its object, the raising of funds with which The Army may continue its work of "helping others."



COLONEL ALBERT POWLEY
Chief Secretary, is second in command of the Salvation Army in the Canada East Territory. His department carries a very heavy burden at any time, for no matter how great the effort put forth to cope with conditions there is always a demand for more money than The Army has to spend. The extent of the work carried on during the next year depends upon the generosity of the public in meeting the Annual Self Denial Appeal that is now being conducted.

Yes, Ernest, They Are Beauties!

Ernest Linnekamp, the Viennese artist who came over to paint the portraits of 15 of America's most beautiful women, has finished three of his canvases. Those he selected first were Harriet Camac (upper left), and Catherine Owen (lower left), both New Yorkers and Miss Dagmar Godowsky, daughter of Leopold Godowsky. In this picture, Linnekamp is putting the finishing touches on the portrait of Miss Godowsky. The artist regrets he must restrict his choice to 15, for he insists he has seen so many beautiful women as he has met since his arrival in this country.

SECOND EXPERT IN ARROW TIRE TRIAL

Admits Possibility of Samples Produced Having Been Made According to Formulae, but Denied Probability.

Wednesdays' morning session was featured by the examination of another expert witness called by the plaintiff and attacked by Mr. Parmenter. This witness pronounced the Walters' formulae worthless and impracticable, but had made no tests. He did not think samples of rubber produced by counsel had been made by the formulae, and admitted that the blue-prints or molds wouldnot be prepared until the formulae and processes were worked out.

At the opening of the session His Lordship discussed with learned counsel the possibility of admitting certain facts in order to shorten the hearing by eliminating evidence on which he did not, in any event, intend to rule.

His Lordship dictated to the court reporter. It is agreed between counsel that if there is or was a contract between the plaintiffs and Red Arrow Tires Ltd., binding on the company there is some balance due in respect thereof. This admission is not to prejudice the rights of the defendants to contend that there is no binding contract or liability in point of law on the part of Red Arrow Tires Company to the plaintiffs."

This was demurred to by the defendant's counsel and after discussion Mr. Hall reported that counsel were not prepared to admit the details ,and neither plaintiff nor defendant would accept a reference.

Mr. Kerr said no agreement had been reached as to terms but Mr. Hall would submit to His Lordship's finding.

Another Expert

Alexander Duff, engaged in research work said, he is graduate of Toronto University in chemistry and had been experienced in laboratory experiments and in exploring the headwaters of the Amazon for new types of rubber. For three years he was research chemist for the Dunlop Tire Co.

The secrecy in the rubber industry that appertained some years ago no longer exists, he said.

Referring to the formulae supplied by Walters, the witness said they are incomplete through lack of drawings for molds and blue points for the construction of tires. No testing of the raw material is provided for in the processes and there are other omission. In places they are misleading and what information is given is common knowledge.

The witness agreed with Mr. McIntosh's statements generally.

He added that to mix rubber as indicated in the formulae would be impossible and dangerous to attempt

Formulae such as these are easily obtained, the witness said.

Cross-examined by Mr. Parmenter the witness said he had made no tests but from his knowledge would say the formulae were of no value.

He would consider it very strong if Mr. Walters had made tires that had stood up under road tests. He said a sample produced might be practical.

Mr. Parmenter: "I am going to undertake to prove that this was made from the Walters' formulae and processes."

Mr. Duff: "I din't think it could be made from that formulae and information.' '

"What use would the mold be without the formulae and processes?

"It is so simple to get the formulae that he could go ahead getting his molds and depend on having the formulae and processes."

"How could you make the mold before the tire was designed?"

"It is impossible."

"In this case the red arrow was a new tire. Wouldn't it be necessary to complete the design before making the molds?"

"Certainly."

Making automobile tire stock is like making pies, the witness said. With the same ingredients some cooks make good pies and others make poor pies.

There are thousands of formulae for making tires. Duff told Mr. Justice Wright. There is no satisfactory way of giving a judgment on the worth of a tire except by actual road test, he added.

The Plaintiff Called.

John E. Hayes said he has been a contractor for about forty years. He had taken his sons into partnership to give them a start in life, and to give them experience.

"There's no doubt about their getting experience," His Lordship remarked, smilingly.

Mr. Hayes said after seeing the advertisement for tenders for the Red Arrow Tires factory, he called in the office on George Street, and saw Mr. Walters. He was given plans and specifications from which he figured his tender. On the day after his tender was put in he was notified in writing by Mr. Turner that the tender had been accepted. This letter had disappeared during the course of a Court action, and search was made, but it could not be found.

Describing the beginning of operations and the turning of the first sod, Mr. Hayes said all he heard was "rush, rush." There was a penalty of $50.00 a day for non-completion after 120 days. The directors told him that Walters was manager for the company.

A severe frost happened, and Hayes went to see Walters about it. A formal contract has not been mentioned up to this time. Walters told him to use brick for the foundation instead of concrete, saying, "We have lots of money." He figured it would cost $8,000 or $8,500, but Hayes proposed he should get $3,500 and the company would furnish the brick up to the foundation top. Walters said he would have to see the board, and two days later he reported to Hayes that the board was satisfied.

Mr. Hayes refused to enter a contract with the Standard Steel Construction Company until he had a formal contract with the Red Arrow Tires Company.

This was never completed, since the contractor could not agree to deposit $30,000 security in view of his experiences with Mr. Walters. A separate guarantee was given.

KINGSTON FINANCE FUNDS SHOWS $5,000 SHORTAGE

KINGSTON, Ont., April 30. — (Canadian Press.)—Announcement that there is a shortage of funds to the extent of $5,000 in the finances of the Council of Kingston Township has caused a big sensation and official report of A. H. Muir, city auditor, who is working on the books, is anxiously awaited. It is believed his report will be ready for the Council early next week. The tax collectors roll for the year 1920, which the Council asked to be turned over, has reached the hands of Mr. Muir.

Although there are all kinds of rumors, nothing will be done about trying to collect the amount reported to be short until Mr. Muir finishes his audit and makes his official report.

GOVERNMENT MAN COLLECTING FISH SPAWN IN OMEMEE

Fish Hatchery Representative Has Been Busy for the Last Week Collecting Spawn to Send to Hatcheries.

OMEMEE, April 30.—An employee of the Government Fish Hatchery has been busily engaged for the past week in Omemee collecting spawn which will be sent to the fish hatcheries.

An item which will be of much interest to sportsmen of this district is the fact that Mr. R. J. Patterson, M.P.P., has been instrumental in securing 30,000 pickeral, which will be placed in the Pigeon River. Two years ago, Mr. F. G. Sandy, ex-M.P.P., had 20,000 black bass placed in the pond. In about five years hence the already far-famed Pigeon River fishing grounds should be bigger and better than ever.

The funeral of the late Joseph Gardiner, which was largely attended, was held on Saturday afternoon from his late residence on the Junction Road. The service, which was very impressive, was in charge of Rev. E. W. Rowland, pastor of the Methodist Chureh, assisted by Rev. J. A. Black, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The deceased had reached the age of seventy-two years. Several years ago, while drawing in hay, Mr. Gardiner met with a serious injury. Having unloaded the hay, he was standing in the back of the waggon when the team suddenly moved forward, throwing Mr. Gardiner out on his head. The injury sustained at that time caused considerable suffering from which he never fully recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner moved to Omemee from their farm home about two years ago. His son, Ira, and wife having resided with them since fall. Deceased was highly esteemed by a large circle of friends.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving husband, father, and brother are the sorrowing widow and one son, Ira, three brothers—Jonathan, of Edmonton, Frank and Thomas of Mount Pleasant; and three sisters—Mrs. Best and Mrs. Hexton, of Mount Pleasant; Mrs. W. J. Jones, of Emily; one sister, Mrs. Jos. Shields, having predeceased him some years ago.

The remains were tenderly borne to their last resting-place in Emily cemetery by six nephews—Harold Bradley, Hubert Gardiner, Joe Shields, Melville Jones, Hiram Best and Austin Best.

Among those from a distance who attended the funeral were:—Mr. and Mrs. R. Gardiner, Peterborough; Mr. Thompson, Lindsay; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Gainor and Mrs. Carr, Ballyduff; Mrs. O'Brien and son, Brunswick, Mr. and Mrs. L. Fallis, Franklin; Mr. F. Thompson and daughter, Franklin.

POST OFFICE SAVINGS BANK.

$25 May be Withdrawn on Demand.

The Post Office Department has made arrangements and issued instructions to Postmasters of Savings Bank offices to permit or direct withdrawals by Savings Band depositors from the Post Office of any sum up to $25 without having to make application to the Department at Ottawa, as has been the practice since the Post Office Savings Bank was established in 1868.

The Post Office Savings Bank provides special facilities for depositing money. When an account is opened at any office, the depositor is given a pass-book, and subsequent transactions can be made at any of the other Savings Bank offices in Canada without the depositor being required to transfer his account. This is a great convenience to itinerant depositors, but it is the principal reason why, as a measure of safety, it has been considered necessary that withdrawals should be made through the head office, where all depositors' ledger accounts are kept, in order that all applications can be checked against the accounts of the several postmasters whose entries appear in the pass-books.

Postmasters are warned that withdrawals on demand are only to be paid to persons well known at the Post Office, or who can produce positive identification.

The experience of the Department has been that the strongest safeguards have to be taken against impersonation, sometimes attempted by theft of a pass-book and false entries of which the postmaster, to whom the book is presented, can have no knowledge. For this reason the amount that can be withdrawn on demand is limited to $25, which will meet cases where depositors require small sums for immediate use.

In Great Britain, where savings bank deposits are received on the same plan as in Canada, the amount that can be withdrawn on demand is limited to $1. Australia allows $5 — approximately the same amount as Canada.

WALTER NEWTON WINS DECISION IN SECOND ENCOUNTER WITH BUFF

Three Fast Rounds Dazzled Fans At Second night Of City Championships. —L. Minnecola Defeated O'Donnel of Toronto In Close Bout.

OTHER RESULTS.

In a bout at the P.A.A.A. Smoker last night between Willie Buff of Rochester and Walter Newton of the Illinois Boxing Club, Chicago, that was no love affair and the latter was awarded the decision after he had demonstrated with the aid of his opponent Willie Buff three of the fastest rounds ever seen in Peterborough.

Buff was forced to the limit in every round and in the third Newton landed several lefts and rights to the head that weakened him a great deal.

Newton's style of boxing last night was practically the opposite to what he used on Monday night and although he worked in close several times and punished Buff severely with his quick trip-hammer punches to the body, he stayed mostly to the open style of boxing and forcing the fight. Buff showed the fans several times last night how hard he could really hit but his punches appeared to have little effect on the chubby Newton who came back for more each time and chased Buff into the ropes or the corner to send home his rights and lefts in quick succession. Buff's record is still a magnificent one of 152 wins out ot 156 bouts but Newton deserves the credit for two of Buff's defeats.

Newton reported yesterday that after the fight last night Buff said that if he had another chance at Newton he would make short work of him and that he accepted the challenge in order to show the fans whether Buff was the best man or not.

When the combat was over Newton was smiling from ear to ear and none the worse of the mix-up, while Buff appeared to take the defeat to heart and had nothing to say while Newton remarked that the fans ought to be satisfied that there was no fake about his win on Monday night which was rumored about the town.

Newton who has only been in the States for a short time will represent Canada at the Olympic boxing events, while Buff may also represent the United States. If these two boys lock horns at the Olympic games, another whirlwind bout is assured and if Newton keeps in shape he will no doubt give Buff the battle of his life. Wilfred Jones refereed this bout.

Awarded to Minnecola.

O'Donnell of St. Helen's Club of Toronto put up a good bout against Leonard Minnecola in the 125-pound class. Minnecola was the aggressor most of the way but O'Donnell, who is very fast on his feet, gave Minnecola some trying moments. The bout was very even in the first round but Minnecola had the best of the second and O'Donnell had the third round, especially in the latter two minutes, most of his own way. Both boxers were cool throughout and their bout was more scientific than a slugging match. Minnecola used his left to good advantage and clinched in the right time while O'Donnell appeared to be satisfied to land the odd punch and keep out of the way of Minnecola the rest of the time. Three times in the last round O'Donnell landed clean lefts to Minnecola's jaw that stopped him for the time being. Minnecola finished up strong but it would have been much better if an extra round had been called for, instead of awarding the bout to Minnecola as the boys fought gamely and evenly throughout.

O'Donnell has appeared here several times before this year and in each case he has put on a good show and has always fought a good clean battle.

Wilfred Jones, instructor of the P.A.A.A. boxers put on an exhibition bout with Lorne Coombe in which the fans were shown some clever work by both participants. Jones was much the heavier and taller but his plucky opponent stood up well against him.

City Championships.

The City Championship bouts that were fought last night were by far the best seen this year in the G.W.V.A. Hall. All the boys showed great improvements over their former appearances and Instructor Jones and his staff of willing workers deserve credit for the showing the boys made last night.

Tony Minnecola and Harvey Smith in the 120-pound special class put on a bout that was a humdinger. Minnecola had the better of the first two rounds but Smith finished up in great style and in the last round he gave Minnecola the toughest battle he has been in this year. Smith forced the fight in the last round and made a wonderful come back after being pounded rather hard in the first two stanzas. Minnecola was justly awarded the decision over Smith but the latter deserves credit for the manner in which he finished up.

Jones Failed.

"Whitey" Jones who made such a good showing in the semi-finals on Monday night fell down badly in the first two rounds in a bout last night with Dorrington in the 108-pound class. Jones was game but Dorrington's aggressiveness was too much for him and he took a lot of punishment from Dorrington before the bout ended. He gave every ounce he had in the third round but did not make enough points to overcome the lead that Dorrington had piled up in the first two stanzas. Dorrington was declared the winner.

Lynch and Woodgate, two boys of hard hitting ability in the 115-pound class gave the fans a treat of slugging. Woodgate was outclassed in the first two rounds but he came back powerfully strong in the last and handed Lynch plenty of stiff punishment. Lynch received the decision.

"Spin" Heffernan was awarded the decision over Dorrington in the 80-pound class after a bout of clouting from start to finish. Both boys were out for the honor of being the champion of the city in that weight and neither gave up hopes or slackened any until the final gong sounded.

FISTIC CROWNS MUST BE AIRED

Benny Leonard's And Johnny Dundee's Managers Called Before New York State Athletic Commission.

NEW YORK, April 29. — The State Athletic Commission to-day fired the initial gun in tis campaign to force titleholders to bring their fisctic crowns out of "cold storage" every six months, when Billy Gibson, lightweight champion Benny Leonard's manager, and James J. Johnston, representing featherweight champion Johnny Dundee, were summoned before the body to explain why they had not placed their titles on the market since last summer.

Gibson explained that the inability to find suitable opponents for Leonard was the reason for the lightweight titleholder's inactivity. However, he agreed to accept as an opponent for Leonard any lightweight the Commission selected. It is likely the champion will be signed to meet the winner of the Pal Moran-Luis Vicentini bout scheduled for Madison Square Garden next Friday night.

Johnston explained that Dundee is now managed by his brother, Charles Johnston, who will be asked later to explain why the featherweight king has not risked his crown despite several challenges.

HENRI HEBRANS

Mons Henri Hebrans, champion featherweight of that dear old Belgium, is uniquely distinguished. As fighters go Hebrans is nothing to cable the late Marquqis of Queensbury about, granted that a cable would reach the late marquis.

Hebrans' distinction lies in the fact that he has the hardest head in all Europe. Eugene Criqui broke his hand on Hebrans' noodle and had to retire. A few weeks later Edouard Mascart cracked Hebrans on the bean with a left swing, broke three fingers at the first knuckles and was rendered hors du combat for two months.

Now nobody wants to fight Hebrans. Whipping him is one thing, keeping out of the hospital is another.

TEST FOR PETES IN ROYALS GAME

Fans Will Have Early Chance of Getting a Line On The Team Next Saturday. — Practices Well Attended.

When the Royals of Toronto go into action against the Peterborough Central Ontario Leaguers at Riverside Park local fans will see the majority of players who carried the Royals into the Ontario finals last year ,reinforced by several other stars who are lining up for this year's campaign.

It will be a good opportunity therefore to compare the Petes with a crew what almost lifted the silverware last year and good enough to beat Belleville two games in succession in the play offs. Manager Solomon will use his whole squad in this battle and hopes to start the season off with a win over the fast Toronto outfit. Heckman and Serth will be on the firing line for the homesters while Royals will unlimber their entire string of box-artists. There should be plenty of action and a good opportunity to get a line on the Petes chances for the season.

Last nights' workout was marked by almost a full attendance, the only absentee being "Hap" Harrison who was out of town.

In the infield practice Cook worked at first base, Johnston and Moore at second, Holyman at short and Batten and Helson at third, while the outfielders were Legon, Wolfe, Hall, Shaughnessy and Buchanan. Heckman and Serth put in a useful half hour and both are rounding into shape for Saturday's test.

Red Tape Interferes With Olympic Arrivals.

PARIS, April 29. — The French Olympic Committee to-day complained to the Ministry of the Interior over the treatment of the United States Olympic football team by the passport officials at Boulogne, where they were badly delayed on their arrival yesterday from England, because they had neglected the formality of having French vices on their passports.

The Committee said the government must do away with "red tape" entanglements if the Olympic games are to be a success; that foreign visitors, and especially competitors in the games, must not be held up at ports of entry because they have overlooked some obsolete regulation. The Ministry of the Interior is making an investigation into the protest of the committee.

Ogden's CUT PLUG TOBACCO

The NUT CRACKER

BY JOE WILLIAMS

MR .W. JOHNSON

Walter Johnson has seen his best day and now is up to his rugged ears in an estatic frenzy of worst days, allowing everything but hits and winning nothing but ball games.

The Big Swift is in the twilight of his pitching career .....The kind of twilight that shrivels red geraniums on the front lawn and sends sky oglers scurrying for smoked glasses.

The Washington Ace is on his last legs .....The kind of legs that support the Brooklyn Bridge and hold up towering statues of Lincoln.

The Smoke Screen has gone back in a manner reminiscent of Henry Fords' dwindling fortune and the waning popularity of blondes who effect black silk hosiery.

The Big Bullet used to depend solely on his fast ball. Now that he has lost that he has nothing left but a faster one.

In the old days the hitters would just swing at Walter's whining whizzers and trust to luck. Now they just swing.

Mr. Johnson has been pitching since Pop Geers was a stable swipe and he's stopped more guys with strikes than Sammy Gompers ever thought of starting.

The Fire Ball is little more than a shell of his former self, and is hardly distinguishable from a well set up pyramid or a long stretch of the Rockies.

No pitcher has more shutout games to his credit. Whenever the other side gets one run of Johnson they're scoring in bunches.

The Hurling Hurrican never tried to develop any trick deliveries. If you hold the aces you don't have to worry about where the ten spots are.

Johnson says this will be his last year in the game and Washington won't miss him any more than Pavlowa would miss her left instep.

The Yankees got away to a flying start all right, like a blood-sweating hippo weighed down with skyscrapers.

In Detroit caddies are put through an intelligence test .....Fortunately, no one as yet has suggested a similar policy for the players.

Belgium is said to have had 164 strikes last year and Walter Johnson wasn't within 3000 miles of the place.

Babe Ruth made his first home run the other day and is now only 74 away from the record he wants to set.

A big league manager must be a good student of human nature, even if he doesn't get much chance to practice the gift.

We are just beginning to realize what the critics meant when they said Old Hi Johnston, as a presidential candidate, would take a lot of beating.

If the Marines ever decided to hold a golf championship the posters, of course, would be changed to read "Join the Marines and Explore the Sand Traps."

Now if Mike McTigue will only come out and confess that his real name is Heinie Spiffinberg, or something like that, all will be forgiven.

The athletic Mr. Kipke leaves Michigan with nine letters and the shingled silly at the next desk is hoping he at least has one for her.

Golf is to be introduced in the public high schools, but it would be more of a novelty if they introduced education.

Billy Evans Says

Baseball is a big gamble from a financial as well as artistic standpoint.

The player is constantly trying to deliver a brand of ball that will put him in a position to command a fat salary.

The club owner constantly seeks to develop players who, by their work, will not only prove drawing cards but will also bring a fancy price when placed on the market.

Selling star players to the big show is the most profitable feature of minor league ball.

The big league owner is forced to do most o tthe gambling from a financial standpoint.

In an effort to satisfy his patrons that he is always anxious to strengthen his club he is forced to bid for any star minor leaguer who looks as if he would help his team.

Very often a fancy price is paid for a minor league phenom, only to have him prove a "dud" in the majors.

In striking comparison, some rookie picked up on the sandlots at practically no expense often makes good.

It is doubtful if any minor league club in recent years got a better break in the development of young players than did the Louisville club of the American Association last season.

At the close of the 1923 campaign Louisville sold Pitcher Wayland Dean of the New York Giants for a sum reputed to be $50,000 with a couple of players thrown in.

Such a sale in itself would be enough to insure a club a good margin on the credit side for the year.

Shortly after the sale of Dean to the Giants Louisville disposed of its star outfielder, Earl Coombs, to the New York Yankees. The price was about the same.

So, within a week after the close of the season, Louisville, through the sale of two players, netted at least $100,000 in cash and in addition four player of minor league caliber.

A recital of the career of Dean and Coombs best explains the break the Louisville club got in regard to these two players.

Three years ago Dean was playing sandlot ball around Louisville. He was picked up by the club's scout, went to a small minor league for two years, then starred in his first year in the Association.

Now he is the big show with every chance of reaching major league stardom in a very short time.

Two years ago Combs was playing school baseball in a small town near Louisville. He was signed as a possibility but made good from the star. Miller Huggins has already placed the O.K. on Combs.

It is seldom, however, that a club gets such a fine break. The game furnishes more disappointments than surprises.

NEW LEAGUE OPENING.

MONTREAL, April 28. — The local baseball season will open here next Saturday and Sunday when the Montreal Royals, of the Quebec, Ontario and Vermont baseball league, will play an exhibition double header, against the Royal Giants, a colored team from New York.

Manager Pete Farrand, of Canadiens, the other local team in the league, has sent out word to his players, numbering between 25 and 30, to be in Montreal next Thursday morning to commence work.

PITCHER FINED $500.00

DETROIT, Mich., April 29.—Mike Cvengros, pitcher of the Chicago White Sox, has been fined $200, by Manager Evers, for deliberately walking out of the box on Saturday's game with the Detroit Tigers, it was revealed to-day. Cvengros refused to pitch after the Tigers had scored five runs off his delivery, walked out of the box, and went to the club's hotel quarters here, it was learned.

QUESTIONS

1. Can the pitcher get on the rubber without having the ball in his possession?

2. When a balk is called, what are the rights of a base runner? Can a runner score from third?

3. When a fielder is making a play on a batted ball, who has the right of way, fielder or base runner?

ANSWERS

1. The pitcher commits a balk when he gets on the rubber without having the ball in his possession.

2. All base runners have the right to advance one base when a balk is called. A runner on third most certainly has the right to score.

3. The fielder always has the right of way when making a play on a batted ball. The base runner must avoid a collission or be called out for so doing.

Zev Was Decisively Beaten In First Race.

NEW YORK, April 30.—Making his first appearance under colors as a four-year old, Zev, the Rancocas Stable's thoroughbred champion of 1923 and greatest money winner of all time, was decisively beaten yesterday by St. James, George D. Widener 'scrack three year old colt, in the $6,000 Paumonok Handicap at Jamaica Track, opening features of the nictropolitan racing season. The time was 1.11 3-5 for six furlongs.

Zev, riduen by Earl Sande, made a gallant bid for victory, but the advantage of eighteen pounds in weight which the Rancocas star conceded, proved too great a handicap.

PETERBORO ORCHESTRA WON THREE PRIZES AT MUSICAL COMPETITION

Two First Prizes and One Second Awarded to Local Aggregation — A Close Run for the Major Event.

(By Jeannette.)

At the second annual competitive Festival of the Ontario Musical Association, the Peterborough Orchestra competed during a strenuous day in three events at Massey Hall yesterday, one in the evening and two in the afternoon, and succeeded in capturing two first prizes and one second.

In Class 103, for amateur orchestras (belonging to a conservatory or similar organization) Peterboro received the first award, of challenge shield, and certificate, with gold medal to the conductor. Mr. R. Gliddon; in Class 101, for a Sunday school orchestra of forty players, another challenge shield, the R. W. Eaton award, and certificate, with gold medal to Mr. Gliddon; and in Class 104, for a Symphony orchestra, the second prize of certificate, and silver medal to Mr. Gliddon.

The evening award for Symphony orchestras, was very close, Peterboro losing first place by only three marks. The overture "Fidelio," was the test piece.

Riverdale Symphony Orchestra, of Toronto, with A. M. Cifonna as conductor, received 80 points. Peterboro orchestra 77, and the Harmony Masonic Symphony Orchestra of Toronto, 56 points. The decision of the adjudicator, Mr. James Lyon, with regard to the three, was itneresting. Of the Riverdale aggregation he said "Good, strong, effective opening. Lacking in dynamio continuity, and wood wind late and not clear. Brass rough in forte and lacking in intonation. Rhythm strong and generally pleasing.'

Of the Harmony orchestra that came third in line: "Opening bars lack precision. Horns uncertain at the adagio and climax not realized. Lower parts lack sonority and accuracy. Very faulty intonation. Allegro slow and lacking in vitality. No real live graduation of tone. Flute uncertain and 'cello lost courage. Much wrong chording."

Of Peterboro orchestra: "Wood wind intonation faulty in the second adagio passage. Much faulty oboe intonation. The allegro taken at a satisfactory pace and the spirit of the presto well realized."

Appearing first as the orchestra of the Peterboro Conservatory of Music, in the afternoon the amateur orchestra section was played. This is a new section included in the programme this year, at the request of Mr. Gliddon, and the Challenge Shield, which constitutes the first prize, was donated by the Teachers' Association of the Peterboro Conservatory of Music, so that the Peterboro Orchestra becomes possessors for the first year, at least, of an award originating in the parent institution.

In this class they were given 86 points by the adjudicator, and their opponents, an orchestra from the Toronto aMnual Training School, conducted by Mr. J. H. Housego, received 77 points. There were only two entries in this section, but the Toronto Manual Training School competitors, in a group of alert, careful players, all youths of the 'teen age, whose work showed long and careful practice. They were outclassed in every particular, however, by the local organization, whose fame had apparently preceded them for they received a round of applause on their appearance. The pronouncement of the adjudicator on the Peterboro orchestra, which was in full strength for this event, was as follows:

"Crisp opening. Clear-cut phrasing and free, satisfactory rhythm. The balance is good, and there is rich tone in the forte passages. Dynamics might have been more in evidence, but it was a good, full performance." The decision was greeted with another round of the applause which followed the local orchestra's rendition of the popular "Lustspiel Overture," the test-piece in this section.

In contrast to the melody of the first selection, was the more difficult number which awaited the local players in their second appearance, competing in the Sunday school orchestra section, with a maximum of forty members, including the conductor. As Trinity Sunday school orchestra of Peterboro the local players had clever opponents in the Askin street Methodist Sunday school orchestra of London, Ont., conducted by Jas. H. Smith, Mus. Doc. This orchestra, earlier in the afternoon, had for the second time, captured the first prize in a Sunday school orchestra of twenty members, playing against Cobourg Methodist Sunday school organization, and were a group of skilful performers, with a smooth-toned melodious style, that won them much applause. A popular member of this orchestra, playing first violin, was Mr. Frank Whitehouse, resident for three months, now in London.

In this section London received 79 marks, and Peterboro 86, once again duplicating the previous total. The test piece, the overture, "Merry Wives of Windsor, was a more difficult selection, and required an intensive, careful type of delivery.

The judge's comment on the second selection as played by the Peterboro musicians, was as follows:

"Very good opening. Oboe tonality uncertain. Phrasing and accentuation well managed. Some faulty chording in one section, but it was an interesting performance and well played."

Mr. Lyon commende to both orchestras a consideration of the effectiveness of the "e n anima" style of orchestral treatment, which he said meant "with soul and feeling."

To those who are not familiar with the manner of conducting these big contests, a word of explanation might be interesting. The dignified expanse of Massey Hall, with its seating capacity of five thousand and its two encircling upper galleries, amphitheatre-like, is well suited to such contests. The stage itself is a wide platform without curtains, and at the rear are tiers of steps supporting a hundred or more folding chairs to accommodate an overflow audience. A grand piano is placed at the left and at the right, near, are curtained entrance, a desk and chairs, and typewriter. The dark oak wainscoting which rises to a height on the back wall, is pierced overhead with rows of invisible lights, whose dim, downward radiance gives a a sort of cathedral atmosphere to the interior.

But there is nothing solemn about the occasion this week. Whether to inspire the various amateur performers with a lack of self-consciousness or to obviate stage fright, is not announced but there is a feeling of camraderie and good fellowship about the whole thing that makes it quite the reverse of awe-inspiring. On the stage, the adjudicator walks to and fro, giving his judgments, and the reasons thereof, or filling in the pauses in the programme with extempore reminiscences gathered from a long musical career. A little talk on the music of the Isle of Man filled in a gap in yesterday's programme. Occasionally he exchanges comment with friends in the orchestra seats. Behind him, the genial and busy secretary, Mr. J. S. Atkinson, director of the Canadian bureau for the Advancement of Music, chats in a low tone with his asistant at the desk, a young lady who changes the number of the announcement blackboard, or he intercepts the arriving or departing contestants with a kindly hand-shake. Near the curtains at the rear gather the coming aspirants, or they troop out of the side entrance to join friends at the left of the house. It is all very informal and pleasant, at least, in the afternoon, the evening sessions are quite dignified and is calculated to remove any feeling of nervousness on the part of young performers. The different contestants are summoned by a tinkling bell.

The adjudicator in whose hands yesterday's afternoon's sessions at Massey Hall were conducted, is James Lyon, Mus. Doc. (Oxon), of London, England, a composer of note. He is said to be a much more critical judge than either of last year's adjudicators and to be hewing very closely to the line.

In the evening Mr. Lyon was supported by the second-chief adjudicator, Herbert Fryer, an eminent concert pianist, also, of London, England. The afternoon decisions were evidently quite in accord with the feeling of the audience, but in a couple of instances were rather severe. To an unfortunate trio and quintet of mixed voices, Mr .Lyon accorded no public decision whatever. He remarked that the contestants could get their marks from the secretary, as he refused to read them aloud. The only opinion he would give of the two attempts was that the soprano and contralto stood up "wonderfully" under the strain, but they couldn't do it all. On the contrary, he wished that their were four awards for the quartette of tiny lads and lasses, all under twelve years of age, who appeared in the finals of a junior violin competition, after weeding out during the morning thirteen other contestants. Mr. Broadus Farmer presented his award of a first prize gold medal to the little chap who came first, small Master Hyman Goodman of Toronto while little Elva Cassidy of Toronto, came second. Master Willie Krehm of Toronto and Elsie Gray of Guelph were the last two aspirants in a close and clever contest.

To say that the Peterboro players made a good inpression is putting it mildly. They were accorded a generous clap on every appearance, which extended itself in particular to Mr. Gliddon. The contrast between the manner of the different conductors was interesting. The majority appeared to be influenced to a certain extent by their prominence of the moment, and to be slightly self-conscious, but Mr. Gliddon was a conductor in spirit as well as in presence, putting every movement to use and directing his musicians with head, hands and body, in a way, that drew out all their possibilities. The players certainly responded nobly. Their work was marked by a degree of brilliancy and a volume of rounded tone entirely absent from the efforts of their competitors.

They have a variety and range of instrumentation that is noticeable when contrasted with the supply of instruments in other orchestras, and they filled Massey Hall with their noble music in a manner that did credit to themselves, their conductor, and the city they represented. A quality of electric energy possibly generated in the Electric City was a noticeable element. The verve and determination of their playing was in strong contrast to several seemingly listless competitors. Every one of the fifty-three (53) local members seemed to be right up on his or her individual toes and the manner in which they worked up to a climax in their selections was memeorable. In the "Lustspiel" overture, there was an outstanding atmostphere of dramatic interpretation, the "Merry Wives of Windsor," had a noticeable quality of sectional playing of brilliant effect, first the shivering strings, then the wood winds, then the brasses, picking up in turn the melody which was phrased so beautifully. The evening overture, Beethoven's "Fidelio," was a difficult selection which did not seem to suit, the temperament of the Peterboro musicians so well but it was presented in extremely effective style. The strong point of the local players is apparently their swift, difficult, concerted music of the forte order and their soft detail work in mounting to a dramatic climax. It is an effective type of orchestration that had a wide building in which to function, in Massey Hall selections.

A noticeable habit of the local orchestra also is its close formation style in seating.

Attendance at the Festival is very poor this year, so much so that the secretary spoke with emphasis of the probability of transferring the scene of next year's event to some smaller and more appreciative centre. At yesterday afternoon's session, about a hundred people were present. Last evening say only about two hundred in attendance.

MARY PICKFORD IS ON SHOPPING TOUR

The Noted Film Star Bought 12 Gowns in Sixteen Minutes This Morning in Paris.

PARIS, April 30. — (Canadian Press).—Mary Pickford, this morning did what every woman has dreamed she would like to do—she bought all the Paris gowns she wanted without even asking the price.

A correspondent of the United Press, piloted Mary and Doug on a shopping tour at Lanvins.

The film star bought twelve gowns in sixteen minutes nearly causing a score of French midenettes to expire of astonishment.

Doug was an active aid in the shopping, choosing and rejecting with expert decision. Mary, however, had the final say and rejected many gowns because they were 'not simple enough.'

"The Well dresed woman is always simply dressed,' she informed Madame in French.

"A majority of the gowns she selected were along simple, straight lines in black with white trimmings or embroidery and of moderate length.

"I think most women look better in longer skirts, unles their ankles are exceptionally straight and attractive,' Mary said.

A feature of the skirts selected was fine pleated inserts while most of the blouses were long waisted creations.

Mary choose one striking apple green travelling suit, one Geranium afternoon gown and several gowns trimmed, "engraved" and cross-threaded with buttons—a new feature.

This afternoon she will start buying in earnest and may purchase fifty or sixty gowns.

The star explained her French by saying she had been studying at home for the last three years.

Timely Tips To Amateurs

SAYS HERB PENNOCK

Pitcher, New York Yankees

Put some thought back of every ball you pitch. Work carefully. Never give up hopes of winning, regardless of the score. Give your best at all times and wait for the breaks, trusting they will come in your way.

It is an easy matter to pitch confidently when you are out in front. The big thing is to pitch courageously when things are breaking bad, when the opposition is hitting your stuff, when the breaks are going the other way.

I think the sixth game of the world series of 1923 best illustrates my point.

In the early innings, Babe Ruth hit a home run off Artie Nehf. Then he settled down and until the eighth inning was invincible,

On the other hand, the Giants were hitting me hard throughout the game and had piled up a fairly comfortable margin of three runs, going into the final innings.

If I had pitched carelessly, the Giants might have made a dozen runs. Despite the fact that I was being hit hard, I kept plugging away, hoping for a big break.

It came in the eighth inning, when the Yankees made five runs, deciding the game and series.

The annual meeting of Mrs. Taylor's S.S. class is being held this evening. Mr. Hawthorne's was held last week.

There was a business meeting of the Dummer S.S. Association on Tuesday evening in the Methodist basement. Only three Sunday Schools were represented in the attendance—Warsaw Presbyterian, Warsaw Methodist, and the brick school house Union S.S. Mr. Thomas Patterson deserves much credit for his interest in driving so far on such a bad night. A report of the O.K.E.C., held recently in Peterboro, was given. It was decided to leave the plans for the annual convention to be held in Cotesloe Presbyterian Church, in the hands of the president, secretary, and ministers.

Next Sunday is Mothers' Day, and it is also the regular Union service; also a special "Go to Sunday School Day" for all the Sunday Schools.

Farmers on Land.

Practically everyone is on the land now and quite a lot of grain is already sown. Considerable garden stuff is in too.

The boundary and some other lines have been dragged and are much better.

Despite the bad weather, the entertainment in Zion Church, Easter Monday evening, was a decided success. The building was comfortably filled. There was a talking contest, and Mr. Garfield Crowe was awarded the prize. The following was the programme rendered:—Recitation, Garfield Crowe; solo, Henry Batten; recitation, Clinton Crowe; mouth organ solo, John Hicks; reading, Henry Little; chorus, Choir; solo, Arthur Hamson; duet, Henry Batten and Mr. Weir; reading, Miss M. E. Crowe; duet, Albert Hamson and John Hicks; solo, Mr. Weir; Community song, "Old Folks at Home." Impromptu debate, "Resolved that ladies should take advantage of their Leap-year privileges." At the close of the programme refreshments were served.

On Thursday afternoon, the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid met at Mrs. T. H. Crowe's home. The work was winding yarn, knitting, and making aprons and house dresses. A lot of it was done. No business of especial interest to outsiders was done. Mrs. Crowe served dainty refreshments, and a social half-hour was spent over the tea cups. Next meeting will be at Mrs. Alex. Calder's.

Sunday evening was a special missionary service in the Methodist Church. The special Easter Thankoffering was taken, and the trustees gave the loose collection to the W.M.S. Mrs. Wallace Anderson read the report of the Society's work. Mrs. Robert Moore read the "Busy Bees" report. The "Busy Bees" Mission Band was organized July, 1922, with a membership of thirteen. The first year there were seven meetings held and $10.13 raised, of which $9 was sent to the Band treasurer. A quilt was pieced and quilted by Band members and sent to New Ontario fire sufferers. The second year the Band held a "Sock Social," and had a table at the bazaar. They have raised $33. When expenses are paid, there will be $16 to send to the treasurer. The Busy Bees hope to live up to their name, and do their little part towards sending the Glad Tidings to other children in far countries who have never heard of Jesus.

Mrs. James Greystock read a leaflet on "A Song of Thanksgiving"—and systematic giving.

Rev. F. G. Weir preached on the subject "Stewardship," taking as his text, "We do not well; this day is a day of glad tidings, and we hold our peace," 2nd Kings, 7-9. Mr. Weir always tries to look at things from all sides. While speaking of the need of mission work and of raising money and giving, he also spoke of caste. He did not wish to offend any one, but he did think that keeping up three or four different churches in a place like Warsaw was a luxury and should be paid for. Another thing he noted was that it was not well always to give through the channel of the particular church to which one belonged. There was other work—Children's Shelter, Bible Society, etc., which needed support, as well as the church's own missionary work.

In the absence of Rev. Atkinson, Pastor Chorley preached to a Union congregation in the Baptist Church. His text was John 3, 16: "For God so loved the world that He sent His only Begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." The preacher said in part, that the ideas in this text are somewhat old-fashioned but unless we stand firm for them there is danger of our boys and girls becoming infidels in the colleges. In sorrow, sadness, death, "God so loved the world" is the only solace. The Bible begins by saying, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Study evolution as we like—God created. When we look at man as God created him, pure and sinless, and see him as he often is, we wonder. But God sent His Son to redeem. Jesus did not die for his country or his creed; He died for one man, or one woman.

The annual meeting of the W.M.S. will be held in the church on Thursday afternoon, May 1st.

HERE'S A REAL TREAT FOR FILM PATRONS

Patrons of the Royal Theatre are in for a real treat beginning Thursday when "The Meanest Man in the World" will be the banner attraction. This is a film adaptation from the famous stage play of George M. Cohan and in which Mr. Cohan personally appeared for over a year in New York City. It is a First National picture.

The footlight presentation was regarded by critics as one of the outstanding features of New York and the screen version of the play is said to be to the screen what the play was to the stage.

Bert Lytell enacts the title role, and this popular player is surrounded with a cast that is truly all-star in every essence of the word. Blanche Sweet appears opposite Lytell, and others of importance include Bryant Washburn, Maryon Aye, Helen Lynch, Victor Potel, Warde Crane, William Conklin, Frances Raymond, and Forrest Robinson.

The story of "the meanest man" deals with the struggles of a young lawyer who is so soft-hearted he finds himself a failure because he cannot say no to anybody.

He is given his real chance, however, when he is assigned the duty of collecting a note from one J. Hudson, who resides in a little town in New York State. On his arrival he finds that J. Hudson is a girl, and that the J. stands for Jane. In all towns there are the rich and the poor, and Jane Hudson, who owns the merchandise store of the town, like "the meanest man," cannot say no to the poor customers. All that Jane possesses is her stock of goods and a piece of farm land.

Hiram Leeds, the local banker, seems quite interested in buying Jane's land and becomes so insistent that the attorney decides to ascertain his real motive. He finally succeeds and brings the news to Jane that she has oil land and not farm land. By soliciting through the town, the attorney gathers sufficient money together to erect a derrick and drilling is started. Leeds has a mortgage on the property, however, and sends word to Jane he is going to foreclose at noon of the day it is due. Then the dramatic moments of the picture begin with the drillers striving to bring in the well in time. At five minutes to twelve the well gushes and Jane becomes rich. Incidentally, the attorney finds he has lost his heart for Jane Hudson, and Jane finds she, too, has fallen in love.

CLEVER COMEDY BOOKED FOR ROYAL, THURSDAY

A timid bridegroom, who has promised his sensation-loving finance that he'll marry her in a cage of lions, is the peg around which "Dandy Lions," the new Educational Christie Comedy, revolves. At the Royal Theatre, Thursday, it will provide two reels of high-class hilarity to the spectators.

Neal Burns, as the timid wooer, is the featured comedian, Natalie Joyce, who once graced Mr. Ziegfeld's well-known Follies, has the feminine lead. She is cast as the girl who wants to do something sensational and sees her opportunity when timid Neal proposes. She accepts—on condition that he marries her in a lion cage. Neal, believing there isn't a lion within a thousand miles, assents to the proposition, only to find that there are too many lions in the city for comfort. His efforts to avoid the ordeal comprise the greatest part of the comedy. Others in the cast are Jay Belasco, Lila Leslie and Ward Caulfield. Direction is by Archie Mayo.

The action is fast and funny. Whatever the framework of the comedy may be, Christie always surrounds and supports his players with the best in photography, sets and general quality of production. "Dandy Lions" is no exception.

AT THE CAPITOL

BABY PEGGY'S RAG DOLL HID GEM TREASURE.

There is probably no more subtle influence in the childhood of a girl than that of her dolly.

When other confidences fail there is always consolation to be found in the dumb understanding of a young girlhood's favorite companion.

A China doll or a rag doll, it is all the same when the doll is the object of a child's affection.

A street waif will cling with the same tenacity to a faded rag doll that the petted daughter of a millionaire will cling to a golden-haired doll that can walk and say "Mamma."

One of the big dramatic punches in "The Darling of New York," the Universal-Jewel production starring Baby Peggy at the Capitol tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, is furnished by this childish tendency to hang on to a favorite toy.

The baby film star enacts the role of a waif who became stranded with a bunch of crooks in the New York Ghetto through the carelessness of a nurse maid. Throughout the play the child carries with her an old rag doll. The audience is let in on the secret of the doll's importance in the play when the gem smuggler who abducts the child places a fortune in smuggled diamonds in the stuffing of the doll.

CAPITOL WED. READER—— DALE AND DALE MUSICAL ACT AT CAPITOL TOMORROW

Tonight will be the last opportunity Capitol patrons will have of seeing the six McQuade Kiddies, clever versatile youngsters, in a long programme of singing, comedy and dancing.

Saskatchewan Clays Promise Valuable Asset — Brick Compares Well With Mexican.

MONTREAL, April 30.—"There appears to be a better feeling throughout the west, and farmers to whom we spoke expressed the opinion that the present season would be a good one," remarked Major G. G. Ommanney, development engineer of the Department of Colonization and Development of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who has returned to Montreal after an extensive tour of various provinces.

Major Ommanney was accompanied by John Dresser, who has been retained by the company as development geologist. The purpose of the journey was to plan a survey of the clay resources of Saskatchewan, and also of various other mineral resources, with a view of preparing complete information for those interested in the commercial development of such resources.

"The Saskatchewan clays promise to prove a very important asset," said Major Ommanney. "These clays are really noteworthy, being found in many parts of the province. There are several companies using these clays, and at Medicine Hat we visited a pottery which had recorded considerable success with fire brick used in their kilns, which had been made of Saskatchewan clay. They stated that the Canadian-made brick had stood favorable comparison with the Mexican brick, which hitherto had been regarded as the best."

The engineer explained that these potteries had done quite well in the manufacture of pipe for numerous purposes, and in making commercial and domestic pottery.

PETERBOROUGH MALE VOICE CHOIR.
Members of this choir turned out in full numbers last night in St. Paul's Church, kindly loaned for the occasion, and had an intensive practice under the baton of Mr. M. B. Chenhall. The four choruses are shaping, with wonderful effects, into all the desired interpretation of the works, demanding the best that can be given by conductor and choir. Each and every member has worked hard, and will still have some practice to-night and to-morrow afternoon prior to their time for appearing — the twenty-voice choir in "A Lullaby of Love" and "In Harvest Time," at 2.45, and full choir of fifty voices in "Through Eastern Gates" and "New Life, New Love," at 4.15. These are the preliminary events, and should the choir win laurels in either or both sections—and the people of Peterborough wish the choir every success—the finals will be "run off" at 8.15 and 9.07 in the evening.

The members are keenly alert to the possibilities and expectations, and have the right spirit.

The Executive held a meeting before practice, when several details were arranged. The choir will leave, with special coach, on the 7.10 C.N.R. to-morrow morning, reaching Toronto at 10.10. There the members will have lunch and proceed to the Central Y.M.C.A. at one o'clock, for a short practice period, after which they will repair to Massey Hall for the competition.

At 11.15 the special coach will be put on the C.P.R. train, to return to Peterborough — possibly without precedent in Canadian Railway history, transferring the choir members from one railway company to the other showing that everything is being done to accommodate and encourage our city representatives in the male voice choir competition.

Practice will be held to-night in the Armouries—twenty-voice choir at 7.45, full choir at 8.30. All members please be on hand.

CHOIR PRACTICE.
St. Andrew's church choir will practice on Wednesday and Friday nights of this week at 8 o'clock.

JEALOUSY WAS CAUSE OF A DOUBLE TRAGEDY

CHATHAM, Ont., April 30. — After firing two shots through the living room window of the home of Mrs Charles Bussche, Raleigh Township, last night, one of which entered the womans' shoulder, Frank Gielis drove two miles and a half, parked his car along the roadside, stepped out, drank an ounce of iodine and then shot himself through the forehead. The woman who was at first reported dead, was brought to St. Josephs hospital this morning, and the attending physician says that she has a chance for recovery.

Jealousy is said to have been the motive of the shooting. Mrs. Bussche having repulsed the man's attentions. The woman's husband works in Detroit.

ALL SAINTS PLAY WAS BIG SUCCESS TUESDAY

A very successful comedy drama entitled Deacon Dubbs from Sorghum Centre" was put on in All Saint Parish Hall, last night, by the All Saints Dramatic Club. All the parts were well taken, especially the role of Deacon Dubbs.

The plot hinges upon the adventures of Deacon Dubs on his visit tures of Deacon Dubbs on his visit

The cast: Deacon Dubbs, Mr. Jas. Price; Amos Coleman, Mr. H. Sisson; Rawdon Crawley, Mr. H. Freeman; Major McNutt, E. Waudbey Deuteronomy Jones, Mr. W. King; Rose Raleigh; Miss J. Maconomy, Philipina Popover, Miss D. Worboy; Emily Dale, Miss L. Rootes; Trixie Coleman, Miss E. Elliott; Venie Yensen, Mrs. H. Sisson; Villagers children, etc.,

The dramatic scenes in the second act where Rawdon Crawley discovers that Rose Raleigh is his wife and is prevented from abducting her by Amos Coleman after a thrilling knife battle was especially well done. Excellent acting was shown by Emily Dale, the richest girl in town and Philipino Popover, the old maid house-keeper.

The comedy introduced by Yennie Jensen and Deuteronomy Jones had the audiences holding its sides with laughing. Major McNutt, the auctioneer and Trixie Coleman, the Deacons mischievious niece contributed greatly to the success of the play.

The singing of the village quartet, Messrs Raybould, S. Willis, sr., G. East and S. Willis, Jr., was very much enjoyed as were also the vocal solos between acts by Messers Stazicker and Willis.

Miss Logan acted as accompanist This play wil be repeated in the same place to-night.

New York Stock Exchange and Curb Prices

TO-DAY'S QUOTATIONS AND OPINION AND REVIEWS OF THE MARKETS.

MINING BETTER.
The mining market was steady this morning with the greater number of changes for the better. Advances were all fractional however, but nevertheless showed a quiet demand for the better stocks. The most progressive buying took place in Wettlaufer the stock closing at 23 1-4.

The Toronto and Montreal markets were devoid of any feature. The difference in time on which these two exchanges are operating on no doubt results in confusion to many traders.

The New York market was indifferent to all overnight news. The U. St. Steel report was not unfavorable and the Studebaker dividend was declared as usual still the market was inslined to sell of. At the present, the market may be inclined to swing back and forth and not to get anywhere in particular.

TEN NEW CHARGES AGAINST P. SMITH

Among the Charges is One That He Conspired With J. Cooper Mason, A. H. Pepall and Aemileus Jarvis to Defraud Public.

TORONTO, April 30.—Ten new charges were laid against Peter Smith, former Provincial Treasurer, this morning, when he appeared in police court to answer a blanket charge of conspiring to defraud the public. Among the charges is one that he conspired with J. Cooper Mason, A .H. Pepall and Aemilius Jarvis to defraud the public.

Mr. Smith was again remanded for another week.

Attorney General Nickle stated in an interview that additional charges were laid after law officers had examined evidence. Original charge of conspiracy was merely a holding charge, but it still stands. Naming of other persons in charges does not criminally affect them. The only comment he would make on the matter was that "the Government knows more now than it did a few weeks ago."

HUNTERS BODIES DEEP IN HALIBURTON LAKE

Searching Party Drag Hollow Lake For Three Toronto Men Drowned Last November — Residents Believe Effort Will Be In Vain.

(Special to the Examiner)

LINDSAY, May 1.—Information has been received from the northern part of Haliburton County to the effect that a searching party, is now busily engaged at Hollow Lake, near the northern boundary of the county, searching for the bodies of three Toronto men, John Bull and Charles and Thomas Anderson, of Toronto, three hunters who were drowned in November, 1923.

In the opinion of many residents of the north country these bodies will never be recovered. The lakes in the northland, because of their great depth have proven graveyards of quite a number of men. Several years ago Constable Bond, of Port Hope, was drowned in one of these lakes while on a hunting expedition and his body was never recovered by the searchers. In 1916 Lee Lindsay mail clerk on the Lindsay-Haliburton train, with his chum, Jack Laking, of Haliburton, were both drowned in one of the lakes. Their bodies were never found, however.

ADVOCATES OF CHURCH UNION LAY STRESS ON DESIRES OF MAJORITY

Three Laymen Representing the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational Churches Examined By Private Bills Committee Which Was Urged to Be As Fair to Religious Amalgamation As to a Business Amalgamation.

MANY SPECTATORS.

OTTAWA, Ont., May 1. — By Canadian Press. — The first day of the battle over church union in the Private Bills Committee of the House of Commons, closed without the case for the Unionists being completed. Three laymen, representing the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational churches, were heard and the opening statement on the legal side of the question was given. There are still three speakers for the unionists to be heard before the opponents of the measure get their innings. The present indications suggest that it will be well into next week before the committee gets down to considering the bill itself.

The outstanding feature Wednesday was the declaration of Sir Robt. Falconer, president of Toronto University, the first spokesman for the unionists, that under the bill the dissentient Presbyterians might form a Presbyterian church, though he would not admit their right to be called the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Consider the Majority.

Speaking for Methodist laymen, Elmer Davis of Kingston, admitted the right of Parliament to legislate on church union, but claimed that in doing so it should have regard to the wishes of a majority of those concerned.

T. B. Macauley, of Montreal, a Congregational layman, urged the committee to be as "fair to a religious amalgamation as they would be to a business amalgamation."

G. W. Eason, K.C., Toronto, one of the lawyers who drafted the bill stated that it went beyond any previous Canadian legislation in protecting the rights of dissentient religious minorities in case of union.

The witnesses were subjected to sustained questioning during the day, particularly by the opponents of the measure, and many questions turned on the point whether the Unionists would agree to be bound by any bill passed by the committee. On this the Unionists declined to commit themselves as they said they had no authority to speak.

Crowd of Spectators.

Throughout the day the committee room was crowded with spectators, many standing, while large numbers, many of whom had come from outside the city expressly to hear the discussion, were unable to gain admittance. The committee endeavored to get the use of the House of Commons for the purpose of accommodating the crowds seeking entrance, but this proved to be impossible as the House is sitting concurrently with the committee, and in the end it was decided to continue the hearings in the present quarters, the largest committee room in the Parliament buildings. H. B. McGiverin of Ottawa, is chairman of the committee

History of Union.

Elmer Davis of Kingston, a Methodist layman, reviewed the question from the layman's point of view. He stated that the union question was taken up in the Methodist general conference in 1902 because it was suggested by two fraternal delegates from the Presbyterian church.

He declared it was an entire misapprehension to state that the Methodists were trying to force union. There had been a minority in that church opposed to union but that minority did not now exist.

He dealt then with the relation of parliament to the bill. The Crown, he said, had the right of veto, but did not exercise it, against the will of the people.

"It is equally recognized," he said, "that the legislatures have unquestioned rights and powers, but they exercise those rights and powers in accordance with the will of the majority of those affected."

He urged that Parliament should act pro forma in giving effect to the decision of these three churches.

Vote not Unanimous.

Gordon Wilson of Wentworth questioned Mr. Davis regarding the unanimity of the Methodist church in favor of union.

Mr. Davis replied that in 1922 the Methodist general conference had voted unanimously for it.

Mr. Wilson wanted figures and Mr Davis gave the vote in 1910: 150,841 for and 24,357 against.

"That is not unanimous," commented Mr. Wilson.

He asked further whether Mr. Davis knew whether W. F. Nickle, the attorney-general of Ontario, was an Anglican.

Chairman McGiverin ruled that this question was not germane.

"I know he is a Presbyterian,' stated Mr. Wilson, who declared that literature had been circulated among the members stating that he was an Anglican.

Two Per Cent. Opposed.

T. B. MacAulay, of Montreal, spoke for the Congregationalist laymen. He said that 96 per cent. of the Congregationalist churches favored union; two per cent. opposed it, while two per cent. which were Swedish had elected to go into a Swedish religious body.

Those who went in, he said, would go in as individual bodies by vote of their individual members. So the question of a minority did not arise.

Mr. MacAulay said he could not help looking on this matter as a proposal for the amalgamation of two business corporations. It should be regarded by parliament from the point of view of public policy. He asked that parliament "be as fair to a religious amalgamation as to a business amalgamation."

Mr. Duff asked if Mr. MacAuley had read the union bill.

"I have read the basis of union," was the reply.

"Are you willing to be bound by any bill passed by the committee?" pursued Mr. Duff.

"I am not authorized to answer that," was the reply.

"You speak of this as a business amalgamation," Mr. Duff followed up his queries. "I suppose you would give the watered stock to those who stay out and keep the preferred stock for the Unionists?"

"No," replied Mr. MacAulay. "The property would be divided fairly."

"In a business amalgamation," asked Jos. Archambault, Chambly-Vercheres, "would it be fair for a company to be bound by a vote taken 9 years before the amalgamation?"

"If action had been taken as a result of the vote, 'yes,'" was the answer of the witness. He added that in this case the shareholders were churches, not the members.

Drafted the Bill.

G. W. Mason, K.C., the first lawyer to be heard by the committee, was next called. He stated that he and McGregor Young had drafted the bill to create the United Church.

Mr. Mason called attention to the situation created by the action of the Presbyterian general assembly in 1916. By order of that assembly the decision to unite had been communicated to the Methodist and Congregational Churches.

63 Persons Killed In Southern Storm

ATLANTA, Ga., May 1.—Sixty-three persons were killed more than 400 injured, many perhaps fatally, hundreds were made homeless, and untold property damage was caused by storms of cyclonic proportions which devastated sections of the southeast Wednesday.

Fragmentary reports continuing to trickle in from the storm area, wrote a steadily increasing list of dead and injured last night as the disturbance swept to North Carolina, the fifth State to suffer.

Some twenty towns and villages were hit by the storm and partially destroyed while extensive damage was caused to buildings in the rural districts.

DAWES REPORT GERMAN ISSUE

Four Parties In Nation-Wide Appeal to Voters to Support Candidates' Pledge to Execute the Experts' Plan of Rehabilitation.

BERLIN, May 1.—The Dawes report has definitely become cardinal issue in the current political campaign and with the ballotting only three days off the three parties represented in the Marx-Stresemann Cabinet and the United Socialists are making their bids for votes squarely on the question of electing a Reichstag which will yield a coalition government favoring a solution of the reparations problem on the basis of the experts' report.

Foreign Minister Stresemann's German People's Party has lined up with the Clericals, Democrats and Socialists, in a nation-wide appeal to the voters to support such condidates as will pledge their parliamentary aid to a concerted effort to put the Dawes plan into execution and while the party headed by the Foreign Minister was at first inclined to hold aloof from the enthusiasm displayed by the Socialists, Clericals and Democrats for the proposals, it has now under the direction of Dr. Stresemann and the powerful League of German Industrialists, fully allied itself with other Liberal parties in this respect.

Opposing these four parties in the present campaign are the German Nationalists, who since th death of Dr. Helfferich, former Finance Minister, are lacking leadership, and the ultra-nationalists' party headed by Ludendorff, which are openly advocating rejection of the experts report. Their financially embarassed forces have been obliged to confine their campaign to formal indoor meetings.

APRIL CUSTOMS REVENUE LOWER

Decrease of Nearly Three and a Half Million Dollars As Compared With Same Month Last Year.

OTTAWA, May 1. — (Canadian Press).—A decrease of approximately three and a half million dollars in the total revenue from Customs and Excise during April, 1924, as compared with that of April, 1923, is shown in the statement issued by the Customs Department. The total revenue for the month just closing was $16,989,034, as compared with $20,492,020 a year ago. Customs import duties collected, amounting to $9,917,774, show a decrease of $904,885 from collections during April, 1923. Excise taxes were collected to the amount of $4,549,,778, or $2,797,395 less than last year. There was an increase of $206,591 in the amount of excise duties collected, which totalled $2,440,912.

First Forest Fire Easily Controlled

OTTAWA, May 1.—The first forest fire outbreak in the province this year was reported Tuesday afternoon at Kazubajua, Wright county, but reports yesterday showed that it was easily controlled.

Both the lands and forests officials and the private forest protective associations representatives are very optimistic regarding the year and claim that with the cooperation now assured between the various interests there is no doubt that conflagrations will be considerably reduced this year.

REFUND OF TAX ON IMPLEMENTS OF PRODUCTION

Additions to the Budget Resolutions Announced By Acting Minister of Finance—Bring Canadian Seller on Parity With United States Dealers Who Pay No Tax.

Concessions On Steel.

OTTAWA, May 1. — (Canadian Press).—Sales tax already paid on manufactured implements of production still in the hands of manufacturers and dealers will be refunded Hon. J. A. Robb, acting minister of Finance, yesterday tabled a number of additions to his budget resolutions, chiefly benefiting manufacturers of implements and of steel.

The resolutions provide for the reduction of the sales tax, in line with the original reductions, on implements fabricated before the budget was announced. This is to place the Canadian seller on an equal basis with the United States dealers, who pay no sales tax in their own country.

Shovel handles and stems are placed on the free list. These, it is understood, are all imported from the United States. Rolled iron and steel which goes into the manufacture of implements also is placed on the free list.

Reduction On Steel.

As a concession to the steel manufacturers, ingot moulds, which now are taxed five, seven and a half, and ten per cent, are reduced to; British preference, free, five and seven and a half.

Concessions are also made on slag and similar material for blast furnaces and smeltting operations. The duty on fire brick also is to be reduced.

The duty isc reduced on racing shells used by amateur rowing clubs imported for the exclusive use of the clubs.

Other Articles.

Other articles exempted from the sales tax are

Firebrick, ingot moulds and articles used in the smelting of iron ore. Tipioca lap welded tubing not less than four inches in diameter for water, oil and natural gas wells.

Materials for the manufacture of fertilizers, dry materials to be used for the same purpose as spraying.

Sales tax on creosoted railway ties is cut in half.

The value of imported matches and imported playing cards will include excise taxes. This change will make same system of valuation on imported as on domestic matches and playing cards.

Should Take Out License.

All wholesalers and jobbers are authorized to take out licenses provided they give the necessary security for payment of the tax and other requirements. This change will put all wholesalers and jobbers on the same basis.

In addition to wood handles for shovels, machinery of a class not manufactured for handling iron ore and other materials to be charged into a blast furnace is placed on the free list.

The new provisions also specify a drawback of 99 per cent. on materials which entered into the most of agricultural implements on hand or in process of manufacture in possession of the manufacturers and unsold on April 10. There is also a similar drawback on all materials entering into the cost of cyanide of potassium and cyanide of solium.

The reduction on racing shells is in the British preference which is reduced from fifteen per cent. to five per cent. There is no change in the general tariff.

TWO ADDRESSES HEARD IN BRIEF BUDGET SESSION

Government Challenged By Conservative Member to Seek a Mandate From People to Depart From Laurier - Fielding Tariff Policy — Will Restore Stability, Declares Liberal Platform Fulfilled.

OTTAWA, May 1. — (Canadian Press).—But two speakers contributed to the debate on the Budget in Wednesday's brief sitting of the House of Commons, General J. A. Clark, Conservative member for Burrard who spoke first was strong in condemnation. The Budget was a gross misrepresentation of the true state of the countrys' finances. He challenged the Government to go to the country and ask for a mandate to depart from the Laurier-Fielding Tariff policy "and see what the people will say."

From the ranks of the Liberals, E. A. Lapierre, of Nipissing, came forward in defence of the Budget. He declared that the Government was living up to the Liberal platform of 1910. The Budget was a step toward stability and progress, and would do a great deal to restore moral conditions in Canada. Mr. Lapierre had not concluded at six o'clock.

Country Deceived

Mr. Clark stated that the acting minister of finance should have shown a deficit of $26,906,000 instead of a surplus of thirty million. The country had been deceived. The comparisons given in the budget were unfair. The result would be that Canada's national debt would be impossible to ascertain if the same methods of keeping the national accounts were pursued.

Farming conditions everywhere were bad. Canada was particularly fortunate on account of having cheap lands. Speaking of the tariff, he said, "you cannot promote one great industry by killing another great industry." He feared that the tariff would cause a bitterness in the industrial east against the west.

917 Industries Affected

General Clark said that 917 Canadian industries were vitally affected by the present budget, and particularly stressed the danger to makers to logging machinery in Vancouver. The only people, he said, who were in favour of reducing the tariff were the western farmers and they were using arguments which were a hundred years old.

Speaking of the exodus to the United States he said that most of the Canadians who were leaving went from Eastern Canada and the west was least affected.

Logging equipment could be made in Canada to compete with American equipment. Many of the logging managers and superintendents were Americans and gave preference to American machinery. It was an infant industry that must have tariff protection. General Clark read a telegram from the secretary of the Mining Association of British Columbia saying that the new tariff would not materially benefit the mining industry.

Personal Interest

The Minister of Justice had seen to it that the boot and shoes industry had not been troubled by the tariff, said the speaker. The acting minister of finance had taken care of the flour industry,

Hon. George P. Graham as vice-president of the Canada Foundries had seen that certain iron products were given tariff benefits. Never had there been such a combine, as shown by the ministers of this government in protecting the industries in which they themselves were interested.

General Clark maintained that the Budget was a gross misrepresentation of the true state of the country's finances. The Government should go to the country and ask for a mandate to depart from the Laurier-Fielding tariff policy "and see what the people will say."

Liberal's Approval

E. A. Lapierre (Liberal, Nipissing) said the present Budget would do more to restore stability and progress than anything that has been done since 1911. The Government was living up to the platform of 1910. There were almost insuperable obstacles in the way of a return to normal conditions, but the Budget would help to bring about that result. Manufacturers had made such profits during the war that some of them had blushed to take them. Some had turned back excess profits into the business and built huge plants which normal times could not maintain.

They had tried to keep up war time prices and prosperity. When they failed they blamed the Budget.

There should be a more economical system of distribution; said Mr. Lapierre. There were too many middlemen and manufactureres agents. The cost of transportation should be reduced. By reducing the tariff, the Acting Minister of Finance took wise steps in fostering the mining and lumbering industries of Canada

DRY SENATORS RELISH LIQUOR

Charged With 'Not Voting As They Drink' By Judge Who Asked For 2.75 Beer Under Modified Volstead Act.

WASHINGTON, May 1. —Four Senators and ten Representatives were charged with not voting as they drink" in testimony given yesterday before the House Judiciary Committee by Judge James F. Klecka, of the Baltimore City People's Court, who advocated modification of the Volstead Act to permit sale of 2.75 per cent. beer.

Under an avalanche of questions the witness declined to give any names and his testmony was therefore stricken from the record but not before he had stated in reply to a question that he himself had spent a large sum of money in Washington entertaining members of Congress, diplomats and others. He explained that he was "a good sport as well as a judge," but this phase of the examination was not developed in detail.

Judge Klecka asserted that some of the "driest" members of Congress, "relish their liquor," and that before the recent investigation started in Washington drinks could be obtained in both the Senate and the House office buildings.

'Fine old Kentucky liquor," he added, was the brand offered by "certain" House members.

Klecka said he had been on "numerous hunting trips and parties with members of Congress and that his information was "first-hand."

Besides Klecka, numerous other witnesses appeared before the committee which concluded the taking of testimony from advocates of modification.

C.N.R. CREWS AT LINDSAY WORKING SHORT SHIFTS

Impatiently Waiting For Grain to Move East From Midland—Business Held Up By Light Demand — C. P. R. Begin Hauling From Port McNicholl.

(Special to the Examiner)

LINDSAY, May 1.—Waiting for something to turn up is the attitude of a great many employees of the C.N.R. at present. There has been a slump in the activities of the people's railway on this division and the men who have been working on short shifts had hoped that before this the movement of grain from the terminal at Midland would be under way. There is no grain moving, however, simply because there is no demand.

Navigation on the upper lakes has been opened for several days and vessels with grain have also arrived at the port of Midland. The men would welcome the call to duty, but local officials state that they do not know when the grain will start to move for the east.

Inquiries at the local C.P.R. station has elicited the information that five or six grain laden vessels have arrived at Port McNicoll from Port William and that four or five grain trains a week are passing through Lindsay and Peterborough for the east. They further report that there will be no heavy movement for some days yet.

CONSERVATIVE PARTY NOT SOLE GUARDIANS OF EMPIRE INTERESTS

J. H. Thomas, Secretary For the Colonies, Replies to Sir Robert Horne That the MacDonald Government Had Adopted 28 of the 32 Resolutions Passed At the Imperial Conference.

HORNE'S CRITICISM.

LONDON, May 1.—The Conservatives began their attack on the Labor Government's budget in the House of Commons yesterday. As everyone expected, the onslaught of criticism was aimed at the abolition of the McKenna duties on manufactures, and Labor's intention to oppose any building of a tariff wall around the Empire by a scheme of imperial preference.

In leading the Conservative attack, Sir Robert S. Horne, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, said he saw no prospects at all of holding the British Empire together if the Government was going to flout the resolutions passed at the Imperial Conference last autumn.

J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Colonies, immediatley protested against the Conservatives regarding themselves as alone the guardians of the Empire.

"Stop talking," he remarked to the Conservatives, "as if the Empire was the property of one section, and realize that on the Government benches—indeed, in all quarters of the House—you will find men ready to co-operate with you in doing their very best for the Empire."

Difficulty Deplored.

Mr. Thomas went on to say that the Government deplored as much as anybody the difficulty that had arisen, since the Baldwin Government had promised protection to the Dominions and Colonies and then suffered defeat at the polls for doing it, and he added:

"But we are not responsible for the difficulty."

As evidence of Labor's interest in the Empire he submitted that of the thirty-two resolutions passed by the Imperial Conference, twenty-eight had been adopted by the MacDonald Government, two were still under consideration, and two were rejected because they were the ones on which Mr. Balfour had appealed to the country and the electorate turned them down.

Even while Mr. Thomas was defending the budget, the Liberals left their seats and held a party meeting. The meeting was originally called to consider complaints that the Labor Government had been contemptuous toward the Liberals, who were supporting them. But instead of declared renewed warfare on socialism, as some expected, the Liberal meeting hailed Labor's budget as one after their own hearts— "a Liberal and free trade budget, vindicating us for turning out the Conservatives," —as Mr. Asquith described it.

The speakers of the Liberal conclave endorsed the budget in general.

Imperial Trade.

Sir Robert Horne, in his speech to the House of Commons, said that the Labor Government's abolition of the McKenna duties was going to have an ill effect on employment. The Government was surely running the risk of throwing more men out into the streets. Referring to Imperial preference, he wondered if Mr. Thomas realized what Great Britain owed to the Empire in the war trade. He proceeded to enumerate:

Australia, with a population of 5,500,000, had bought more British-made goods than United States 110,000,000, or Germany's 60,000,000, or France's 40,000,000 population.

Before the war, New Zealand, with 2,000,000 people, had outbought Russia's teeming millions in the British market. He ridiculed the idea that this was due to any merit of British goods over foreign goods, attributing it largely to good will and preference.

Burdensome Taxes.

Turning to taxation he said that two and a half million citizens were bearing the whole income tax burden of $330,000,000 yearly. It was from the savings of these very people that the industries of the country were maintained. He pointed out that in the United States all parties agreed that the burden of taxation was too great; yet at the present time in Great Britain the taxation was at the rate of $65 per head as compared with $29 per head in the United Sattes.

Three Labor members submitted an amendment to the budget bill to continue the McKenna duties until May, 1925.

A Liberal member gave notice of an amendment to reduce the income tax four shillings, sixpence, to four shillings.

TRANSPORT THE BODY TO ITALY

One Time Strolling Playe Starts on Last Journey

NEW YORK, May 1.—(Canadian Press). — La Duse began her last tour to-day. Born a strolling player, to become one of the world's exalted, only to die in an alien land, Eleanore Duse's remains were placed aboard the steamship Duilio, to be transported to an Italian burial ground. Requiem high mass for the repose of Mme. Duse's soul was chanted by three Dominion fathers in the church of St. Vincent Farrer this morning, after which the body was taken from its unpretentious sanctuary and driven to the steamship. On her casket were three wreaths, one from the King of Italy, a second sent by Premier Mussolini, and the third placed there by her daughter.

SOCIAL EVENTS OMEMEE CHURCH

Young People Entertained —Play Repeated—Trapping Season.

OMEMEE, May 1.—A social evening of great pleasure to those privileged to be present was held on Monday evening in the Presbyterian Sunday School room when the Guild of that church entertained in a right royal manner the Anglican Young Peoples' Association of Christ Church and the Young People's League of the Methodist Church. Mr. Harry Lamb, President of the Guild of the Presbyterian Church was the chairman for the evening and a splendid programme was listened to with keen interest by the visitors.

Several contests followed which were the means of mixing the crowd thoroughly and a jolly social hour was spent by the young people.

Dainty and abundant refreshments were served by the members of the guild after which a vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Gordon Bradley and seconded by Rev. Mr. Weir for the splendid evening's entertainment provided. The visitors then joined lustily in the singing of "For they are jolly good fellows," thus expressing their appreciation of the social and intellectual treat provided by the guild. Following is the programme given:

Opening hymn—"All Hail the Power of Jesus 'Name."
Prayer—Rev. J. A. Black.
Chairman's Address — Mr. H. Lamb.
Song of Welcome—Donald Mahood.

[illegible]ple buy necessities, they squabble over [illegible] when they buy entertainment or anything [illegible] money away.

For instance, a man will walk several blocks to save a couple of cents on a pound of butter or a dozen eggs. Then he turns around and pays half a dollar to see a movie that isn't worth 10 cents. Does he raise a fuss because he didn't get his money's worth? His kick is a grumble at the film itself, not at the price.

In spending for pleasure, the public is prodigal. In spending for necessities, the public is a miser. Many a man who spends a couple of dollars a day for tobacco prefers standing half the time in street cars rather than pay an extra cent car fare.

If you want a chance to make money easily, go where people are spending for pleasure.

NOMINATING IMMIGRANTS.

There are many features in connection with the "nomination" plan of securing immigrants from the British Isles for Canada, in the interests of which Mr. John H. Hunt is at present in Peterborough, that commend themselves to any one who has given any thought to the various phases of the immigration problem.

The scheme has the approval of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. in Canada and has been endorsed by representatives of both the British and Canadian Governments as offering an opportunity to meet the needs of Canada for the right kind of immigrants, and as likely to result in assimilation satisfactory to both the individuals concerned and the country as a whole.

Briefly the plan may be described as a scheme of co-operation between the Y.M.C.A. in Britain and overseas churches and other organizations interested in migration within the Empire.

The British Y.M.C.A. will select the best type of young manhood considered to have the best chance to succeed in this country.

Then the nomination plan begins to work.

Hitherto, as worked out in Australia, this means that a person living in one of the Dominions could name a friend or relative living in Britain whom they desire shall be given an assisted passage by the Government, the nominator guaranteeing to find suitable accommodation and work for the nominee on his arrival.

Now it is proposed to widen out the scheme by having overseas churches and other organizations interested nominate a number of Britishers, a method that has many good points about it.

Here are some of them.

It places the responsibility for the type of new settler upon the shoulders of the people themselves rather than upon Government officials.

It makes it possible for each church or other body concerned in the welfare of their country to make sure that an adequate proportion of people holding their views will be included in the immigrants arriving.

It greatly facilitates the absorption of the newcomers into the life of the community, doing away with the disastrous loneliness which sometimes overcomes the newly-arrived.

It will encourage a fine type of Britisher to emigrate if he is assured of the opportunity to make good which such a scheme provides.

It will help to keep strong the ties which bind the overseas Dominions to the Motherland if the new settlers are drawn from the ranks of the solidly loyal classes in Great Britain, such as those to which the Immigration Department would appeal for nominees.

Another disadvantage about a group parliament is that a party of two members can upset a very pretty budget argument.

A NATION OF SPORTSMEN.

Wellington said that Waterloo was won on the cricket field of Eton. It would be much truer to say that much of the Great War was won on the football fields of Britain, says the Ottawa Journal. For if one looks for the source of the British character, a great deal of its tenacity, doggedness and good-humored fairness is to be found in the lessons which practically every young Briton learns in the hard-fought battles of this great British game.

No other nation in the world boasts a game that is quite so national, quite so universal, or quite as revealing of the national character and temperament. Baseball is a great American pastime, but for every young American that plays baseball it is safe to say that there are ten young Britons playing football.

Fifty thousand spectators at a baseball match in the United States is heralded as something unique; one hundred and five thousand people saw Newcastle beat Aston Villa at Wembley on Saturday; and during the past season a weekly aggregate attendance of close on three-quarters of a million spectators were returned by the English Association Football League alone.

And it is not only in football that the British Isles excel. Whether it be Irishmen playing hurley or playing football at Croke Park in Dublin in the midst of Civil War; Scotsmen, from fishermen and bay laborers to industrial magnates, teeming over golf courses that dot the land; or Englishmen excelling at cricket, or golf, or polo, or tennis, or football, the British races come first in athletics, and the rest of the nations bad seconds. True, they do

Sheep, steady; bulk desirable fat wooled lambs 16.00 and 16.65; bulk desirable clipped lambs 12.75 and 14.50; top 14.75; heavy clipped lambs 12.50 and 13.00; choice clipped wethers 8.50; clipped ewes upword to 7.50 bulk wooled ewes 8.00 and 8.50.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, April 30.—Unexpected renewal of month-end liquidating sales led to a decline in wheat prices to-day and the market continued unsteady and closed unsettled 1-8 and 1-4c to 3-4c net lower, May $1.03 1-8 to $1.03 1-4, and July $1.05 1-2 to $1.05 1-2 and 5-8. Corn finished at 1-4 and 3-8c off to 3-8c advance. Oats 1-2c to 1-2c up and provisions varying from 10 drop to an equal gain.

Predictions that fully 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 bushels of wheat would be delivered here on May contracts tomorrow did a good deal to check bullish sentiment as compared with yesterday. Estimates that one million bushels of Canadian wheat had been taken to-day for shipment to Europe failed to act as a stimulus to buyers here, and so, too, did the fact that domestic receipts were light.

The first authoritative private crop figures issued this season put the United States probable wheat yield in 1924 at 568,000,000 bushels 4,000,000 bushels less than last year's total. This forecast was as about as generally expected. Delay to planting north of the Ohio River tended to rally corn prices. [illegible]mand for May tightened the oats market.

BOOSTERS OF MARMORA ACCOMPLISHING THINGS

The Committees Report Achievements At Second Meeting and Many Other Problems Being Grappled With — Street Lighting and Health of Village Receive Attention.

MARMORA, May 1.—The newly-organized "Booster Club" held another meeting in the council chamber on Monday evening with a fairly good attendance. Rev. P. Caigor-Watson, as chairman of the publicity committee, was the first to give his report. Business stationery had been printed and distributed among the various officers for writing official letters of the club. It was suggested that the business men be induced to have their letterheads also bear a small advertisement of the village. Some discussion arose over the question of giving protection to local taxi drivers in order to stop the competition of an out-of-town taxi man who is only in Marmora during the day. A committee of three local liverymen and one member of the Booster Club executive is to wait on the council at its next meeting. They are to first interview the taxi driver and in the event of a satisfactory settlement, they will drop the matter. A suggestion was made of changing the name of Crowe Lake in order to avoid confliction with the Crow Lake near Tichburn Junction, but nothing was done further on the matter. It was thought that the name given it by the old Indian chief, "Crowe Foot," over one hundred years ago, would still do.

Guides' Wages

The question of charges of the fishing guides was settled, and it is to be advertised at $3.50-$4.00 per day. This was included in the report of Rev. Father Traynor, chairman of the tourists' camp and lake committee.

Other items that Father Traynor brought up were also very interesting. An attempt was made to get a tourists' auto camp site on Mr. James McGrath's property so as to be close to the "Tipperary House," but availed nothing. It is hoped that Mr. A. T. Neal will take this opportunity of providing his summer hotel with the sure supply of patronage that would follow. The biggest feature of the report was that a big picnic will be held at the lake by the club, the first Wednesday in August. A dance had been held and by it the club has raised its in the bank by $45.70.

Girl Guides' Camp

Mr. C. A. Bleecker, chairman of the transportation and roads committee, announced that he has had negotiations in order to have a party of twenty-five girl guides from Toronto camp for two two weeks at Crowe Lake. A suitable camping place has been secured for them.

Visit of Member

Hon. J. R. Cooke, along with an engineer, is coming a week from Monday to make suitable division of money granted for the Crowe Lake road. The chances of getting better mail service seems brighter now that the Booster Club is in existence, and during the next short while there will be developments in this regard.

The gas car service to Trenton, which seems to be something that will be realized, according to Mr. D. E. Bell, who has been in touch with C.N.R. officials, will give a much better mail service. Every effort is being made also to get mail off the C.P.R. midnight train through Bonarlaw.

Mr. Potts Active

Mr Thos. Potts, who is Marmora's star "booster," gave a very promising report as head of the general improvement committee. Mr. Potts has already set an example by buying some land on Forsythe Street on which he intends building several houses.

Mr. Potts advocated the placing of a cluster of six lights in front of the town hall which, at present, is very poorly lighted. Buildings destroyed by fire should be torn down as soon as possible after insurance has been settled.

The village dumping ground was another question which needed consideration. Instead of throwing rubbish on the dump, it was scattered far from the proper place, giving the surrounding land a very disgraceful appearance.

The Board of Health promised to do its best to remedy this complaint. The local improvement by-law, which is being advocated, was a topic of much discussion. By this by-law it is proposed to induce building operations by giving a fixed taxation to builders of houses for rent, for a period of five years. It is thought that the increased school tax and the increased work for local men would more than warrant its passing. A committee is to meet the council on this matter at the next meeting.

British Liberals Are Mollified By Budget.

LONDON, May 1. — (Canadian Press Cable)— The Snowden budget has changed the whole outlook for the Liberal-Labor relations. A liberaol party meeting presided over by the leader, Mr. Asquith and held in the House of Commons, which was previously expected to yield a declaration of war against labor, resulted in general agreement to support the budget.

Some disappointment was expected that the budget made inadequate provision for social reforms but Mr. Asquith stated that it was a free trade budget and that it vindicated the liberals' action in ejecting the conservatives.

MRS. D. O'BRIEN

YOUNG LADY GAINS 15 POUNDS

Miss O'Brien, of Peterborough, Finds Wonderful Relief From Digestive Disorders in Dreco, the Famous Herb and Root Remedy—Now Has Fine Appetite and Sleeps Soundly.

Mrs. D. O'Brien, of 621 George Street, Peterborough, tells how Dreco is helping her 20-year-old daughter regain her wonted health and spirits, by correcting digestive ailments that were making life a misery.

"For about a year, my daughter, Marguerite, has been suffering from stomach trouble," says Mrs. O'Brien. "Gas would form on her stomach and she would have terrible bilious and dizzy spells. Her nerves were very bad and her whole left side would tremble. She had a very poor appetite, and, in fact, was afraid to eat because of the suffering afterwards.

"She lost weight rapidly, and although I must have spent hundreds of dollars seeking relief for her, it was only when we discovered Dreco that improvement commenced.

"Three bottles of this grand medicine have done wonders for her. She no longer has any trouble with her stomach, has a fine appetite, and sleeps soundly at nights. Dreco has built up her entire system, and she has gained fifteen pounds in weight since starting with it."

Dreco is a reliable tonic and corrective, made from the pure extracts of herbs, roots, bark, and leaves. It contains no mercury, potash, or habit-forming drugs. Everybody needs just such a tonic to keep their system in proper shape.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold as follows:
Lakefield—E. H. Northey.
Campbellford—J. E. Birks.
And by a good druggist everywhere.

ADVOCATES

That constituted an agreement to unite. In addition to this there had been a delimitation of territory as far back as 1910 while there were in existence 1,245 Union charges or circuits and 3,000 Union congregations. Some of these congregations were affiliated to Methodist, some to Presbyterian or Congregational churches others were affiliated to churches of more than one denomination.

Only One Precedent

Mr. Mason dealt in some detail with section nine of the bill, which makes provision for non-concurring congregations. They had found only one precedent, that of the act relating to the Presbyterian Union of 1875. He said it had since been pointed out that under this section it might be possible that an anti-unionist minority might not be able to get a vote. With a view to curing this defect the sponsors of the bill were prepared to accept an amendment to provide that a vote must be taken if asked for by a certain number of members.

In closing his statement, Mr. Mason dealt with the problems of the minority within a congregation. Careful consideration had been given to the possibility of making provision for such a minority, but no practicable method could be found.

It has been found necessary to take the congregation as a unit and this was the policy followed by the Imperial Parliament in regard to the Scottish situation.

Questions began with a series from William Duff as to whether Hon. N. W. Rowell had had a hand in drafting the Church Union Bill. Mr. Mason replied that the bill had been drafted by Mr. McGregor Young and himself. It had been sent to Mr. Rowell as chairman of the sub-committee on law and legislation.

Draft Bill Amended

"Have any changes been made in the draft bill?" said Mr. Duff.

"Yes," was the answer. They had been made by the sub-committee and by the general union committee of the three churches.

"In view of the large interest Presbyterians have in this bill," pursued the member for Lunenburg, "I would like to know whether there was a Presbyterian among those who drafted it."

"Mr. McGregor Young is an Anglican," answered the witness, "and I am a Methodist."

Mr. Duff next asked whether the bill before the committee was the exact bill submitted to the Presbyterian General Assembly at Port Arthur.

"No," replied Mr. Mason, because the General Assembly had suggested certain changes and these had been made by a committee of 40 representing all three uniting churches.

Figures Challenged

Mr. Duff challenged the figures given to the committee by Mr. Mason and other witnesses as to the number of union congregations.

Mr. Mason began to read a detailed printed statement by districts, but Mr. Duff asked for the names of the individual union congregations in Nova Scotia.

"Maps have been received by members," he explained, "showing the location of these Union Churches, and in regard to Nova Scotia it is false and misleading."

Chairman McGiverin suggested that detailed information on this point should be put in by the proper officers.

E. Guss Porter, Conservative, West Hastings examined Mr. Mason as to the position of the individual dissentient members of the churches which entered the United Church. Mr. Mason said that they would not be bound by the act. He agreed that they would be outside the United Church.

At this point the committee adjourned.

One Day In Jail For Fuel Test of Blocks.

OTTAWA, May 1. — "I read about anthracite, Welsh and Scottish coal and peat, but I was sure that those wooden paving blocks, which are covered with tar, was the solution to the fuel problem, so I took five," declared Donat Sabourin, who was charged in police court yesterday with the theft of wooden paving blocks, the property of "His Majesty, the King." Sabourin was sent to jail for one day to meditate on the problem.

A GRATEFUL LETTER

From a Lady Made Well by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"I wish from my heart I could persuade every person who is run down in health to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial." Thus writes Mrs. Louie Mitchell, Oak Point, Man., who further says:—"About a year ago I was a weak woman, suffering from a run down system and impoverished blood. Any little exertion would cause my legs to tremble and my heart to throb violently. I could not sweep a room or walk fifty feet without being exhausted. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking only six boxes I am as well and strong as ever. I can walk, and run too, without stopping every few seconds gasping for breath as previously. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will be my stand-by in the future if ever my blood needs building up again, and I shall always find pleasure in recommending them to anyone needing a tonic."

There are many troubles due to weak, watery blood which can easily be overcome by a fair use of Dr. Williams 'Pink Pills. The sole mission of this medicine is to enrich the blood and when that is done all the varied symptoms of anaemia disappear, and good health returns. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont..

AUSTIN CHAMBERLAIN ABANDONS A MONOCLE

LONDON, May 1. — (Canadian Press). — Austin Chamberlain has caused much comment here by forsaking his famous monocle and appearing in the House of Commons in tortoise shell rimmed glasses, which in London are regarded as being a badge of American nationality One writer suggested yesterday that after this lapse of Mr. Chamberlain from orthodoxy it would not be surprising if "Beg Ben" should begin to chime in jazz and the speaker took his seat in plus fours."

An occasional dose of DR. CALDWELL'S LAXATIVE SYRUP PEPSIN Keeps young girls fit

False Modesty Wrecks Health

THE young lady just assuming the responsibilities of a woman is very apt to be self-conscious of her physical functions, and in consequence neglect them. There is no time, however, when it is more important for her to look after them. Chief among her troubles is constipation, and her suffering will be serious when she gets older if she does not regulate her bowels now. Mrs. J. Charbonneau, 3410 Adam, Montreal, recommends Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin to all her friends, and Mrs. Henry Joyce, Croton, Ont. says it is the best remedy for constipation she ever used.

Safe for Young and Old

Let mothers with growing daughters interest themselves in this matter and see that their judgment is enforced. A rule followed by many is to take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin once a week until the bowels function daily, and at such other times as there is headache, biliousness, ware, business and fever blisters, yesterday on energy and appleasness, in- residence at Hamp- stopped in brother-in-law, James friends.

A dose can be given in these conditions to any member of the family however young or old as Laxative Syrup Pepsin is a simple compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasing aromatics, and perfectly safe.

Public Recognizes Merit

You will quickly see the difference between a mild laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin and castor oil, or rough cathartics and physics. Syrup Pepsin acts gently and does not gripe. Increased doses are not necessary. A bottle can be had at any drug store, and a spoonful costs less than a cent. It has been successfully used for thirty years and is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, over 10 million bottles having been sold in drug stores last year. SOCIAL EVENTS OMEMEE CHURCH

Young People Entertained —Play Repeated—Trapping Season.

OMEMEE, May 1.—A social evening of great pleasure to those privileged to be present was held on Monday evening in the Presbyterian Sunday School room when the Guild of that church entertained in a right royal manner the Anglican Young Peoples' Association of Christ Church and the Young People's League of the Methodist Church. Mr. Harry Lamb, President of the Guild of the Presbyterian Church was the chairman for the evening and a splendid programme was listened to with keen interest by the visitors.

Several contests followed which were the means of mixing the crowd thoroughly and a jolly social hour was spent by the young people.

Dainty and abundant refreshments were served by the members of the guild after which a vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Gordon Bradley and seconded by Rev. Mr. Weir for the splendid evening's entertainment provided. The visitors then joined lustily in the singing of "For they are jolly good fellows," thus expressing their appreciation of the social and intellectual treat provided by the guild. Play Repeated.

The Young People of the Methodist Church who so ably gave the drama "Dust of the Earth" on March 17th to a capacity house, again repeated their play on Wednesday night to a fair audience and once more each character took his or her part splendidly thus winning laurels for themselves. An added attraction along with the pretty choruses given before by fourteen ladies was a Japanese chorus which was given with pleasing effect. The proceeds for the evening amounted to $63.70.

Trapping Season.

The trapping season is closed for another year but not before Mr. S. J. Mackey the local druggist (who is always on the look out for an added attraction as a window decoration) secured a picture of a goodly number of sportsmen in the village. The snaps are on display in his store window and while the season was so backward there was not a good catch yet the trappers are looking not a bit downhearted.

Mr. J. Dickson of Lindsay purchased the entire lot of hides caught in this district, about 1,200, at 51.80 each.

Special Offering.

An interesting and gratifying part of the Sunday School service in Christ Church, on Easter Sunday afternoon was the reception of the scholars Lenten self-denial offering for missions which amounted to the sum of $45. A goodly showing for the size of the school. This in an addition to the usual Sunday offerings.

SHOWERS NEEDED FOR PASTURAGE

Fall Wheat In the Cavan District But Warm Rain Would Make a Decided Improvement.

CAVAN, May 1.—The fall wheat is looking well, but warm showers are needed to start it and the grass growing. The latter cannot grow any too quickly to satisfy the farmer's whose feed supply is low.

The automobile agents are busy these days, trying to sell cars to farmers who do not own one or to exchange new cars for used ones and a substantial cash amount.

If there was not such a vast difference between the prices, which farmers can obtain for their live stock, grain, etc., and the price asked for a car, there would be more sold. It certainly is the farmers who needs a car but prices are not balanced.

The boys of the Tuxis Square, Cavan, met for baseball practice on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Parnell and Jean of Newcastle motored to Cavan on Sunday and spent the day with friends.

Mr. and Mrs Roy Hutchinson and little son Arnold, Carleton are visiting friends in Cavan.

On Sunday afternoon, May 12th, "Mothers' Day" will be observed in Cavan Methodist Sunday School. The services will be held in the auditorium of the church.

Mr. Wellesly Staples, Lindsay will deliver an address. Every person is invited.

The sewing class in connection with Cavan Womens' Institute will open next Monday afternoon, May 5th, Cavan Community Hall.

The warm weather has brought the suckers up. Bags full are being taken from Cavan mill pond daily.

An occasional dose of
DR. CALDWELL'S LAXATIVE
SYRUP PEPSIN
Keeps young girls fit

False Modesty Wrecks Health

THE young lady just assuming the responsibilities of a woman is very apt to be self-conscious of her physical functions, and in consequence neglect them. There is no time, however, when it is more important for her to look after them. Chief among her troubles is constipation, and her suffering will be serious when she gets older if she does not regulate her bowels now. Mrs. J. Charbonneau, 3410 Adam, Montreal, recommends Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin to all her friends, and Mrs. Henry Joyce, Croton, Ont. says it is the best remedy for constipation she ever used.

Safe for Young and Old

Let mothers with growing daughters interest themselves in this matter and see that their judgment is enforced. A rule followed by many is to take a spoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin once a week until the bowels function daily, and at such other times as there is headache, biliousness, sores and fever blisters, lack of energy and appetite, sleeplessness, indigestion.

A dose can be given in these conditions to any member of the family however young or old as Laxative Syrup Pepsin is a simple compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasing aromatics, and perfectly safe.

Public Recognizes Merit

You will quickly see the difference between a mild laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin and castor oil, or rough cathartics and physics. Syrup Pepsin acts gently and does not gripe. Increased doses are not necessary. A bottle can be had at any drug store, and a spoonful costs less than a cent. It has been successfully used for thirty years and is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, over 10 million bottles having been sold in drug stores last year. Keep Laxative Syrup Pepsin in your medicine chest.

Very little work was done on the land by farmers up to the last two or three days of last week but this week they have got down to it in earnest, and by the end of the week there will be considerable seed in the ground. The lakeshore farms are, however, too wet yet to get on the land.

Provincial Road In Bad Shape.

Those who have travelled over the Provincial Highway from Toronto to Cobourg say it is in very bad shape, and there are a number of bad places between Cobourg and Port Hope. HEARTS AFIRE

The Brilliant Novelist of Modern Society

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

Prudence Page—a pretty country girl has awakened from a brief and unhappy love affair with unreliable

Bert Traymore—a fascinating philanderer, guest at the home of Mrs. Vansittart—wealthy woman, who owns Winston Towers, a charming country home. Another of her guests is

Virginia Dale—a blase beauty, who sees a rival in Prudence, and who has set her mind on capturing

Peter Armstrong—a clever young inventor, much attracted to Prudence. The latter goes to New York, is caught in a fire and taken to hospital. Peter comes to see her, but the arrival of Bert Traymore leads Peter to think that Prudence cares for Traymore, and not for him.

Virginia, meantime, thrown herself on Peter's chivalry, saying he must marry her, as he has involved her in a scandal by having her in his cottage on the night of the thunderstorm.

Prudence, returning to her home in the country, and knowing nothing of this, awaits the coming of Peter.

She hears that he is engaged to Virginia.

CHAPTER LVIII.

"We Are Engaged!"

Peter . . . 'crazy over' Virginia Dale? Hers?

Impossible!

Prudence sat in stunned silence, staring at Janet Mercer as though the bringer of bad tidings were a terrifying ghost.

Janet's lips were pressed into a tight, disapproving line. She had no certain knowledge that Prudence's heart was seriously involved with the young inventor, but she did know that he had given balm to that young, loving bruised heart when Traymore had so hurt it in the past.

And Prudence was of the type that must cling to something, must lean on someone . . . and Janet had always looked on Peter Armstrong as the proverbial oak.

What cads men were!

Judging by the white face of the young girl sitting opposite, he had trifled with her!

It was Mrs. Page who broke the sudden silence. There was a sharp note of strain as she said, quickly:

"But he went to visit Prudence at the hospital only yesterday. He—he was most attentive——"

"And Virginia Dale was waiting patiently for him downstairs all the time. Oh! the ways of men are beyond me! I give them up!"

Prudence found her tongue. It was parched, and the words came with difficulty, but she got them out.

"She must have followed him to the hospital. I don't understand."

Janet flung out her capable hands with a sarcastic gesture.

"Oh, I understand, only too well. He's like all the rest of them . . . keen on a chase—though I always did think in the past that it was Virginia did most of the hunting. Of course, she's been wild about him for a long time, and he didn't seem to see it. But even the best of them are susceptible to flattery, and she's clever, in her way. She's played her cards well, and she's got him."

Janet took a breather, then went on:

"They came from New York yesterday on the 5.15, getting to the Towers in time for dinner. I heard Miss Virginia saying that he'd taken her to the Ritz-Carlton for tea, and they'd had a long heart-to-heart talk (bah! she hasn't got a heart, I'll wager!), and they'd 'fixed things up,' and she was 'divinely happy' (you know how she gushes, don't you?), and Mrs. Vansittart gave her a long, queer look, and then kissed her and said: 'You're luckier than you deserve, my dear,' and Miss Virginia she only laughs and tosses her head, and boasted over her power with men. Mr. Armstrong didn't hear that bit, of course, but he dined at the Towers, and sat next Virginia, and she carried on with him something awful, as though they were already on the honeymoon and all, and though sometimes he looked a bit sick, for, indeed, she was overdoing the whole thing shockingly, he stood it, and with my own eyes—for I was crossing the back of the hall, where it's in shadow, and they didn't see me—I saw Virginia fling her arms round his neck and kiss him 'goodnight' and all. It made me sick."

Prudence fought against the dizziness that enveloped her, summoning every particle of pride to her aid.

But she daren't trust her voice to speak, and—hypnotized and at the same time tortured—could only listen dumbly to Janet rambling on.

"He was back again to-night at dinner, sitting by her side. And, would you believe it? already she was trying to make him jealous by leading on that Traymore fellow, flirting with him to beat the band! Not that Mr. Armstrong seemed to notice it . . .but, then, he's too much of a gentleman!"

"And they do say that the night of the storm he was entertaining her till all hours in his cottage. I'm surprised at him for that, but I daresay she was stormbound, and no doubt she had an end in view. Not that he doesn't seem fond enough of her. . . ."

She rose to go.

"Don't you worry, dear, about that unpleasant business at the Towers—the stolen money, I mean—Mrs. Vansittart spoke to me about it, and I told her you were as innocent as the babe unborn. She's coming to see you, when you're strong enough——"

"No. Oh, no! Tell her not to." Prudence could'nt bear any more.

Then, pulling herself together, said:

"I'll walk down to the garden gate with you, Janet."

She needed air. The house was stifling her.

So Janet went away, and Prudence was left with the moonlight and the maddening scent of honeysuckle, and the passionate love-song of the nightingale . . . left to think of the ruin of her life—her loneliness—and the perfidy of the one man she'd trusted . . . out of all the disappointed world.

Opening the garden gate—for, indeed, she couldn't bear to return immediately to her mother's loving, all-seeing eyes—she went out to the road, rambling along by a little stream, whose bubbling tinkle made another night-song in her ears.

Stay! There were footsteps on the road! She hesitated, heart a-throb, again. Was Peter, at the eleventh hour, coming—to explain?

The moon was high and clear now, and she saw him coming towards her.

"Peter!" The words were out of her mouth before she realized it.

"Is that you, Prudence?" His voice was low and oddly strained.

"Yes; I—I thought—you weren't coming. Did you—did you get my note?"

He was beside yer now, looking at her with dark and deeply troubled eyes, as she stood on the edge of the tiny stream that babbled by the roadside.

"Yes, I got your letter. I couldn't come to-night—till now——"

Something in his tone brought the agony of fear back. He went on:

"Prudence, I've come—to apologize—for yesterday. I had no right to—to—do as ' did——"

"You mean, you had no right to—kiss me?" Her very heart stood still awaiting his reply.

"Just that." He bowed his head. "I apologize. I'm sorry. I know I—I meant nothing to you—but it was an unwarrantable liberty, just the same. Will you forgive me—and forget."

"Forgive? Forget? The words were like a death-knell!

"And there's something else I have to tell you," he went on, staring straight ahead of him, and speaking in a queer, monotonous tone, as though he had a lesson he must say and be done with, forever: "I wanted you to hear it direct from me—before anyone else told you—it isn't formally announced yet——"

Prudence steadied herself for the blow. It came.

"Virginia Dale and I—we are engaged——" said Peter slowly, staring past Prudence into the moonlit night.

Most Urgent Wants

There's a world of interest in the Want Ads. They reflect the urgent desires of various businesses, households and individuals.

The Wants tell what is most needed. If the cook has left, if a worker is needed in the office or factory, if an article of value is lost or found, if there is urgent necessity to sell a piece of property, secure tenants, roomers or boarders—all such conditions are expressed and met in the Want Columns.

The Wants are close to the heart interests of the people. It is interesting to watch them carefully.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Earton

THE THREE BEARS

"You'll have to stay and we'll have a party."

"Now where are we going?" asked Nick.

Mister Muggs, the funny fairy man, pushed the thingamagig on the magic automobile and away it started for another place in Once-Upon-a-Time Land.

"We're going to see the Three Bears," nodded Mister Muggs.

"What Three Bears?" asked Nancy.

"Why, the idea! Goldielocks' three bears, of course!"

The Twins were too much excited to say another word, and the little car sped on and on and on over seven bridges and through seven tunnels and came at last to the forest where the bears lived.

Then they all go out and tapped on the front door.

But nobody was at home. The door was open a crack, so they all went in.

There stood three chairs, one for the papa bear, one for the mama bear and one for little Johnny bear. The last had the bottom out of it where Goldielocks had sit out. It had never been fixed.

And on the dining room table sat three bowls. But there was no soup in any of them!

And upstairs were three beds of different sizes—all mussed up as though they hadn't been made or aired for ages.

"Well, I declare!" said Mister Muggs. "This doesn't look like much of a place. No wonder they wouldn't stay at home with things in such a mess!"

"Oh, I've got a plan!" cried Nancy. "Let's fix things up. I'll hunt clean sheets and pillow cases and make the beds and sweep the rooms, and then I'll go down to the kitchen and cook some soup."

"And I'll go out and get my tools in the automobile and mend little Johnny Bear's chair," said Mister Muggs. "And Nick can help."

Nancy found an apron and dust cap and put them on, and set to work.

And then she went downstairs and found some things in the grocery cupboard and soon such good smells were coming out of the kitchen that Nick and Mister Muggs could scarcely work.

Pretty soon they heard a growly voice outside say, "Woof! Woof! I smell something gorgeous."

And a middling-sized voice said, "I smell something wonderful."

And a teeny, tiny voice said, "I smell something grand!"

And in walked the three bears.

"Oh, there's that girl that spoiled our things," cried the papa bear.

"No, it isn't!" said the mama bear. "Where are your eyes?"

"And look, my chair's fixed," cried Johnny.

"And dinner's cooked! Hooray!"

"And you ought to see your upstairs," said Nancy with pride. "The work's all done."

"You'll have to stay and we'll have a party," growled papa bear, politely. "I'm glad to learn that all little girls are not selfish."

MAKING MONEY MAKE MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments

There never was a period when making clothes at home was so profitable.

The actual cost of materials that enter into the making of a garment is but half to a quarter of the cost of that same garment ready made. The more costly the garment, the greater the percentage of saving if it is made at home.

Yard goods and trimmings are now relatively reasonable. Patterns are simple and easy to follow. Styles are straight and plain and readily adapted to the skill of a beginner.

The wages of garment workers (which are high for many reasons), together with the cost of handling by maker, jobber and retail merchant, make a ready-made garment so costly.

ETLLS DYSPEPTICS WHAT TO EAT

Avoid Indigestion, Sour Acid Stomach, Heartburn, Gas on Stomach, Etc.

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble, say medical authorities, are due nine times out of ten to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. Chronic "acid stomach" is exceedingly dangerous and sufferers should do either one of two things.

Either they can go on a limited and often disagreeable diet, avoiding foods that disagree with them, that irritate the stomach and lead to excess acid secretions or they can eat as they please in reason and make it a practice to counteract the effect of the harmful acid and prevent the formation of gas, sourness or premature fermentation by the use of a little Bisurated Magnesia, at their meals.

There is probably no better, safer or more reliable stomach antiacid than Bisurated Magnesia and it is widely used for this purpose. It has no direct action on the stomach and is not a digestent. But a teaspoonful of the powder or a couple of five grain tablets taken in a little water with the food will neutralize the excess acidity which may be present and prevent its further formation. This removes the whole cause of the trouble and the meal digests naturally and healthfully without need of pepsin or artificial digestents.

Get a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any reliable druggist. Ask for either powder or tablets. It never comes as a liquid, milk or citrate and in the bisurated form is not a laxative. Try this plan and eat what you want at your next meal and see if this isn't the best advice you ever had on "what to eat."

WHEN TO PRUNE SHRUBS

The main reasons for pruning shrubs are (1) To encourage the plant to produce more or better bloom or fruit; (2) To keep the plant healthy, vigorous and shapely.

Pruning at Time of Planting.

Newly planted shrubs or trees should be pruned to restore the balance between the roots and the top. The strain in transplanting is severe, as the plant has lost from one-half to two-thirds of its feeding roots. To restore the balance between the leaf area and the root system the former is correspondingly reduced. In this way, also, the shape of any bush may be determined to some extent at time of planting and this is particularly true in the case of large shrubs and ornamental trees.

When to Prune Flowering Shrubs.

Flowering shrubs may be classified as to time of pruning under two heads (1) Those that blossom in May or June, and (2) Those that blossom later than June.

Class 1—Shrubs in this class should be pruned immediately after they have flowered, as they form during the summer months the buds for next seasons' bloom. If pruning is deferred until later, next season's blossom will be removed. The most familiar shrubs in this class are lilacs and spireas, the flowering or sweet-scented currant, Golden Bell (Forsythia), Siberian pea tree (Caragana) and Snowball (Viburnum Opuls).

Class 2—Bushes that bloom later than June should not as a class be pruned until the leaf buds show in the Spring. The best examples of shrubs in this class are the Hydrangea (Arborescens and paniculata) and the bush roses. On shrubs of this class the flower bud is produced in the year of flowering and not carried over from the year previous. The more severely such shrubs are pruned in the spring, the larger the flowers will be, but, speaking generally, it is well not to prune too severaly as a moderate number of medium sized flowers is better than a few large ones.

While the rough grouping of all shrubs into two classes for the purpose of pruning answers all practical purposes, there are some shrubs that may be placed in either class to suit convenience or local conditions. The shrubs known as Mock Orange (Philadelphus) may be pruned in summer just after flowering, or the pruning may be deferred until early Spring, at which time the canes should be shortened slightly and the old wood thinned out. The Japaneses rose (Rosa Rugosa) another highly attractive summer flowering shrub, might theoretically be pruned after it has finished flowering, but in practice is seldom pruned until the early spring, one reason being that its fruit is an attractive feature in autumn. Evergreens should not be pruned be should be allowed to take their natural form, except when sheared as hedges.

CROP REPORTS

The following is a summary of returns made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:—

Seeding will be general this week. Last week a considerable acreage of oats was sown in a number of counties, mainly in the south-western section. The land this spring is in good workable condition, and the prospects are that a large acreage of field crops will be put in.

Fall wheat has not made as much growth as was expected, but on the whole, it has so far escaped serious spring injury, and farmers are hopeful regarding the crop. Late sown fields present the least favorable appearance.

Middlesex.—There seems to be a general revival of interest in apple orcharding. More orchards have been pruned this year than usual, and more spraying material has been bought. Several spraying outfits have also been sold. Information from Durham County is to the same effect.

Durham.—Many farmers have been threshing their alsike, alfalfa and red clover. On account of the deep snow they were delayed until spring. Alfalfa is selling at from $12 to $15 per bushel locally.

Waterloo.—There has been a big demand for labor during the past week. We placed ten Britishers and two Danes in one day during the past week.

Peterborough.—There is quite a demand for labour here. We have received five applications during the week and have placed about 30 men so far. Many of the immigrants are not any too satisfactory, as they will only stick to the job for a few days and then leave and go to the city.

Norfolk.—Milk production continues to increase and prices to drop. Milk is quoted at $1.40 per cwt. for 3.5 per cent milk for the last two weeks of April.

Oxford.—Milk production is on the increase, but prices are low. Price of milk is dropping 50 per cent the 1st of May, and cheese factories are paying around $1 per cwt. for milk.

Middlesex.—Milk is not bringing very good prices. Some of the cheese factories run around $1.05 to $1.10 for 3.5 per cent milk. Several dairymen are having difficulty in keeping their milk up to the required test. We have tested some herds and found that several of the cows are giving milk with a butter-fat content of less than 3 per cent fat.

Victoria.—The recent drop in the price of butter-fat reduces dairying to the level of most other lines of farming, so far as profits are concerned.

Brant.—Milk production is quite abundant at the present time, several plants getting more than they care to handle. Milk delivered at the Burford Milk Products Co. is worth $1.35 per cwt.

Peel.—Holstein grades sold at $65 to $75 each at a local sale this week. Jersey grades selling at $100 to $125, owing to the demand for high testers to bring up herd tests.

Northumberland.—Very little change in the condition of live stock from last week, with a possibility of a slightly easier tone in milch cow market. Good, straight grade dairy cows, newly freshioned or about to freshen, are selling at $45 to $65.

Pure-bred dairy cattle have ranged in price in Lanark from $70 to $300, depending upon breeding and condition.

Young pigs are selling low in price, sales ranging from $5 to $8 a pair. Brood sows are also low in price.

The lamb crop appears to be good. From general reports the average will be 1¼ lambs per ewe. One of our farmers reports a Shropshire lamb of three months weighing 80 lbs. This lamb was raised on cow's milk from the time it was one week old.

Nine carloads of live stock were recently sent out of the county of Haldimand by one shipper. The beef animals averaged about 5c a lb. on foot, calves 5c to 8c a lb., and hogs 7.50 a cwt.

VOICE OF PEOPLE.

CHURCH UNION AND THE THREE "P.'S."

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—A Free People, a free Press, and a free Parliament are three essentials of democracy, and they are all menaced by the attempted coercion, miscalled "Church Union."

1. A Free People:

Government is of two great types—Autocracy and Democracy. In the former the ruler rules after his own will. In the latter, the people rule by choosing men to manage their affairs within the limits of a definite constitution, to which those chosen swear allegiance. If these men go beyond that constitution, violate their oath, betray their trust, it is Despotism, and the people must again fight for freedom if they would be free.

The Presbyterian Church is a pure Democracy. It has a definite constitution. Its clergy are chosen by the people, and take the oath of allegiance to that church and to that constitution, "to maintain and defend the same," and " to follow no divisive course from the present order established therein."

This Presbyterian Democracy is now menaced. Some of its clergy are going beyond its constitution, violating their oath of allegiance, betraying their trust, attempting to wipe out the church entrusted to their care, to deprive the people of their liberty and right to remain in it, and to confiscate the trusts and civil rights given them to guard.

Further, the freedom of the Presbyterian people is threatened from without their church as well as from within, for some Methodist leaders have joined hands with Presbyterian disloyalists in this attempt to blot out the Presbyterian Church and deprive its membership of their religious liberties and civil rights.

If this attempted coercion and confiscation should succeed there would be no safety or security for any church, society, organization, trust or individual. There would no longer be a Free People in Canada.

2. A Free Press:

A Free Press is necessary to a free people. It is their free school, where all the facts of a question can be taught and learned so that they may judge and act with fullest knowledge.

The Press in Canada has served well the cause of liberty, in allowing the people to be given the facts. Without that press a free people would have fared but ill, for those in authority, assuming to call themselves "the Church," have, as a rule, sought to suppress all that is not in accord with what they falsely call "the Policy of the Church," that is, with their own disloyal policy of wiping out the church which they pledged themselves to "maintain and defend."

3. A Free Parliament:

This, too, is menaced. Dr. Chown, the head of the Methodist Church, in an official deliverance in the Christian Guardian, June, 1922, declared, as a supreme objective of this Union movement, the winning of the battle for the control of Canada "in the whole religio-political realm." Dr. C. W. Gordon, at the last Presbyterian Assembly, "would like to see the Parliament that would dare refuse" to pass this Bill.

When the Ontario Legislature recently declined to be made a tool of ecclesiastical tyranny, and proposed to amend the Bill so as to allow those wishing to remain in their own church to do so, the Guardian, the official organ of the Methodist Church, was lurid with threats of the next election. And in the Presbyterian Witness is a joint document, signed by Drs. Chown, Gandier, etc., almost equally lurid, branding this "interference" with the "Spiritual freedom of the Churches."

This coercionist cry of "interference" with their "spiritual freedom" surpasses in absurdity anything Mark Twain ever wrote to make the world laugh. These men plan to rob the Presbyterian people of the "spiritual freedom," their liberty and civil rights, and ask Parliaments to do the robbing; and when a Parliament declines to be made a tool for such an outrage, they shout "interference with our spiritual freedom" ! ! !

Thank God for free Parliaments, and for men in those Parliaments with a vision of justice and right, who will not be tools of tyranny and wrong. But if the coercive combine now seeking power were to gain what it seeks, Parliaments would not long be free, for if the lion roar so threateningly now, what would he do when grown?

FABLES ON HEALTH

DRESS FOR HEALTH

Mr. Mann of Anytown thought of clothes in terms of bills that inevitably followed their purchase. He knew that Mrs. Mann was a bit more economical than most women, and could take a last year's dress and make it over with a few turns and twists. As for himself he wasn't particularly interested in the subject.

Certainly he never thought of the health end of clothes.

Ideal apparel is that which permits circulation of air about the body. Health should never be sacrificed to style.

Evaporation of body moisture is greatly aided by clothing that absorbs it and thus keeps the body from chilling.

Persons working in offices should wear comparatively light clothes, but should keep an overcoat on hand so that the change in temperature can be safely faced.

Clothing worn close to the skin should be changed frequently—at least twice a week and oftener, if necessary.

PREDICT BIG YEAR BUYING OF MOTORS

Nineteen Twenty Four Will Be Biggest Year In Motor Car Sales--Country Is Sold On Idea.

By EDSEL B. FORD,
President, Ford Motor Company.

Even though 1923 exceeded all our expectations, there is every reason to believe that in 1924 business will attain to far greater proportions.

More people will buy automobiles during the coming year than ever before. Evidence of our belief in this is the extensive expansion programme we are carrying out and which is aimed to effect new manufacturing economics and materially increase production. In the New Year we will produce more cars and trucks and expect to sell more of them, both in the domestic and foreign fields.

There was a time when figures conjured up by statisticians to show sales possibilities, replacement requirements and such were guide-posts in the industry and when much time was devoted discussing sales resistance. These, to a great extent, have all served their purpose. They were a part of the educational campaign necessary not only to salesmen but to the public. They are passing out as the phantom of saturation has disappeared from the automobile horizon.

To-day America is completely "sold" on the automobile.

Women are a greater influence in the automobile buying field than ever before and the coming year will see this influence considerably extended. It will be expressed particularly in the closed car sales. Women, through their guardianship of the family purse, are good judges of values, and their knowledge in this respect extends as much to automobiles as to anything else.

The manufacturer who gives the greatest value for the lowest investment must certainly enjoy the greatest share of the business. To maintain this business he must incorporate better quality in his product, for the public is motor wise, and transportation value is going to count most this year.

The market in the United States for foreign-built cars is slowly passing. The vast majority of the Americans are forsaking the European cars and turning to home-made products.

THE RADIATOR

The practice of attaching cardboard or leather over a section of the radiator core during cold weather has led to the variation of attaching to the inside so that the appearance is not marred. But while this serves to keep cold air from blowing over the engine, just as it would if attached to the outside, it greatly increases the chances of freezing the radiator. When the covering is inside of the core the radiator gets the full blast of freezing ozone without even an occasional puff of warm air from the engine. Also when the covering is attached to the inside of the core it is likely to loosen up and catch in the fan.

EDUCATION IN PAINT

Sister: "Daddy won't like you using his paints."

Brother: "Why not—I guess paint's meant to paint with—and Dad said to save the surface was the best thing any fellow could do."

Sister: "Well let me paint some of it—I can paint."

Brother: "No, who ever heard of a girl paintin' anyhow, 'cept her face maybe."

Sister: "You're horrid". (Starts to cry.)

Brother: "Oh well, take a try at it then, but mind you don't run over the roof with that red."

And so they learn, and they cannot learn too young, the lesson that will stand them in good stead throughout their lives:—Save the Surface and You Save All.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCE COMMISSION MEETING HELD IN PETERBORO

Application to Have Mothers With One Child Placed on List Not Approved.

REV. PETER BRYCE

The local board of the Mother's Allowance Commission had a visit from the Chairman of the Provincial board, Rev. Peter Bryce of Toronto. The mission of the Chairman was to visit the county board, which meets once each month and on the last Saturday of the month. During the morning a conference was held with the county board at the Court House, and matters of administration discussed and adjusted. The Chairman said that it gave him pleasure to meet the members, and he congratulated the members on the excellent way in which the business of the commission had been handled during the last three years.

Information was supplied as to any changes in the rules or procedure that had been made, and the board were told of such legislation as had been asked for and referred to the Provincial board to pass upon with a view to action in the future. Several amendments to the Act had been suggested, and applied for, such as the reduction of the interval of years after a wife and mother with children had been deserted, before the case could be considered as eligible for assistance to the children, if such were of the family. The period had been brought from seven to five years, and it was asked that it be made now three years. It was thought that such reduction, if standardized, would practically have the effect of increasing the number of desertions.

The application was renewed that mothers with one child might be eligible to benefits on account of the child. And while the Chairman did not say so, or indeed comment on the proposition other than to advise that no action had been taken from the applications received, and not to be allowed, and statistics collected in the course of the last three years, it is pretty well determined that in the majority of cases of a mother with one child the mothers are comparatively young and between the ages of 22 and 30 years and had gone to reside with parents of either the husband or wife, and with the child in safe care went back to employments or positions as before marriage. If this amendment were granted it is felt that at once from 1,500 to 2,000 cases would be added to the roll of beneficiaries. The object of the Act is not to assist those who may and can be self-supporting, but those who, having responsibilities for several children, can be helped.

In the afternoon the Chairman met the city local board and gave gave close attention to the operations of the Act in the city. Much, growing out of the experience of the Provincial board, the staff and the corps of investigators was detailed and proved to be of interest. A series of local applications, not coming within the rules but very nearly so, were gone over and points in regard explained. Such applications, which may not at the time be eligible, are kept in sight and gone over at intervals with the investigators to see if conditions have altered in such way as to bring the case within the rules. As for instance, if the death of the husband and father has resulted in insurance monies of considerable amount accruing, the case would not be eligible. But in such a case if the number of children were in ages indicated that for some years a home would be required, interest is taken in the possible purchase of a modest dwelling, which investment of monies the dwelling to be lived in is approved. And this having been affected, the case is in order to be considered in the light of an allowance to assist in bringing up the children, keeping them at school, providing clothing and necessaries. Much other detail of interest to the local board was looked into and discussed.

From the latest monthly reports, up to the 1st of March (nearly half of the present fiscal year), interesting facts were gleaned. Steadily the demand on the resources of the commission increases, not only from the death of the husband and father, but from causes that render the breadwinner unable to secure for his wife and children subsistence. Nearly five hundred families are being assisted in which the father and husband, while living, is absolutely unable and wholly incapicated from earning for his family's support. The number seems to be increasing of cases admitted for assistance, and many others in which the incapacitation, while considerable, is not of such severity as to come within the rules. The indication would be that gradually the country is absorbing and taking in diseases and afflictions that were not nearly so prevalent ten years ago. Of course, there was no Allowances Commission at that time to bring a large number of such cases into light.

The facts, in relation to the number being assisted up to March 1, 1924, and which are on the monthly payment roll for successive months, are interesting. Many cases are deleted each month for causes such as expiry of age limit, (14 to 16 years in children) re-marriage of the mother, only one child in care, etc., etc. But as indicating the present status the lists following are informative:

45 families with one child under 16 and incapacitated husband, 45 children; 1,668 families with 2 children under 16, 3,336 children; 1,124 families with 3 children under 16, 3,372 children; 646 families with 4 children under 16, 2,584 children; 302 families with 5 children under 16, 1,510 children; 115 families with 6 children under 16, 690 children; 54 families with 7 children under 16, 378 children; 23 families with 8 children under 16, 184 children; 2 families with 9 children under 16, 18 children; 1 family with 10 children under 16, 10 children—3,980 families, 12,127 children.

These figures are taken to the end of February last, and additional beneficiaries have been taken on in the interval that at May 1st the totals will read as for 4,025 families with dependent children to the number of 12,300.

An interesting record among the vital statistics are those that relate to the causes of dependency. The following compilation states approximately the reasons:

Death of father	3,297
Incapacitation of father—
Insanity	119
Other causes	336
Desertion of father	130
Death of both parents (foster mother cases)	98
	2,980

It may be noted that the total cost of the allowances for the month of February was $141,719. It is expected that the total demands on the municipalities and Provincial treasury will exceed one and three-quarters million dollars for the year ending September 30, next.

For purposes of comparison the figures for the cities in Ontario, both large and small cities, are added for comparison:

	Families.	Amount.
Brantford	57	$ 2,196
Belleville	22	845
Chatham	17	625
Fort William	38	1,525
Guelph	35	1,342

St. Catharines	28	1,078
Welland	13	485
Woodstock	20	860
Windsor	34	1,247
Toronto	728	28,585

Any comparison as to the monthly amounts paid, on an average, for any locality must be considered in the light of the number of children in families. These vary always. Woodstock pays an average of $43 per month, St. Thomas $37 and Peterborough $40.70.

The members of the county board are: C. J. Darling Warsaw; John McIntosh, North Monaghan; Richard Birdsall, Asphodel; Miss Ada Tanner, Lakefield; Mrs. B. W. Squire, Norwood, Secretary.

Of the Peterborough city board: Sidney Whatley, East City; T. J. McMurray, East City; Mrs. J. Knox, Gilmour street; Mrs. M. G. Hardie, Murray street; F. H. Dobbin, George street, Secretary.

PROCESSES OF VALUE BUT NOT NEW SECRET DECLARES AN EXPERT

Defence Calls Tire Man to Refute Evidence of Two Experts For Paintiff — Mr. Hayes Tells His Story of Dealings With Red Arrow Tires Company — Mr. Gillespie Testified.

TESTED FORMULAE.

The case against four Red Arrow Tires directors was adjourned at 11.15 last night after two witnesses had been heard for the defence. The plaintiff's case was closed about four o'clock, and G. A. Gillespie was the first witness called for the defence. He was on the stand two hours and forty-five minutes. Ernest C. Gagnon, a tire expert, went into the witness box at 9.25 and left it at 11.05. He declared the formulae and processes delivered by Walters were of commercial value, thus contradicting other experts who on Tuesday said the formulae were impractical and useless.

John E. Hayes, one of the plaintiffs, who was under examination three hours and a half, said he relied entirely upon the directors of the company, but admitted that any money he received on account was on cheques given him by Peterborough Securities Company.

Mr. Hayes reviewed the money transactions between him and the company, all of which were carried out on the company's side by Peterborough Securities Company.

There was no refusal on his part to carry on the work until he found there was no money when Walters came back empty handed from a trip.

Mr. Hayes went to Mr. Turner, who told him he would have to get his money "over there" as best he could. Stockdale said he hadn't any money. Mr. Westbye had a contract to install a smokestack and he told Hayes the company was alright. There was no question of money at that time.

Mr. Hayes ultimately filed a mechanic's lien setting out particulars of the claim with the exception of brick, for which Hayes did not think he was liable. Without the brick this amounted to $47,000. The brick was about $6,000. The company had paid $8,000, and the property sold for $17,000 less $1,000 costs, and there is now due, including brick, about $28,000.

After closing down there was a discussion with the directors about going on with the work. Mr. Hayes was to be paid $10,000 in payments of $1,000 a month until he got the roof on. Nothing was done until later in the spring when, as a result of negotiations, the plaintiff laid seven or eight thousand brick, but no money was forthcoming and he entered the lien.

Community Spirit.

Cross-examined by Mr. Kerr the witness said he was introduced to Stockdale by Mayor McIntyre. He met Walters a month later, but did not know what he was interested in. Walters wanted to sell a share and Hayes saw the names of Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Turner and Mr. E. G. Patterson on a list that Walters had. Mr. Armstrong's report had no more effect on the witness than that he gave Walters a cheque for $100 next day. The cheque was made payable to the Peterborough Securities Co. because the others were made the same way. Up to this time Mr. Hayes had not seen any of the directors with reference to stock. He was actuated, he said, by a community spirit and by the good report of Mr. Armstrong.

"Whose cheques did you see made out to Peterborough Securities before you wrote yours?"

"Mr. Turner's, Mr. Armstrong's and Mr. Patterson's."

"In whose possession were the cheques?"

"In Walters'."

Mr. Hayes admitted introducing Walters to Mr. McDonald, but said he did not speak of Mr. McDonald becoming a director.

He spoke to Stockdale about his tender about the day after it was handed in and received a memorandum of what Mr. Stockdale would do for him. There was a private agreement with Stockdale.

"Was it the same day or half an hour before?"

"No, it wasn't the same day. It might have been the next day."

"Will you say it was the day after?"

"It may have been that day or the next day."

"What is your recollection of that tender?"

"In figuring up my tender I put in $120,000, and after the tenders had been opened I heard others were higher than mine. I went to Mr. Stockdale and he said he would make up the difference. I demanded $127,000, or I didn't want the job."

The tender was put in on the day tenders closed, November 15, and after the meeting on November 16, Mr. McDonald drove him home. Mr. McDonald would not tell him anything about the tender.

So far as he knew, Mr. Hayes said, the directors knew nothing about the private agreement with Stockdale.

Loan to Stockdale.

"Is this the same man Stockdale with whom you entered into an agreement on December 2, 1921?"

"Yes."

"And the same to whom your firm made a private loan of $3,000 in January, 1922?"

"Yes."

Mr. Hayes said from the time he put in his tender till this time he had never put up security other than the works which were going on. He had had a contract presented by Gordon & O'Brien which he declined to execute as it was drawn up. Mr. Walters had substituted himself for the architect. This was the most important reason for refusing to sign the contract.

On examination for discovery Mr. Hayes had declared his only reason was the demand for security.

The contractor told Walters he would not sign the contract until the company put up security. The company never gave security and no one on behalf of the company had offered security.

On December 5, Mr. Kerr said, the minutes of the meeting of directors showed a report from Mr. Stockdale that Mr. Hayes had agreed to accept his personal bond and another report said that the contractor would put up the security required.

"I had accepted the contract and sublet other contracts and Mr. Gordon drew up the paper of December 2, to protect me until he could get a contract ready. Then when the contract was ready it wasn't a contract at all, it was all a one man affair."

"You believed Walters and Stockdale had lots of money?"

"I didn't know anything about Walters and Stockdale. I wouldn't give them credit for twenty-five cents."

"But you gave your cheque for $3,000 to Stockdale?"

"I didn't know Stockdale."

"You made the loan to Stockdale?"

"Yes."

"And this is the first time in your building contracts you ever made a personal loan?"

"I would build a man a house and wait for the money."

"Can you name a case where you loaned $5,000 or less to a person for whom you were building?"

"No."

"Or any company?"

"No."

"Then this is the first transaction of the kind?"

"Yes."

Mr. Justice Wright: "Were you ever asked to do so?"

"No."

"Mr. Turner told you that he had only $100 in the company and he was only liable for what he had in the company?"

"Yes."

"Did he ever promise to pay you personally?"

"No."

"Did any of the directors?"

"No."

"On January 20, you gave a cheque for $3,000 to John Stockdale?"

"Yes."

"And that is the very same day that Curtis Bros. were paid $3,000 by Stockdale."

"You're telling me that. I can't remember."

The witness said several times cheques he received from Stockdale were held by him for some days awaiting funds.

Replying to cross-examination by Mr. Parmenter Mr. Hayes admitted that to meet his $120,000 there would be needed 1,200 shareholders.

"How did you expect this company to meet your $120,000?"

"I didn't know. There was no reason why I should."

You relied entirely on these directors?"

"I certainly did."

"Did you tell Mr. McDonald you expected to get the contract?"

"I did not."

"If Mr. McDonald says you did what would you say?"

"I wouldn't believe him and I don't believe he would say it."

"Did you ever say to Walters, The devil with the directors. I'm looking to Stockdale?"

"I did not."

"Then if Walters swears to that he is perjuring himself?"

Mr. Justice Wright: "That is not the form in which to put the question."

The witness said Mr. Turner and the directors instructed him that Walters was their general manager, and he did not take Stockdale into account.

Mr. Parmenter: "You come here now and want to make the directors pay you out of their personal pockets."

Mr. Hayes: "The directors didn't think twice about making me pay for that work out of my pocket."

Mr. Parmenter: "The directors had nothing at all to do with it. I'm not going to argue with you."

John E. Curtain, a brick manufacturer of Lindsay, said he received a long distance call in 1922 from a man who represented himself as manager of Red Arrow Tires Ltd.

"Who was he?"

Walters. He ordered two carloads."

The account was paid to Curtin by a lawyer who, he supposed sued Red Arrow Tires. The lawyer's cheque he believed was made out by Stockdale.

Defence Opened Case.

G. A. Gillespie, one of the defendants was the first witness called for the defence. He first got in touch with Red Arrow Tires when he was called into the city clerk's office and interrogated as to the selling plan. The merchandizing plan was to sell one share of stock to a motorist for each car he had. Only stockholders could buy the products. Mr. Gillespie approved the plan and became a stockholder by giving his cheque for $100 to G. N. Gordon. Subseququently he received the cheque back, and believed the reason to be there was a difference between Walters and Stockdale although he did not know the latter at that time.

Meeting Walters in the city clerk's office, Mr. Gillespie formed a favorable opinion of his capabilities.

After looking over other sites the promoters decided Peterborough had advantages and returned to the city. Mr. Gillespie again subscribed and was present at the organization meeting in October 18.

Mr. Gillespie remembered the by-law appointing W. R. Morris, C. A., as auditor and Gordon and O'Brien as solicitors. He also recalled the bylaw covering the purchase of formulae and processes from Walters for 184,000 shares of common stock in the company and another authorizing a contract between the company and John Stockdale.

The witness understood Walters was to turn over his formulae and take over the factory when it was ready, and become general manager There was no relation between the bargain with Stockdale and the agreement with Walters. The 184,000 shares of stock were to belong to Walters and no agreement was made that the directors would receive any shares of common stock from him. Everything was settled about Walters before Stockdale was considered. Stockdale refused to put up security but Walters agreed to put up 35,000 shares of common stock as security for Stockdale.

On October 24, there was a meeting not recorded in the minutes at which Walters made a proposition that he would place in the hands of Mr. Westbye, 10,000 shares of common stock to be distributed to purchasers of preferred stock. That was the night Mr. Hicks' resignation was presented. There was no suggestion from the directors regarding the transfer of common stock—it was an arrangement between Stockdale and Walters. Mr. Westbye was probably chosen because he was treasurer.

Mr. Stockdale was to get 25 per cent for selling the stock.

There were two meeting of the directors which are not representeed in the minutes of the company.

Mr. Gillespie was present at a meeting when the tenders were opened and he saw John Hayes that evening in the Red Arrow Tires office. He came to the office, where he was told he had the lowest tender. He seemed quite pleased.

"Walters and Stockdale appeared to be men of financial means and we looked to Walters to put over the business. They both appeared honest and I never had occasion to doubt them. Mr. Hicks said he had not time to attend the meetings and said things were going too fast for him. We discussed the business and we agreed Stockdale's lack of security was the weak point. Mr. Walters and Mr. O'Brien considered the legal points of it and I had faith in them."

The directors believed Joseph Rath was a share-holder in the company at the time they elected him director and made the appointment in good faith.

Thought Contract Signed.

On December 5, the directors who had been endeavoring to get Stockdale to make weekly reports received his notice of personal security for the building contract.

Mr. Gillespie thought Mr. Hayes had signed his contract to construct the building. I might have taken it that if the bond was not up the contract was not signed, I don't remember distinctly on that point."

Mr. Kerr, "When Mr. McDonald retired from the board it is alleged he did so with an understanding with the other directors so that there should not be a board."

Mr. Gillespie, "There was no understanding, we still believed Mr. Rath was a director."

"On February 15 had you lost faith in the proposition?"

"No but I felt there was a difficulty between the contractor and somebody."

"Were efforts made to obtain Mr. Rath to sit at a meeting of the board of directors?"

"He was notified of every meeting."

When it was found that the company could not succeed the Regal tire plant at Sherbrooke was considered. Walters investigated and reported that by an exchange of stock an arrangement could be made to supply tires as promised the shareholders. "We did everything we could get Mr. Stockdale to come back and clean up the business but could not get him to carry out his promises."

Mr. Walters was unable to do anything. He tried to get the plant at Sherbrooke to tide over until Stockdale got his stock sold."

Mr. Kerr—"On your oath, were your actions conceived or performed with any personal or selfish motives?"

"Absolutely honest. It was a plan that appealed to the business men of the city."

"What arrangement was there that you were to get 2,000 shares of common stock?"

"None. I never heard it discussed."

Mr. Gillespie said he first saw the formulae and processes at Gordon and O'Brien's office, when they were presented without covers on. They were gone over by Mr. Walters, who pointed out the processes he would carry out, and he mentioned that from the scraps, rubber heels and so on could be made. "We took them, believing they were the formulae and that Mr. Walters, as manager of the plant, would utilize them in making tires. They were turned over to Mr. Turner. Blueprints were in the hands of Mr. Walters and were taken up at a meeting and discussed with the object of getting Mr. Westbye to make the molds." He did not recall seeing the plans and specifications of the factory and he had never ordered them.

Mr. Hicks may have said to him that now is a good time to get out, Mr. Gillespie admitted, but if so it was well on in 1922.

Mr. Justice Wright—"Then you were so far in you didn't want to leave a sinking ship?"

Mr. Gillespie—"Yes."

Mr. Justice Wright—"Well, that was courageous anyhow."

No Independent Advice.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hall, Mr. Gillespie said the section of tire produced was one exhibited at the motor show in 1922. He had not been told where it was manufactured, but certainly not by the Red Arrow Tire Company in Peterboro. Mr. Walters said this tire was made from his formulae.

Mr. Hall produced invoices from the American Rubber Tire and Tube Co. for tires of which Mr. Gillespie knew nothing.

The witness did not know until the account was received that the Blackwell firm was preparing the plans and specifications.

Mr. Gillespie did not think it was necessary to take any independent advice on the worth of the formulae. Mr. Walters impressed him with the idea that he had extensive practical knowledge and the gaining of this experience and knowledge was regarded as of great value.

On Dec. 2, 1921, a letter from Mr. Turner showed $30,000 stock sold in the first month, and said that Mr. Stockdale reported all accounts paid.

Mr. Gillespie understood that the $100 paid for the first share would go to pay for the charter. "When he promised to turn over $25,000 to Mr. Turner it sounded like pretty fair progress."

Mr. Hall pointed out payments in the skeleton bank account of Peterboro Securities Co., for $1008, the amount of Gordon & OBrien's account and $2612 on the Hayes' contract.

Mr. Gillespie: "I want to make it clear to you, Mr. Hall, that Mr. Stockdale told me absolutely that these accounts were not being paid out of the company's money, but out of his own pocket."

Mr. Hall: "I am not surprised at your being deceived by Mr. Stockdale, you not being in close touch with him but Mr. Turner was evidently deceived also. On December 1st, 1921, there was only $4439.64 on hand in the bank in the Peterboro Securities Co. account. There had been four broken promises up to December 1.

Mr. Gillespie received the 2000 shares of common stock sometime after February 15, 1922. Mr. Walters made no explanation and Mr. Gillespie did not know he had these 2000 shares until he found them in his lock box. There was no understanding between him and Mr. Walters about the shares of common stock.

Mr. Gillespie said he had gone to see the building operations at the new factory.

Mr. Hall: "You realized it was being constructed for Red Arrow Tires."

Mr. Gillespie: "Yes; I thought so at the time. I don't know that I think so now."

Mr. Hall: "You may have been more correct in your thought then than you are now."

Mr. Gillespie would not say that Mr. Walters as general manager of the company, had a free hand in the company's affairs. He was not aware that the price of the preferred shares had been increased from $100 to $110 or that later it was jumped to $125.

"Did you do anything whatever to try to protect and guard the interests of the shareholders?"

"We did all possible; we tried to get Stockdale to come across, and couldn't make him.

"What did you do?"

"We asked him."

"And accepted the promises?"

"Yes."

"Did you receive a letter from Gordon and O'Brien saying John E. Hayes and Sons would hold you personally responsible for breach of agreement?"

"Well Gordon and O'Brien were the ones who were advising us so I didn't worry."

Expert Tire Man.

Ernest C. Gagnon, of Goodyear Tire Co. said he is chief chemist since 1921 in the Toronto plant, turning out about 3000 tires a day. Formulae and processes are absolutely necessary to the manufacture of any tires. Blue prints have nothing to do with formulae and processes. A formulae can only be proven by actual test. The witness had examined copies of the Walters formulae which he said contained a description of the processes through which rubber goes in manufacture into tires, and a number of formulae for the making of different kinds of rubber for different parts of tires.

The statement that the formulae were useless the witness would class as untrue. He produced samples of rubber stock which he declared were made up from the Walters' formulae and are all of commercial value.

"Mr. McIntosh was mistaken," the witness declared, "when he said the stock would burn."

There are only five men in the Toronto plant who know the formulae for making tires, and they are each bonded for $10,000 not to divulge the secrets of the formulae.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hall the witness was asked:

"Are you sufficiently expert to say whether this section of tire is made up of Walters' formulae?"

"It was not."

The tire with the exception of the inside part which was lighter than Walters' formulae would suppose might be made up from his formulae and processes, the witness said.

"What would the board of directors need to make a tire like this?"

"They would need to get the address of a good rubber executive."

Nothing New

The description of processes given by Walters are generally will known Nothing was named in the processes supplied by Walters that was new, and nothing secret. If the processes were offered to him for sale, the witness said, he would consider them in complete.

There is no single ingredient in the formulae that is not well known to the trade, he continued, but the combinations are new to him. Each formulae has value but he would not place a definite figure on it.

Mr. Hall produced a sample of fabric. "Would you recommend your firm to put stock of that quality on the market as good salable stock?"

"It is a good quality of friction stock."

"Would you use that formulae or would you recommend any manufacturer to use it?"

"It is a matter of judgment."

Mr. Hall: "If you couldn't do any better you would take this and try and improve on it?"

"I would have to take it."

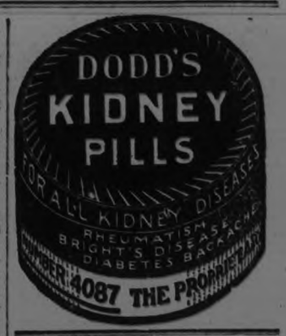
Re-examined by Mr. Parmenter, the witness said with Mr. Walters' formulae he could make up a tire that would be of value.

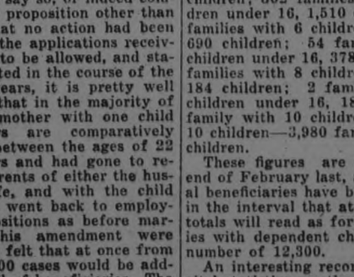
Stephen C. McLaughlin recalled by permission in reply and handed the section of tire bearing red arrows, told the court he went to Akron, Ohio, and got the necessary equipment together and had such tires made from equipment, molds and cores that he designed in the Peterboro office of Red Arrow Tires.

His Lordship ruled the evidence out in reply, declaring that the defence had not attempted to show the section of tire was made from the Walters' formulae, and proof that Mr. Hall was introducing to the effect that it was not made from Walters' formulae was not reply to Mr. Gillespie's evidence.

Mr. Gillespie merely said that Walters told him this section of tire was made from his formulae.

Mr. Hall: "The exhibit looked so much like a diamond that I was merely endeavoring to prove it glass."





For the Delicate Child

THE unhappy condition of the delicate, nervous child is invariably due to undernourishment. This does not necessarily mean insufficient food. It does mean that the food given is either deficient in body building essentials or it supplies them in such an indigestible form that they cannot be readily assimilated by the child's system.

"Ovaltine" is concentrated nourishment prepared in such a way that it can be assimilated quickly and without digestive effort. It is made from ripe barley malt, creamy milk, and fresh eggs. One cup of "Ovaltine" contains more nourishment than twelve cups of beef extract or seven cups of cocoa.

Mr. O'Brien Tells That Hayes Once Contemplated Criminal Proceedings Against Stockdale.

At this morning's hearing of the Red Arrow Tire case Joseph A. O'Brien gave evidence on the organization meetings. He said there was absolutely no evidence of bad faith on the part of any of the directors. They did not make any monetary gain out of the company. "It was just the other way."

A letter written to the directors by Gordon and O'Brien did not reach Mr McDonald, his counsel said, but the other directors received copies. The letter referred to the personal liability of the directors to John E. Hayes, and could not be traced.

The two members of Mr O'Brien's office staff who were provisional directors did not pay for their stock, he said.

Mr. O'Brien did not recall hearing an explanation of his processes from Walters, but this might have given without his knowledge. He was not consulted by any of the directors about entering into this contract. He knew of the clause restricting the voting powers of preferred share-holders for three years.

The fact that the company had no money on hand was not discussed at the first meeting. Down to October 28, there were not to Mr. O'Brien recollection any other share-holders that Walters and directors. The plan of giving 100,000 of common stock to subscribers to preferred stock was first suggested by Walters on October 19, 1921. The witness could not say whether Mr. Hicks was present at the meet-thought he might have been.

The first, Mr. O'Brien knew of the plans and specifications was when he was instructed by Walters to draw a contract between the company and John E. Hayes and Sons.

Re-examined by Mr. Parmenter, Mr. O'Brien said possibly Hayes at one time contemplated criminal action against Stockdale. This was about April. Mr. Hall was acting for Stockdale.

Minutes were referred to in the minute book as evidently the work of a layman and not prepared by Mr. O'Brien.

Re-examined by Mr. Kerr, Mr. O'Brien repeated that he was not consulted by the directors regarding the purchase of the formulae.

Confident in Walters.

John R. McDonald said Mr. Hayes took credit for recommending him as a director of the new company. Mr. McDonald agreed with the evidence given by Mr. Gillespie as to the sequence of events in the meetings of the company. He remembered the formulae being given over by Mr. Walters and described. The directors were assured that the company could earn money and make profits and Mr. McDonald believed the assurances. Mr. Walters told of previous successes in tire-making and said tires made from his formulae had been in general use. Mr. McDonald had nothing to do with the preparation of the plans for the factory building or ordering of them and did not know they had been ordered.

There was no scheme prepared by the directors and they did not conspire together. Mr. McDonald said personally he did not gain a cent.

There was no appointment of Mr. Walters as general maanger and he was not being paid by the company.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hall, Mr. McDonald said he was impressed by Walters, whom he believed to be a practical rubber manufacturer. He had intimation from Mr. Westbye that inquiries were being made about the formulae. Mr. Westbye reported favorably.

Regarding the tender he could not tell whether Mr. Hayes was present when the tenders were opened and he did not know whether the company had any money on hand to pay for the work of construction.

Mr. McDonald saw Mr. Walters' place of business in Buffalo lately. He is still in the rubber business and seemed to have an elabor te factory.

RECTOR PROPOSES REUNION WITH ROME

Well-Know U. S. Episcopal Cleric Enunciates Basis for Negotiation.

PHILADELPHIA, May 1.—Three planks in a platform "of negotiation for re-union with Rome" were proposed last night by Rev. Joseph G. H. Barry, rector of the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, New York, in addressing the priests' convention here of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Eastern States.

The subject of the evening programme was "The Church and Reunion," and in his paper Dr. Barry said:

"Summing it up, this is what appears to me that we can accept as a basis of negotiations for re-union:

"1. A primacy of St. Peter and of the Bishops of Rome, jure divino (by Divine law).

"2. A jurisdiction differing in extent at different times, but in all cases allocated to the Bishop of Rome, jure ecclesiastico (by ecclesiastical law)."

"(3) An infallibility which is the expression of the mind of the church through the Pope as its organ of statement, and which is authenticated by its recognition by the whole church."

There was no discussion of Barry's paper, since discussion of all the convention papers was forbidden. His remarks during and at the conclusion of the paper were applauded by the 700 priests and Bishops who were in attendance at the convention.

REPORTS COMING FROM STORM AREA

Picture of Desolation and Wreckage in Path of Tornado.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 1. — With many points in the storm's course yet completely isolated reports of additional casualties are expected hourly. Relief work is progressing rapidly. Hundreds of the more fortunate survivors of the storm have thrown open their homes to sufferers while in vitually every locality in the affected districts temporary kitchens have been set up to dispense food to the hungry.

A picture of desolation and wreckage was left in the wake of storms which traversed a path roughly estimated at more than a thousand miles long. Its destructive force, however, seemed partly to have been spent as it spread eastward through Virginia last evening, no deaths having occurred there so far as is known.

There was but slight property damage compared with other sections in which it struck. Entire communities were destroyed in some sections and there was not a place in the storm's path which escaped wholly unscathed.

In South Carolina where the tornado was most disastrous, Horrell Hill, 12 miles from Columbus, was wrecked, 17 being killed and a number of others more or less seriously injured. Among the dead were four school boys who with 75 other pupils were buried beneath the wreckage of a school house.

CHURCH UNION IN THE HOUSE

Second Day's Hearing Opened With Another Overflow Crowd.

OTTAWA, May 1.— (Canadian Press.)— Second day's hearing on church union bill opened with continuance of same unusual interest. Again there was a crowd waiting in the corridors half an hour before the Private Bills committee began its sittings. Again, though the numbers seeking admittance were not quite so great as on the preceding day, seating accommodation in the committee room was exhausted and the aisles were filled and walls lined with spectators. There were not, however, the same large numbers turned away, it being realized that accommodation was limited. Another difference was noted in larger percentage of women in the audience.

The proceedings were begun by Chairman McGivern with renewal of his warning against comment or interruptions by the audience.

"The committee will endeavor to give this bill fair consideration," he said.

"They do not want any assistance from spectators except by keeping order."

Dr. Murray McLaren (Conservative tS. John) asked G. W. Mason, counsel for Unionist Group to read the minutes of the General Assembly authorizing Dr. Gandier to sign petitions on behalf of Presbyterian Church. Mr. Mason said that moderator was mentioned in minutes as one of committee to put bill in final shape. The blue book of rules of procedure was quoted from:

"The Moderator was given right to sign "All documents having authority of assembly". The moderator had at all times signed petitions.

Dr. McLaren asked if all bills introduced to legislatures provided for churches to vote themselves out of union by majority vote. Mr. Mason said that within six months congregwations could vote themselves out with their church property by majority vote. In bills in maritime provinces there were provisions regarding vote of two thirds of pew holders. This was traditional matter.

Dr. MacLaren asked what would be position of Presbyterian church when churches union bill was signed

Mr. Mason replied that there was general misconception as to section regarding non-concurring congregations. It had been spoken of as if these congregations would vote themselves out, but rather it was question of not voting themselves in.

If objection taken by the opponents of church union is upheld no church union which implies a change in doctrine is possible, declared Aime Geoffrion, the counsel for unionists.

Mr. Geoffrion asserted that this would be the result, if the action taken by the "antis" in the courts succeeded. This action would take five years to run to the Privy Council and if the "antis" won it would be necessary for parliament to legislate in opposition to it. Therefore, he urged, Parliament could get no guidance by waiting five years for that decision.

He claimed that what the minority was asking was that it should be made a majority.

Mr. Geoffrion was the fifth witness heard by the commmittee on the union side since the hearing opened yesterday. No witness has yet been heard for the opposition. Various union witnesses have been freely cross-exaned by members of the committee in opposition to the bill. One other union speaker is yet to be heard, and then, probably some time this afternoon, or at the latest tomorrow, the opponents of the bill will formally open fire.

The committee has decided to hold two sittings to-morrow and then adjourn the hearings till next week.

SMALL ACCOUNT OF DOMINIONS

Melbourne Paper Sharply Comments on the British Budget—Singapore Base the Price of Tax Reductions.

MELBOURNE, May 1.—(Canadian Press).—The Melbourne Age, commenting on the British budget, as outlined by Chancellor of the Exchequer Snowden, says:

"It is a Little England budget and takes small account of the Dominions. The reduction in expenditures was largely made possible by the abandonment of the Singapore base scheme and the desertion of Empire interests in the Pacific.

"The reductions in Customs and the declaration against preference were made in disregard of the Dominions. During Great Britain's lean years, when her other customers were almost bankrupt, the Dominions kept her industries going and yielded her a substantial income. While Great Britain prefers to trade with the foreigner, she must expect the Dominions to suit themselves and fix their preference accordingly."

WAR MINISTER TROTSKY WANTS PEACE IN WORLD

MOSCOW, May 1.— (Canadian Press.) — War Minister Trotsky, as chairman of the Revolutionary War Council, has addressed the special May order to the Red army and navy in which he says:

We are for peace and brotherhood. The Red army and navy are weapons for defence of revolution, upon which all other countries are continuously making attacks. Military strength of capitalistic countries continues to grow and they are using their steel for the purpose of oppression and enslavement, while our opposing steel, for the first time in history, serves the cause of socialism."

COLONIAL FRUIT WINS AT WEMBLEY

Canadian Apples Are Only For Display But 15 Tons of Austr ian Sold In Week.

LONDON, May 1. — (Canadian Press).—Sales of colonial fruit at Wembley in the first week of the exhibition have been so extensive that the fruit breakfast which is a popular feature of colonial life is likely to become equally popular in England. No displays of fruit are so attractive as the show of apples in the Canadian pavilion, but the display is meant merely to whet the appetite of visitors, for the attractively staged Canadian apples are not for sale.

In the Australian pavilion alone fifteen tons of dessert apples were sold in the first week and the supervisor is erecting additional stalls to meet the demand. An average of a thousand Jaffa seedless oranges are sold daily in the Palestine pavilion and a half million of these oranges have been supplied to the exhibition restaurants. These are the only oranges on sale at Wembley pending the arrival of Australian and African oranges.

Fruit eating is so popular among visitors to the Exhibition that the authorities have been compelled to supply special bins in various pavilions for disposal of apple cores and orange peel.

AT ROSENEATH AND DISTRICT

Special Service in the Methodist Church-Personals.

ROSENEATH, May 1.—Last Sunday evening was the occasion of the W.M.S. thankoffering of the Methodist church. The church was decorated with house plants in bloom and ferns. Rev. Dodson the missionary of the Indian Reserve took charge of the opening part of the service.

Mrs. A. Niel read the Scripture reading from Romans 10:4. The choir sang two beautiful anthems suitable to the occasion.

It had seemed impossible to secure a returned missionary or at least an outside lady speaker, but nevertheless Mrs. (Rev.) Walsh rose to the occasion and delivered a splendid address. She gave many illustrations of the barbarous conduct of the Chinese ladies of rank to their humble servants that had been bought for small sums. She had on the pulpit several carvings of wood, made by the Chinese such as the chair, sedan the houseboat, the wheelbarrow and many others. These had been very kindly loaned by Mr. Dodson for the service. She also spoke at some length on Japan and its peculiar customs and had a Japanese house god for illustration. India and its vast population was dealt with too.

Rev. Walsh announced that there would be a lantern slide on Thursday evening, the last of the series.

At the conclusion of the service there was a meeting to re-organize the Sunday School for another year and elect the teachers and officers.

Ninety-Five Persons Are Reported Killed and Five Hundred Injured, Some Perhaps Fatally

ATLANTA, Ga., May 1.—(Canadian Press.) — With ninety-five persons known to be dead, more than a score missing and approximately 500 injured, some perhaps fatally, the south-east set about today to relieve in regions stricken yesterday and Tuesday by the worst high tension storm in its history.

Tornadoes descending with devastating violence upon widely separated sections, caused damage estimated at $10,000,000 in the seven states of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, Virginia, Louisia. . and Arkansas.

The last two were the first to suffer, being in the area in which the disturbance originated on Tuesday.

Early to-day, incomplete reports delayed by the crippled wire facilities distributed a total list of dead as follows:

South Carolina, 66; Georgia, 13; Alabama, 11; North Carolina, 3; Louisiana 1; Arkansas, 1.

FAKE SCHEMES ABSORB SIX HUNDRED MILLIONS

Annual Toll Taken on the Continent From Victims by Vendors of Worthless Securities.

Six hundred millions of dollars, probably more, is lost in a year through "get rich quick" schemes lauched on this continent,

Earning, spending and saving, seem to be big problems for the average man and woman.

A life insurance expert has figured out how the average income is spent, as follows: Out of each dollar 24 1-2c. goes for living expenses, 22c. for luxuries, 14c. is wasted, 13 1-2c. goes for "sudries," 11c. is "invested," 8 1-2c. pays for crime, 4 1-2c. is for the Government, 1 1-2c. maintains our schools and 3-4c. goes to the churches.

The remarkable thing, however, is that of 11c. "invested," three cents goes into life insurance, but that small fraction creates 87 p.c. of all estates.

Under the circumstances, the life insurance companies are not out of order when they suggest that more of our incomes be entrusted to them.

FAIR GROUNDS WILL BE USED BY LEAGUES

At the meeting of the Fair Board and the many different ball leagues who wish to use the exhibition grounds this year the following leagues were represented. Peterboro City League, two clubs from the Midland League, the C.G.E. and the Raybestos, East Peterboro League, U.F.O. league and the Cricket Club

The many organizations found the members of the Fair Board willing to let them use the Exhibition grounds and do anything in their power to help the different leagues.

The Fair Board stated that if the grounds were used a caretaker would be necessary and that it would be up to the different leagues to secure the caretaker. The different leagues and two repreesntatives from the Fair Board are to take care of the proposition for the present and get it started. The grounds will be visited and looked over and if anything is needed to be done it will be attended to in the near future.

How the Oil Got in Teapot Dome and What May Become of It

By F. A. COLLINS.

THERE is a great uncertainty as to what is going on deep down in the earth below the famous Teapot Dome. The best geological skill has been engaged to examine the region, a tract of oil land lying between Salt and Teapot creeks in the northeast corner of Natrona County, Wyoming. The actual oil-producing part of the tract, according to estimates, contains 9,000 acres. This field was one of the Western oil areas taken over several years ago by the Government to conserve a supply of fuel for the navy in times of emergency. The Teapot area is part of the Salt Creek field which is divided into the Teapot, Shannon and Salt Creek pools. The word "pool" is a term used among oil producers to signify a tract of oil-producing land.

The Teapot Dome region has been under observation for more than forty years. Opinions still differ, however, as to the formation of the oil strata and the supply of oil they may yield. The latest surveys seem to indicate that this great reservoir of oil is seriously menaced by the encroachment of water far below the earth's surface.

The main supply of oil in the "Naval Reserve No. 3," or Teapot Dome, region lies some 2,000 or 3,000 feet down. Incidentally, it costs on the average about $50,000 to drill a well to this depth. As early as 1880 the seepage and other indications in this area indicated the presence of great oil fields. The first wells did not go far enough down and yielded only small returns. It was only after Government surveys were made in 1908 that the search for oil became serious and the necessary machinery and energy engaged to tap this great supply.

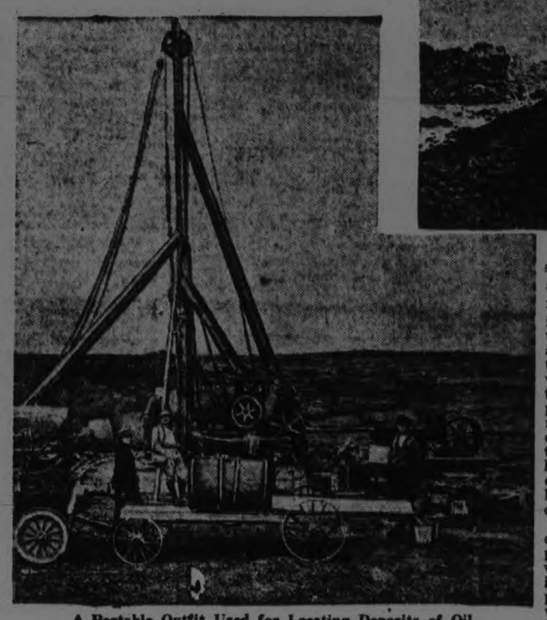
It was at first supposed that there were two "domes," although the recent surveys indicate there is but one. On the surface there are outcroppings of sand and shale, but as the wells are drilled deeper and deeper the nature of the earth encountered varies. There are layers of sand, shale and bedded clay. The rock is not especially difficult to pierce. It is found more difficult in some regions to work with the peculiar sand deposits which are encountered. Much of the sand is soft and muddy, and is easily dissolved in water, thus adding to the troubles of the well diggers.

The great supply of the Teapot Dome region is tapped at a depth of over 2,000 feet. In these mysterious regions the shaft comes upon enormous supplies of gas held under pressure. When a vent is opened by drilling the gas escapes with enormous force and carries the oil to the surface. The pressure of the gas does the work which would otherwise have to be done by pumping and is, therefore, a great saving.

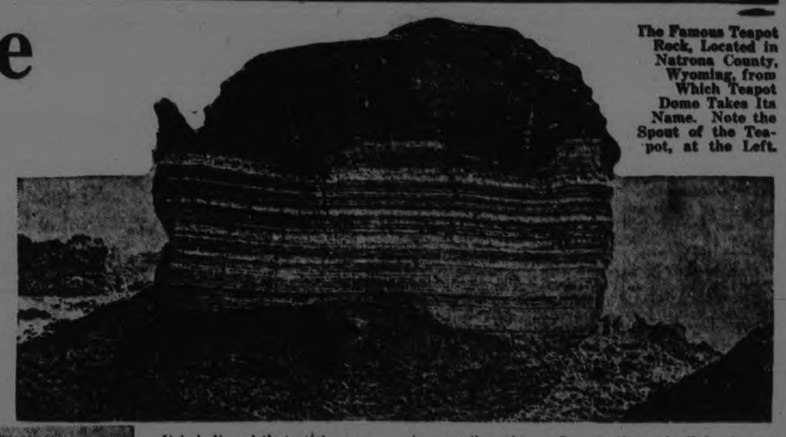
It has been found that the pressure of gas usually lasts long enough to raise about 50 per cent of the oil in the well to the surface. After that the oil must be laboriously pumped up. As a rule, the well yields about half its oil during the first year. The yield in the second year is usually about half this amount, after which it gradually declines. Some wells last for ten or fifteen years. The wells of the Teapot Dome region at present are going strong, and it is expected that they will continue their rich yield for some time to come without serious diminution. It has been estimated that the famous "Dome" contains some 30,000,000 barrels of oil.

This region, however, is believed to have a curious geological formation far below the earth's surface which may have an important influence upon the oil yield later on. Some of the Government geologists who have studied the problem believe that this great deposit of oil, worth so many millions of dollars, is threatened by the inflow of water. It is believed that a level floor exists below the oil deposits, perhaps several thousand feet down. At about the same level, and at no great distance, lies a great subterranean water supply. It is feared that in time, as the oil is drawn off, this water will gradually encroach upon the oil fields. One of the Government experts in a recent report states that "the beds are comparatively flat and the movement of oil and water on such beds cannot be predicted."

Now as the oil is drawn off in great quantities the water may advance and there is danger that the oil that remains will be trapped between the advancing body of water and the fault. Oil and water, of course, do not mix, but the expense of recovering the oil under these conditions may be greatly increased, and much of it would be lost. It is, therefore, important that as much oil be drawn off as possible before the invasion of the water which threatens it on several sides.



A Portable Outfit Used for Locating Deposits of Oil.



The Famous Teapot Rock, Located in Natrona County, Wyoming, from Which Teapot Dome Takes Its Name. Note the Spout of the Teapot, at the Left.

It is believed that at the present rate of yield at Teapot Dome at least a year must pass before any part of the reservation is appreciably damaged. All this is more or less guesswork, and the fear of the reduction of the oil supply may prove to be without foundation. Some of the experts believe that the peculiar formation of the Dome region will allow the oil to be drawn off by drilling outside of the reservation. It is not known, however, if any natural barrier exists at Teapot Dome far below the surface which will cut off the supply of oil.

To understand the formation of the oil deposits in general picture to yourself a glass of water with several straws touching the bottom at various points. Now, if two persons were to draw off the water through these straws the level of the liquid in the glass would, of course, fall. Unless there was someone to draw through the remaining straws the water would soon be drawn off without any of the supply passing through the other straws. It is much the same in an oil region. One section of oil land may lie above rich deposits, but the supply may be drawn off by wells in nearby regions. It is possible that this may occur at Teapot Dome.

A new kind of "wiz" business has been developed by the United States Bureau of Mines. It is a method of locating deposits of petroleum and natural gas. The spying-out of such deposits is done not with a divining rod or anything of that sort, but with the help of a small portable outfit, made for the purpose, which serves to separate and analyze gases found in water.

If water of underground origin traverses an oil or gas sand, it will absorb hydrocarbon vapors and, when tapped by a well, will carry those vapors to the surface. Accordingly, if water thus derived is found to contain such vapors, it is at least likely that there are gas or oil sands somewhere in the vicinity, down below. Hence it would seem worth while to test the water in a well as drilling progresses to find out whether it will pay to go deeper in quest of oil or gas. Such tests will help the geologist to decide what areas may be expected to be productive of gas or petroleum.

The portable outfit renders it practicable to make such tests in the field, so that it is unnecessary to send sample of waters to a chemical laboratory for analysis.

Will the Wizardry of Radio Make English the World's One Language?

WILL the English language, as a result of the wizardry of radio, eventually become the one tongue to be spoken by all the inhabitants of the earth? Guy E. Tripp, president and chairman of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, says that he foresees the day when Europe, Asia, Africa and America will be enmeshed in radio waves bearing incessant chatter in a Babel of confusing tongues, with the resultant human curiosity to learn what is being said one to the other over vast expanse of land and water. Out of this curiosity, Mr. Tripp believes, will come the world-wide supremacy of the English language as the one tongue that alone can satisfy when this time arrives.

"Thousands of years ago, so we are told, all people spoke the same tongue," says Mr. Tripp, "but time has brought a confusion of tongues, and everyone who has traveled outside of his country knows what a terrible curse this is. Men who cannot speak the same language are separated by blank walls. They cannot join together; they cannot have common interests and they can hardly keep peace among themselves. But now, at last, there is hope that the age old blight of lack of understanding may be lifted. Radio engineers have done wonderful things. The latest wonder is an arrangement whereby broadcasts from America are heard clearly and distinctly in Europe every Saturday night.

"Short radio waves possessing peculiar carrying power are transmitted by the American station, picked up by an English broadcasting station, amplified, and then rebroadcast by the English station on its standard wave to its regular audience. The system is still in an experimental stage, but it is quite probable that it soon will be extended so that all European contries will be receiving messages from us, and we in turn shall be hearing regularly from London, Paris, Rome, Berlin and other important foreign cities.

"Thus all barriers to international communications will be broken down. This will mean many things to the people of the world, too many for anyone to attempt to foresee.

"But one thing may be predicted with comparative safety; that is, the establishing of a universal language. Were radio broadcasts confined to musical selections the necessity for such a language would not arise, but speeches are certain to be transmitted, and every radio listener will want to know what they are about. Hence there will be a greater and more general interest in a single language than has ever existed since the fall of the Roman Empire."

Training SOLDIERS to Use Carrier Pigeons as MESSENGERS

TELEGRAPH lines may be cut. There may be no conveniences for radio. Quick communication by other means may be impossible. But the carrier pigeon, if at hand, may carry a military message swiftly and surely.

Pigeons proved their value for such purposes in the great war. They were used in great numbers and to much advantage.

Properly speaking, they were not carrier pigeons, but of the "homer pigeon" breed. The variety is quite different. But that is a mere matter of technical ornithological detail.

As a result of lessons learned in the European conflict, both the army and the navy of the United States have gone rather extensively of late into the business of rearing and training homing pigeons, to serve as messenger carriers. Both services are now maintaining stations for teaching enlisted men how to breed and care for the birds, and how to instruct them in their message-carrying duties. It is an important branch of war work.

A not unimportant feature of the present-day preparation for war is the breeding and education of homing pigeons. Scientifically-built cotes on wheels are provided, ready for use in case of hostilities.

Even the private soldier in the pigeon corps of the army is taught to carry a little wicker pigeon-cote on his back. If he be assigned to outpost duty, the idea is very valuable, inasmuch as in an emergency he can, by dispatching a pigeon with a message tied to its leg, summon help or transmit information with sureness and celerity.

The Private Soldier in the Pigeon Corps Is Taught to Carry a Little Wicker Pigeon-Cote On His Back.

"The reason why it is possible to send a pigeon with a message is its love for home." Thus writes B. B. Riviere, F. R. C. S., in "British Birds." It is indeed upon its fixed and permanent love of one spot—its home—and its urgent desire to return thereto at all seasons, that one depends in making use of it as a messenger, though for racing purposes one takes advantage of the additional incentive of eggs or young ones to return to.

"Pigeons find their way home," Mr. Riviere writes, "by means of remarkable powers of vision and observation, combined with a wonderfully retentive memory for the configuration of any country which they have once flown over. In addition to these faculties, they acquire through training the knowledge that they must always steer one particular course in order to get home, and this they are able to do by means of an instinctive sense of geographical direction or consciousness of the points of the compass."

Thus, if a pigeon when released fails to recognize the country, it at once takes the direction to which it has been used.

Pigeons, though affectionate and fascinating, are not the placid creatures that some would have us believe.

Their gurgling remarks are not always the so-called coo of peace. They can be very often translated into the equivalent of the "bruiser's" words, and if the warning is not taken, the offending party is maltreated with wing and beak.

This fury is usually reserved for the occasion when a favored human is offering a handful of grain on a window sill. A pigeon will be eating from each side of the hand, for instance, each keeping a furious orange eye glued on his vis-a-vis.

If a feathered pensioner intrudes between these two, there is a real rumpus—uplifted wing, gurgles of fury, and occasionally, if the human hand permits, a beak seizes the soft down of the opposing head and tears out quantities of fluff.

Even when no one is present, there is very often a battle royal on a window sill.

It is not always possible for pigeons to be raced or used as messengers. Certain weather makes them more or less helpless. Heavy rain especially accompanied by a cool head wind is disastrous to racing pigeons.

PAINT as a PROTECTION to HEALTH

PAINT protects, according to Dr. Max C. Starkloff, health commissioner of St. Louis. Dr. Starkloff, however, does not refer to the kind of paint that goes on the face, but the kind that is put on walls and houses.

The connection between paint and health would seem to be remote, yet Dr. Starkloff, as a contributor to Health (Chicago), points out they have a very close relation. In a lying-in hospital, says Dr. Starkloff, at a given period there were over a hundred cases of puerperal fever with a high death-rate. In an effort to clean up the hospital and make it sanitary to the last degree, the entire place was painted, including floors, ceilings and inside walls. After the painting, cases of puerperal fever almost entirely disappeared. The New York Health Department is using paint rather than fumigation for sterilizing rooms which contagious disease patients have occupied.

As a further proof of the value of paint as a disinfectant, Henry A. Gardner, of the Institute of Industrial Research at Washington, painted a wall surface and then sprayed it with liquid cultures of different germs. A similar area, unpainted, was also saturated with germ cultures. Microscopic study showed that the unpainted area gave abundant growth of germs, while the painted area showed that the germs had developed very little.

MEASURING the GROWTH of a BABY

THE government Bureau of Standards at Washington has invented a new kind of apparatus for ascertaining the stature of a baby. It is a measuring board upon which the child is laid flat on its back, with the top of its head in contact with a vertical piece at one end. A second vertical piece, which is slidable, is then pushed along until the soles of the infant's feet rest against it. The distance between the two is the exact length of the baby.

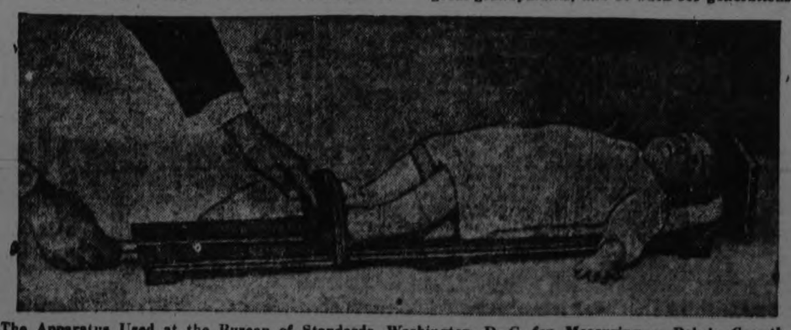
Within recent years babies have become a subject of scientific study. In particular their gain in weight is watched, because it has an important relation to their health and prospect of survival. Also, to achieve the normal, they should gain correspondingly in stature.

The average length of a baby fifteen days old is nineteen and a half inches. By the end of its first year of life it should be twenty-eight and a quarter inches long.

If a baby throughout its life continued to grow at the same proportionate rate as in its first year, it would attain at three years of age the stature of an average adult man. At five years of age it would be ten feet seven inches tall, and by its tenth birthday it would reach the imposing height of sixty-eight feet three inches.

Every baby starts life as a mass of cells which are derived from its parents, but with its own powers of dealing with those cells. How it uses them, how they grow in one way and not in another, depends upon the child itself. So that with the rare exception of what scientists call "identical twins," which are not ordinary twins at all, but hail from a single cell, no two babies in the world, once they have been born, are precisely alike.

The growing qualities of the child are not the same as those of either parent, but are a selection from those of the parents, and, indeed, as many scientists believe, of the grandparents, great-grandparents, and so back for generations.



The Apparatus Used at the Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C., for Measuring a Baby's Growth.

Just Why the Smoke of a Cigar Is Blue

TOBACCO, when smoked, releases a certain amount of half-consumed product in the form of smoke. With very good tobacco, either as cigar, cigarette, or in a pipe, the particles of this smoke are inconceivably tiny, and therefore catch only the shorter wave-lengths of light. These wave-lengths are blue, so it follows that the smoke of a good cigar, as seen in bright light, reflects bluish.

Cigar smoke, when seen between the eye and the sun, no longer reflects, but shows in its true color as a sort of dark-brown.

If the smoke is taken into the mouth it cools, and the little particles join into larger ones, so that they no longer catch the blue waves only but the whole light, and so appear white or colorless. Inferior tobaccos, too, give off larger particles of smoke, which also fail to catch the blue waves only. So that really the blue smoke is a sign of good tobacco and dry smoke.

HOW Artificial LAVA Is Now MADE

THE world is being searched for products to make artificial lava and there is a fortune in lava for the one who can locate the right kind of deposit.

A form of lava is used for gas tips, burners, furnaces, for insulation, in the manufacture of nuts and plates, for the making of dental and surgical instruments, as a substitute for rubber, porcelain, mica and hard glass.

The lava that is used, however, as a bulletin of the National Foreign Trade Council explains, is not nature's product. That stays where it is erupted, around the craters of volcanoes or where it flowed down the sides of mountains.

Artificial lava, the product of ingenious Americans, is made of the mineral steatite, or talc in its purest and finest state. It is related to volcanic action only in that talc is a geological strata which has been thrown near the earth's surface by emptive distortions.

This steatite, so necessary to the new American industry, is difficult to find, either in the United States or abroad. All talc deposits are not steatite. Many of these veins or deposits have undergone such violent action in being thrown close to the earth's surface that the material is full of flaws or cleavage planes.

The lava industry is typical of many other American industries, dependent on foreign countries for raw materials. Until the European war much of the steatite was mined in the Fichtel Mountains of Bavaria, Germany. During the war it was obtained in British India, China and some in the United States.

The mined material is delivered at the factory in prism form of squared cubes weighing twenty-five to fifty pounds each. This mineral is machined, drilled or threaded into the desired form, then baked like bread in a kiln, under a 2,000 degree Fahrenheit pressure. When cooled it is two to four times harder than marble. It cuts glass readily and itself can scarcely be cut by a diamond. It is porous, and light buff in color.

IMPROVED PITCHING OPINION OF HEYDLER

President of the National League Finds Proof In First Stage of Campaign That Moundsmen Show More Effectiveness This Season.

NEW YORK, May 1. —Proof that major league twirlers, particularly in the National League, are showing greater effectiveness this season than in several seasons, is seen by John A. Heydler, president of the senior circuit, in the results of the first stages of the 1924 campaign.

These show, he pointed out, that of the 48 games played in the National League, up to and including yesterday, 22 were decided by one run margins. The indication of improved pitching is further shown in the fact that eight of these games were decided by 3 to 2 scores, and five by 2 to 1 margins, in addition to which four shut-outs have been recorded.

Fewer Home Runs.

Further evidence of effectiveness in the box is claimed by Mr. Heydler in the home run records, which at the end of Tuesday's play showed the National League's total of 41 to be 9 less than at the same juncture of the 1923 campaign. Due to the fact that the American League's home run sluggers are ahead of their 1923 pace, the major league total of 77 was 3 more than on the same date a year ago.

The better box work is generally attributed to the new ruling under which the injection of new balls into the game on slight pretexts is curbed.

TILDEN NEEDED ON TENNIS TEAM

Visions of Australian Stars May Force Association to Swallow Player—Writer Rule.

NEW YORK, May 1.—The split in tennis ranks over the player-writer issue which has resulted in the withdrawal of William T. Tilden and Vincent Richards from the Olympic and Davis Cup teams was widened further yesterday in spite of efforts to pave the way for a settlement.

Latest developments in the controversy that has shaken the racquet world included "conditional" acceptance by the United States Lawn Tennis Association of the resignation of Richards after failure to persuade him to withdraw, refusal of Tilden to accept terms to become tennis professional of the Briad Lodge Club, and indications that additional agitation in the ranks of the U.S.L.T.A. may force reconsideration of the player-writer rule within a short time.

LENGLEN MAY BE SELECTED

To Take Olympic Oath on Behalf of the Competitors of 42 Nations—Men Are Mentioned.

PARIS, April 30. — Suzanne Lenglen is being prominently mentioned in French Olympic Committee circles as the French athlete to be designated to take the Olympic oath on behalf of the competitors of the 42 nations to be represented in the events. Other names being discussed are Andre, the veteran hurler, Lucien Gaudin and Armand Massart, the fencers; Paoli, the shot putter, and Henri Cochet and Rene Lacoste, the lawn tennis stars.

The partisans of these various athletes have already raised such a controversy over the qualifications of their favorites that it seems quite probable the French committee will decide to bestow the honor on the redoubtable Suzanne, against whom no man's voice will be raised.

NEW YORK, May 1. — Battling Siki had a bad pair of hours yesterday when on arriving from Havana, "broke," and in the steerage, immigration officials seriously considered deporting him fearing that he might become a public charge.

The boxer was admitted on a temporary permit, however, when Robert Levy, his manager, said the Senegalese had $300 on deposit in a New York bank. He also indicated that his charge had many opportunities to earn a livelihood.

Siki said that he was scheduled to box in Louisville, Ky., on May 9th, and would depart for the South to-night.

PRESENTED A BOARD.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 1.—W. H. Chapman of Hastings, whose business interest lie largely in Campbellford, has presented Manager Charles H. Davidson with a large score board handsomely painted, upon which will be displayed the runs by innings at the ba'l games when the season opens. This is the first of its kind to be found in any town in the Northumberland League and Mr. Chapman's generosity is thoroughly appreciated by the club officers as it is also certain to be by the patrons of the game.

THE CAMPBELLFORD GREEN AGAIN READY

CAMPBELLFORD, May 1. —J. R. Wilkinson is getting the bowling green in shape for the season and mowed the grass for the first time yesterday. A number of improvements are to be made including the installation of modern powerful electric lights, furnished with reflectors, such lights as are used on Peterborough, Belleville and Kingston greens, and which will make the grounds as bright by nights as at noon day. Another advantage of these lights is that flies and mosquitoes will be attracted to their domes so high up in the air as to cause the bowlers no discomfort.

The club house, erected last year, is to be painted and furnished, funds for this purpose having been provided.

Mr. Wilkinson and Dr. O. C. Watson have united to present to the club a flag pole which will be placed in position with appropriate ceremony and from the summit of which the national banner will fly on all state occasions. The pole, fine spruce, was selected and cut yesterday on the farm of Mr. Wilkinson on the Gravel Road.

SWAT CHAMPS SHOULD REPEAT IN BIG LEAGUES

Can Rogers Hornsby and Harry Heilmann again upset the dope by leading the major leagues in batting?

Right-handed batters have been greatly in the minority as swat champs. For each major league to be ruled over by a right-handed hitter is the exception.

HEILMANN

In the National League Rogers Hornsby has a chance to break a record. When he finished on top in 1923 with his fourth consecutive batting title, he tied the record of that organization, held by Hans Wagner.

Hornsby is confident that he will again finish out in front but Roush Frisch, Bottomley and Wheat insist it's going to be a tougher job this year than ever before.

When Hornsby topepd the National League in 1921 with a mark of .397 and Heilmann led the American with an average of .394 it was the first time since 1904 that both the major league batting honors had gone to right handers.

In 1904 Hans Wagner showed the way in the National League and Larry Lajoie in the American.

In 1923 Hornsby and Heilmann duplicated the '21 performance proving the feat was no fluke.

Bruggy No Better Catcher Than Perkins, But Rommel Is Superstitious.

BY BILLY EVANS

Ball players are a superstitious lot. This goes as strongly for the stars as the run of the mine.

In 1922 Eddie Rommel was the pitching sensation of the American League. With a seventh place club he won 27 out of 40 games, a remarkable record.

Cy Perkins that season was as much in the limelight as a catcher as Rommel a-pitcher. Perkins was Rommel's battery partner.

Last season Rommel didn't go as well. With a much better ball club he lacked one game of breaking even on the season.

In a number of games one tough break would bring about his defeat. Dame Fortune that had smiled on him throughout 1922 deserted him last year.

Late last year, with the club going badly, Bruggy was selected to catch Rommel, with a hope that it would break the jinx that seemed to pursue the pitching ace of the A's.

Shift Shattered Hoodoo.

Under Bruggy's direction Rommel started to win. It is understood Bruggy will catch Rommel exclusively this year.

Getting away to a 6 to 1 victory over Washington in his first start of the year, and coming back with a 4-0 win over the Red Sox, will serve to strengthen Rommel's confidence in Bruggy as his battery partner.

The situation is unquestionably unique in baseball.

A star pitcher prefers pitching to the understudy rather than a catcher rated one of the best receivers in the game.

Bruggy Helped Make Eddie

Merely a matter of superstitution, which is strong in the ball player. Perhaps it would be better to lay it to psychology. To win a player must believe in it. Continued defeat destroys confidence. That was Rommel's case in 1923.

Possibly there is also a bit of sentiment back of Rommel's desire that Bruggy handle his stuff. During the early days of his minor league career, Bruggy helped make Rommel the great pitcher he is today.

The arrangement suits Perkins perfectly. "Rommel can make the ball do more than any pitcher I ever caught," says Cy. "He is a mighty hard man to catch. His knuckler takes such peculiar breaks at times that a catcher seeks to block it rather than catch it.

"Eddie had a lot of tough breaks last year, should have won many a game that he lost. Perhaps shifting to Bruggy will break the jinx. I certainly hope so, for with Rommel pitching winning ball we will be a tough club to beat.

"It may also make me a more valuable catcher, since it relieves me of the difficult task of catching Rommel."

Rommel of the Athletics Doesn't Believe In Horseshoes, But Try and Convince Him That Bruggy Isn't a Luck Piece!

QUESTIONS

1. Can a player start as pitcher, be shifted to other positions in the game, and then return to the pitching mound?

2. Can a batter, after having struck out, start for the bench, and then discovering the catcher has muffled the third strike, start for first?

3. If a substitute enters the game without notifying the umpire of the change, what is his status?

ANSWERS

1. A player has such a right provided he is continued in the lineup.

2. He has such a right, and is not out for running out of line, as many think.

3. If a substitute enter the game without announcing hunself to the umpire, any play made by him at the bat or in the field is considered legal

U. S. WASTES HALF OF OIL IN GROUND.

The Period of Oil Scarcity the Same As Timber Is At Present Being Felt.

By CHARLES P. STEWART.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—America is wasting her oil as recklessly as she is wasting her timber. Her present more or less visible supply will last about 20 years more.

By "visible" is meant the oil which actually has been "located" or which geologists are practically sure of.

That any important additions will be made to it is more than unlikely, for as the Geological Survey says, "a large part of the territory in the United States that may possibly contain oil has been studied and 'wildcatting' has spread through 'prospective' into many regions of 'possible' and eben 'impossible' territory."

Oil is Imported.

As with timber, the period of oil scarcity already is here.

"The country's annual production," points out the Geological Survey, "is now almost half a billion barrels, but the annual consumption is well beyond the half billion mark, and still growing. For some years we have had to import oil."

And experts believe we have passed the production peak.

Again, as with timber, authorities don't mean to say that we shall arrive, literally, at a given date in 1944 after which there will be no more oil—that every flivver will have to be scrapped for lack of fuel.

Estimates are based on the amount of oil recoverable from the ground by present methods. It remains to be seen what can be accomplished by new ones. Thus far, however, the Geological Survey says they can be regarded only "as in the experimental stage." Besides, while those which are being experimented with may prove satisfactory in some districts, it has been demonstrated already that they won't work in others.

In short, the Geological Survey finds little comfort in these suggestions of additions to the now visible domestic oil supply, considering that "the United States is already absolutely dependent on foreign countries to eke out her own production, and if the foreign oil can be procured, this dependence is sure to grow greater and greater as our fields wane."

Oil is Wasted.

Oil, once gone, is gone forever.

Now, how is oil wasted?

A good deal is lost by fire, but that's accidental—inexcusably so perhaps but not deliberate.

Then there's a heavy loss of the by-product—gas—which might be saved by capping the wells, and used for fuel. In the great majority of cases no such attempt is made.

But the greatest loss is due to competitive drilling.

The oil-bearing sand lies in the ground in layers. The bottom layer is richest. The drill, of course, penetrates the top layer first. The yield isn't what it will be as the drill goes deeper, but it's worth having. The top layer having been exhausted, the well goes on down, through layer after layer, the yield growing richer and richer, until the richest of all, at the bottom, is reached.

The cream of the deposit is skimmed off the bottom and everything else is wasted.

Half Lost.

How much oil is lost in this way? Nothing like exact figures are available, but Harry Slattery of the National Conservation Association "guesses" half of it, until very recently. The waste isn't quite so great now. Conservationists have checked it—somewhat. But it's still very large.

How much oil there was in the ground when drilling first began in the United States is uncertain. No records were kept in the early days. Geologists generally put the figure around 20 billion dollars. Less than half that much is left. But for what was wasted, there'd be 19 billion barrels today, instead of 9 billion. And needless to say, consumption during the early years of the industry wasn't a fraction what it is now.

But still we're wasting.

The monks first started making Munich beer in the 12th century.

A wingless, fur-bearing animal of French Cochin, China, rises in the air by distending the stomach like a small balloon.

A huge waterspout, which attained a height of 800 feet, recently rose out of the sea within two miles off the coast of England.

Latest Rival for Dempsey's Title Is Star "Rah-Rah" Athlete

Now we have the educated fighter seeking the crown of Champion Jack Dempsey.

Impossible. You say. Nothing of the kind.

The latest aspirant to the title of Champion Jack is none other than Fred Roberts, star "rah-rah" athlete of Oglethorpe College, Georgia.

Don't get the impression that Fred is ready to hurl himself into the ring with the heavyweight champion. Far from it. He thinks he will be fit to go inside of two years.

Georgia is noted for its crop of star athletes, including Ty Cobb, the "Georgia Peach," Young Stribling, the youthful fistic sensation, and now comes Fred Roberts, the "Georgia Giant."

Roberts is only 6 feet 4 inches, weighs 230 pounds in the proverbial pink and is rarin' to go.

During his college days he won fame as a shot putter, hammer thrower and strong man.

However, his greatest athletic feats were probably performed on the gridiron. Many of the southern critics rate him as one of the greatest football players ever produced below the Mason and Dixon line.

In his days at Oglethorpe, Roberts was a marked man in every game he played. "Get Roberts" was the slogan of the opposition. Despite this he never was taken out of a game because of injuries.

Walk Miller of Atlanta is chaperoning Roberts in the best of ring society and feels that his protege has a great chance to succeed in the ring since the gridiron record shows 11 football rivals never made him take the count.

Roberts is to be groomed carefully. The soft spots will be picked for him until ring experience fits him to take on the heavyweights of the better class.

ROYALS HAVE STRONG TEAM

"Lefty" Maguire the Former Leaside Left-hander is With Toronto Outfit.

Manager W. Thorne, of the Royal Canadians, the Toronto outfit which will meet the Petes at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, is taking no chance but is bringing his strongest forces here for the game. His pitching staff includes Ramsay, the curve ball pitcher, who beat Belleville in the O.B.A.A. series last year, and "Lefty" Maguire, the former Leaside left-hander, and the heaving department is backed up by a clever hard-hitting team.

The Royals have furnished the local club with their batting order for Saturday as follows:

Vanwinkle, m.
Comper, 3b.
Dickson or McLaughlin, rf.
Hartman, 1b.
Reburn, lf.
McCallum, ss.
Harrington or Wienert, 2b.
Armstrong, c.
Fullerton, c.
Ramsay, p.
Maguire, p.
Ball, p.

The Petes' training was interrupted by the rain last night, and tonight's cool weather will not allow many chances to be taken. However, the squad is in good shape, and with the expected warm weather on Saturday, the Petes should be ready to give the visitors a warm reception. Every player who has signed with the Petes so far will be used in Saturday's game, and it will be a good opportunity to look over the players in action against the fast Royals.

STUDENTS STRIKE OVER EXPULSION

English-Speaking Boys At Quebec College Demanded Improved Regulations and Were Expelled.

OTTAWA, May 1. — (Canadian Press).—All English-speaking students at St. Alexander College, Ironside, Que., numbering 30, have gone out on a sympathetic strike, following the expelling of eight of their number who went on strike after the Principal, R. F. Le Galois, refused their demands for improved college regulations, says Le Droit, the French paper here in its news columns yesterday. The paper adds that the French-speaking pupils, who are far in the majority, refused to side with their comrades.

According to Le Droit, the English-speaking pupils demanded from the college authorities to have certain of the college regulations altered. Principal Le Galois refused to consider these demands under such circumstances, and eight of the English-speaking pupils went out on strike, and were immediately expelled. Yesterday the remainder of the English-speaking pupils, after holding a meeting, went out on strike in protect of the expelling of their comrades.

OSHAWA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION MET

OSHAWA, May 1.—All the noise about Oshawa Amateur Athletic Association not going to function the coming season was given the soft pedal at the annual meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. on Tuesday evening after hearing the address of President W. E. Clarke, which gave a review of all the different sporting organizations of 1923, in which he laid stress on what the Association had accomplished in fostering junior sports in the city of Oshawa. The treasurer's report showed a healthy balance on hand of $489.21, after heavy expenses in connection with the advances made to differet organizations.

President W. E. Clarke and Secretary Geo. W. Hezzelwood both asked to be relieved from their official duties as their business would not allow of the time necessary to look after the Association's affairs as they considered such should be, but asked the members present that their interest would be not the less.

The following officers were elected to carry on the Association for the year 1924:

Past President—W. E. Clarke.
President—Alderman Ed. Bradley.
1st Vice-President—Geo. W. McLaughlin.
2nd Vice-President—F. J. Balles.
Treasurer—H. E. Lander.

A permanent secretary and three directors, persons who have no connection with any particular line of sport, will be selected by the officers chosen at the annual meeting.

It was decided to hold a semi-annual meeting of the Association in September of each year, and the annual meeting, at which the election of officers will take place, to be held in March or April at the call of the Executive.

After a lengthy discussion between delegates from the Central Ontario Baseball Club, Oshawa football club and General Motors football club as to the disposition of gate receipts on Saturday afternoon, when these different organizations clash, a representative from each is to meet the officers of the Athletic Association next week when an agreement will be reached.

BASEBALL NEWS.

Belleville and Oshawa were the first two teams in the Central Ontario League to return their fifty dollar bonds to the secretary at Oshawa—Belleville's is signed by N. P. North, J. E. Laporte and R. S. Hamilton; Oshawa—C. M. Anderson, Jos. Welsh, Geo. Miller and J. P. Mangan. The list of officers as sent in by the Belleville Club are as follows: Hon. Presidents, J. D. McMillan and W. C. Mikel, K.C.; President, Chas. Hanna; 1st Vice-President, N. P. North; 2nd Vice-President, R. D. Adams; 3rd Vice-President, R. D. Ponton; 4th Vice-President, H. M. Kerr; Secretary-Treasurer, N. Thompson, 281 Charles street, 'phone 1208W; Manager, Walter Gerow; Committee, D. C. Ramsay, S. D. Hagerman and G. V. Savage. The list of officers sent in by Oshawa are: Hon. Presidents, R. S. McLaughlin, Alex. Storie, W. A. Coad, Chas. Robson, Geo. W. McLaughlin, Geo. W. Hezzelwood, Fred Bailes, O. Lander, C. R. Henry and E. W. Drew; President, C. M. Anderson; 1st Vice-President, Charles Shultz; Treasurer, W. L. Mitchell; Secretary, F. G. Chester, 295 Arthur street; Manager, C. Shultz; Assistant Manager, Walter Fair; Executive Committee, W. A. Coad, Chas. Davis, Walter Fair, E. Parsons, C. Shultz, C. Anderson, Roy Kerby. Official Scorer, W. O'Brien; Club Physician, Dr. A. C. Cameron.

The Strollers of Toronto Riverside Senior League are billed for an exhibition game in Oshawa on Saturday afternoon and motor town fans will see three familiar faces among the "Dales" line-up. Hoose, last year catcher for the Leaside Central Ontario League team, is the visitors' first string catcher; Jimmie Breckenbridge, the old Oshawa boy, is ticketed to serve them up from the right side of the pitching slab, while Bill Lennon, who was in Oshawa last fall, but migrated back to breath city ozone, will work the short field.

The new boy Smith, who has attached his John Henry to a Kingston certificate, is reported to be a speed artist on the base lines and hails from Fort William as a final year medical student at Queen's University. He has a record of covering the hundred yards in 10 4-5 seconds—Mills, Swanston and Tyson will please take notice.

With two official openings set for May 24th afternoon—the new motor town grandstand and the Central Ontario Baseball League, Oshawa is considering big things for the holiday. The present arrangements under consideration is to have the Parks' Commission, City Council, Amateur Athletic Association officers, Driving Club, local members of Parliament and other officials to occupy the new boxes in the front of grandstand with a couple of the heavy artillery to act as battery for the opening of the ball game. With the old ball game mercury on the way up to summer heat all records at the opening attendance is predicted.

MODIFY MELLON TAX.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—(Canadian Press)—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's proposal for a 25 per cent. reduction in the tax on earned incomes was agreed upon yesterday by the Senate with modification.

DRAFT EVADER NOT ON BOARD

Ship Was Searched and Passengers Inspected on Arrival.

NEW YORK, May 1. United Press —Despite rumors and official notification from the war department, Grover Cleveland Bergdoll was not on board the Columbus, the North German Lloyd Liner, which arrived from Germany.

The ship was met by officers upon arrival in quarantine. Captain Johnson and Philip Heineken, president of the steamship company, ordered every passenger presented.

Early to-day Colonel John L. Bond, from the Disciplinary Barracks at Governor's Island, with a group of men, searched the vessel. Colonel Bond was on the court martial which tried Bergdoll and his brother. He was armed with official notification from the United States Army Intelligence Service, which said that Bergdoll was on board.

After a search lasting for almost an hour, Colonel Bond announced that he was certain Bergdoll was on board.

It was the first trans-atlantic sailing of the Columbus. The ship started before the war, has recently been completed. She is a sister ship of the White Star liner Homeric. The ship is 755 long and carries 32,354 tons.

HENRY THORNTON HAS CONFIDENCE IN C.N. RAILWAY

He Said That Within Two Years it Would Be Self-Supporting, Profitable and Very Useful to the People.

WINNIPEG, May 1. — Canadian Press. — "I am absolutely confident that if this railroad is allowed within reason, to manage its own affairs, and work out its destiny, it will in two years be self-supporting, and not only profitable, but of great usefulness to the people. It is the best bet I know in the transportation game," declared Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association here last night.

Speaking of the Canadian National surplus, he said: "It is an indication to the people of Canada that for at least another year or so they are justified in letting the present administration work out the future of the road."

Argentine Corn Crop Largest Since 1914.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—(Canadian Press).—Argentina's corn crop, now being harvested, is the largest since 1914, and is estimated at 270,000,000 bushels, or 94,000,000 bushels more than last year, according to a cablegram from the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, to the Department of Agriculture here. The increased production is due to larger acreage and a very favorable season. Most of Argentina's corn market is in Europe. This year's exportable surplus is placed at about 180,000,000 bushels.

ROSENEATH FIRE HAD GOOD START

Bucket Brigade Did Effective Work and Saved Buildings.

ROSENEATH, May 1.—What might have been a serious loss had it not been discovered in time, was averted on Sunday afternoon when Mr. Herman Blodgett's house caught fire. One of the boys, who was upstairs, noticed smoke passing the window, and on rushing down to find the cause, found that the straw banking of the kitchen was on fire. Some of the near neighbors rushed to the scene, and as there was plenty of water handy they used it outside, but this was of no avail. The fire had gained headway in the wall, and finally the wainscoting had to be torn off on the inside. Had they not noticed the fire in time there is no doubt but Mr. Blodgett's entire buildings would have been destroyed as they are all quite close together, and there was a strong wind blowing.

When the degrees had been gone through the candidates made brief speeches and afterwards lunch was served.

BABY PEGGY, in her first feature picture, "The Darling of New York," at the Capitol Theatre, Friday and Saturday.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL

A PICTURE THAT WILL PLEASE EVERYBODY

When George M. Cohan appeared in the title role of "The Meanest Man in the World" in New York City for a solid year, he amused thousands of theatre-goers. To-day this famous stage play has been adapted to the screen, and beginning to-day at the Royal Theatre will present this First National release for the first time in this city.

Bert Lytell enacts the "meanest man" role in the screen version and the laughs provided by Cohan in the footlight presentation are presented in equally rapid fire succession by this popular player. Working opposite the star is none other than beautiful Blanche Sweet, who makes her return to the silver sheet in this feature comedy-drama.

Bryant Washburn is given an opportunity to appear to very good advantage as Ned Stevens, the friend of Richard Clarke (Lytell). Others of importance that will be seen in this Principal Pictures Corporation offering include Forrest Robinson, Warde Carne, Helen Lynch, Maryon Aye, Victor Potel, Frances Raymond, William Conklin, and a host of others of equal importance.

The story of the "meanest man in the world" surrounds the business life of Richard Clarke, young attorney. Clarke is not a success in the practise of law because he lacks the ability to place his business activities on a plain business basis—he cannot, in other words, be mean. How he is told that in order to succeed he must learn to look the world in the face without thoughts of kindness and how he begins this new mode of business and how he finally finds the one and only girl in the person of Jane Hudson (Blanche Sweet), provides six reels of smashing situations and entertainments of the highest quality.

"The Meanest Man in the World" will please everybody that witnesses it. There is a comedy situation in every foot of production and each and every artist in the all-star cast have been given roles that suit their every talent. The production was directed by Edward F. Cline, who has been responsible for many successful pictures, the latest being Jackie Coogan's "Circus Days."

CHRISTIE STARS AND LIONS IN NEW COMEDY

Neal Burns, Natalie Joyce, and a cage full of particularly ferocious lions are serving out the laughs on the bill at the Royal Theatre to-day, to-morrow and Saturday. Burns is the leading comedian, Miss Joyce the feminine lead, the lions are a very lively and thrilling background to this Educational-Christie comedy, "Dandy Lions."

Others in the cast are Jay Belasco, Lila Leslie, Ward Caulfield, and George Pearce. The direction is by Archie Mayo.

AT THE REGENT

TOM MIX AND MOTION PICTURE COMPANY LIVE IN FOREST TWO MONTHS TO MAKE NEW FILM.

"Eyes of the Forest" Shows Athletic Fox Star in Thrilling Role of Aviator.

Deep in the big timber country of California, Tom Mix, a company of actors and a mechanical force lived for two months during the making of "Eyes of the Forest," which comes to the Regent Theatre for a three-day run, commencing to-day.

According to advance reports of this William Fox production, the sacrifice, if such it was, was worth the effort. Having pioneered in almost every field of daring, Mix will now make his bow as a full-fledged aviator.

Once before, in "Sky High, Mix defied the Fates and drove one of the big flying machines below the rim of the Grand Canyon crater, a hitherto unattempted feat.

In his latest picture, Mix will be seen as a forest ranger, an officer in the military service, whose duty it is to guard the forests from fire and lumber thieves. The girl in the case is Pauline Stark, whose work in "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court" won her film renown. Mix encounters her in a lonely forest shack, with her uncle, a back woods doctor. He learns she is wanted on a charge of killing her step-father. A band of lumber thieves is involved, and the complications of the plot, evolved by Shannon Fife, make the picture one tingling with action and suspense throughout.

Mix can usually be depended upon to pull an original stunt. In this picture he leaps from a racing horse, his own Tony, to an airplane, clutching the axle bar of the wheels below the wings and rising thousands of feet in the air. William Wellman directed the picture. In the cast are Sid Jordan, Ed Wallock, Tom Lingham, J. P. Lockney and Buster Gardner.

AT THE CAPITOL

BABY PEGGY IN FIRST FEATURE PICTURE IS ATTRACTION AT CAPITOL

Screen's Cutest Star Scores Big Success in Dandy Comedy-Drama of New York Life.

It's astorishing the amount of drama that can be woven around the life of a little child, logical drama that has a deep, human interest appeal; more astonishing it is to find a child whose personality can be moulded perfectly into intensely dramatic situations.

Baby Peggy Montgomery is almost literally storm tossed through many reels of drama in her first Universal-Jewel production, "The Darling of New York," which opens today at the Capitol Theatre. So carefully has baby star been handled throughout the picture that there is never a moment in the play when the interest lags. Attention is always centred on her or her rag doll which has such an important significance in the unfoldment of the story.

The story reflects the experiences of a four-year-old baby girl, of Italian and American parentage. The child is introduced as the daughter of an American woman who is dying in Italy. The mother entrusted her nurse with the care of her child, requesting that the baby be taken to her grandfather in America.

Dramatic menace is immediately woven into the story, for at the dock the nurse discovers that she has forgotten her money. The boat sails in a few minutes. Frantically the nurse asks a stranger to watch the child while she hurried away for her money. The stranger carried the little girl aboard the ship, into the steerage. The gates are closed to the nurse, who arrives too late to rescue the child.

The stranger is a member of a gang of international diamond smugglers, who becomes greatly attached to her.

He conceals the diamonds in the stuffing of the child's doll and escapes conviction, although he is arrested by the authorities when the boat docks in New York.

The little girl is taken by a pair of the diamond smuggler's pals. Her presence is obnoxious to the rough-neck leader of the crooks. He takes the child away, before he learns of the hidden diamonds.

There is plenty of comedy to balance the drama and the entire picture is filled with entertainment. A sensational fire scene is introduced as the anti-climax to the play, which is well handled.

King Baggot and Raymond L. Schrock wrote the story and Baggot directed the filming.

The entire cast is excellent, with the following players in addition to the baby star: Sheldon Lewis, Jack Quinn, Carl Stockdale, William H. Turner, Betty Francisco and Max Davidson.

HIGH-CLASS SINGING AND DANCING ACT IS THE CAPITOL VAUDEVILLE

VITAL STATISTICS FOR THE LAST MONTH

The vital statistics for the month of April show the same number of marriages as for Apirl, 1923, while there is a decrease of 15 births and 17 deaths. The births last year reached the high total of 54 for April, while for April, 1924, there were only 39, with 23 deaths last month. It means that the population increased 14 while last year the population decreased by 2. The deaths are down 17 as compared with last year. There were 18 marriages last year, and the same this year, which shows that 'Dan Cupid has been kept pretty busy.

STRAIGHT HAIR.

It is noticeable that straight hair is becoming more and more the smart thing to display. The Dutchcut with bangs about the front and a straight cut at the sides and back is a great favorite with the younger set.

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else all to pieces.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

DEACON DUBBS

The play "Deacon Dubbs From Sorghum Centre," was repeated last night in All Saints' Parish Hall before a capacity audience. All the characters showed great aptitude for their respective parts and brought out the best points of every scene, both comic and tragic. The scenery and properties were all that could be desired, and the stage with its old-fashioned well, garden benches, dash-churn, etc., well represented the yard of a country home.

The play opens with preparations for the sale of Rose Cottage by auction, the mortgage having been foreclosed by the villain, Rawdon Crawley (Mr. H. Freeman). Amos Coleman (Mr. H. A. Sisson) is consoling his fiancee, Rose Raleigh (Miss J. Maconomy) on the loss of her home when his uncle, Deacon Dubbs (Mr. Jas. Price) is announced. When Emily Dale (Miss L. Rootes) informs them that Crawley has discovered iron ore on the farm, the Deacon decides to lend Amos the money to bid it in. While they are inspecting the property the auctioneer, Major Moses McNutt (Mr. E. Wauby) arrives and deposits his "legal"(?) documents in the water cooler so he will not be compelled to drink water. On his return the Deacon takes a drink, and as it tastes familiar he soon becomes half seas over. While he is in this stage Miss Philipina Popover (Miss D. Worboy), his childhood sweetheart, discovers his identity and makes herself known. Just before the auction Crawley attempts to bribe Amos but is thrown in the well by the Deacon and kept there till the sale is over. Much comedy is introduced by the strenuous efforts of the Swede Girl Yennie Yensen (Mrs. H. A. Sisson) to buy the hired man Deuteronomy Jones (Mr. W. King).

The second act takes place in the same scene on the wedding day of Rose and Amos. The Deacon, inspired by the romance of the day, attempts to propose to Miss Philipina but is deceived by his mischievous niece, Trixie Coleman (Miss F. Elliott), who had stolen Miss Philipina's wig. Rawdon Crawley is attempting to persuade Emily Dale to elope when he discovers that Rose Raleigh is the girl he had married in the city three years before. Rose has believed him dead and has never told her friends of her marriage. He attempts to force her to come with him but is prevented by Amos, whom he attempts to stab, and is arrested as an escaped convict by the Deacon, who is a sheriff.

The curtain rises on a country husking bee. When train time comes all the huskers go down to meet the Deacon, who has been in New York. While they are absent Rawdon Crawley comes in wounded and in rags. He requires money to escape from the country. Rose gives him all she has, and he goes to the roundhouse to catch a train. After the Deacon tells his adventures on the street cars of New York all go into supper but the Deacon and Trixie. Trixie tells the Deacon that Philipina's is due to having her leg off in a mowing machine. When the Deacon is talking to Philipina he discovers that she had only been kicked by the cow. He thereupon gives her a ring. Deuteronomy proposes to Trixie but is turned down, and he then proposes to Yennie, who accepts him. All join in a square dance, and at the end the Major announces that Crawley was crushed by a train so all the shadows of their life are passed.

Special mention is due to the village quartette, Messrs. G. East, S. W. Willis, S. Willis and J. Raybould. Between the acts vocal solos were given by Messrs. Willis and Stazicker, and a violin solo by Master J. Gatfield. Mrs. Logan acted as accompanist.

The thanks of the management are due to all those who supplied scenery and properties, also to all the musicians.

TO-DAY'S QUOTATIONS AND OPINION AND REVIEWS OF THE MARKETS.

MARKET LETTER.

The market seems contended to just mark time until a clear conception of summer trade comes to view. On the other hand while general conditions are spotty, it is evident that in a few lines, there is more activity than ten days ago. This is especially true of the oil industry. Motor industry continues to slow up and there have been some further moderate recessions in steel. It now appears likely that a general loan will be floated for Germany in the United tSates in early fall. It is likely that a good market will be required for a background for this.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Sporting Editor of Examiner:

At the bouts which are staged in the G.W.V.A. Hall, there is a practice indulged in by a few thoughtless if not ignorant individuals, which is disgusting and shows a lack of the true spirit of sport, namely, the shouting of "Go after him!" "Wade into him!" etc. By such expressions these thoughtless persons feel they are helping the local boxer to victory but in reality they are defeating their own purpose, for such remarks are disconcerting to a boxer; it interferes with his best work not to mention the bad impression it leaves on the mind of the visiting mitt artist.

It is to be hoped that these individuals will see the folly of their conduct and refrain from such remarks in the future. "CAN."

LEADER OF PROGRESSIVE PARTY TO VOTE WITH GOVERNMENT ON BUDGET CONFIDENT OF PEOPLE'S APPROVAL

Robert Forke Declared the Tariff Changes a Step in the Right Direction—Budget Should Be Printed In Simple Language Understandable By the Man in the Street—Farmers Too Narrow-Minded Said Toronto Member —Continually Thinking About Themselves.

GARLAND CRITICIZES GOVERNMENT

OTTAWA, May 2.—(Canadian Press).—Robert Forke, Progressive Leader, yesterday annnounced that he would support the Government's Budget proposals. In a two-hour speech Mr. Forke made it clear that he thought the tariff changes were in the right direction and merited the support of the group which he leads. He was equally clear in his declaration that he did not regard the amendment of J. S. Woodsworth calling for an immediate reduction in the tariff on necessaries of life, including foodstuffs, clothing and building materials, as being in the best interests of the Progressives.

"It has seemed to me that if I voted for the amendment, which in reality would be vote of want of confidence, that I would have to vote against the Budget also. That, I think, would be a mistake under present conditions,' asserted Mr. Forke. He realized that in certain sections of the country there would be wonderment that he should not be prepared to support an amendment calling for reduction on the necessities of life. However, he felt that when full information was before the people of Canada he would have the approval of the great mass in the course which he was pursuing.

Mr. Forke's speech was featured by a decided denial that he was bound by any "bargain" or arrangement with the Liberals which influenced his decision.

More Than Bookkeeping.

He thought the Conservatives had gone far in saying that the Budget surplus this year was only a matter of bookkeeping. He thought there must be something more behind it. He regarded the Budget as a step forward. Canada had turned the corner and started in a new direction, and he hoped the Government would continue in that direction.

But he agreed with the member from Brome (A. R. McMaster) that there was no reason why the Budget should not be presented in simple language, which could be understood by the man on the street. The financial conditions of the country should be apparent by simple methods of bookkeeping. The plea that finance ministers must make their Budgets as favorable as possible in order to stimulate the credit of the country was not sound. Financial men who were backing Government bonds had their own way of analyzing financial statements, and could very soon find out whether surpluses were real or apparent. The man on the street might just as well be considered.

Dislikes Dumping Clause.

The idea that the Canadian home market could absorb Canadian produce was a dream, Mr. Forke maintained. He predicted that there would bbe a change in the tariff policy of the United States before long.

"I must say that politically things look brighter to me in the Dominion then they have for some time past," said Mr. Forke. "But I am free to admit that there is something about this dumping clause that I don't alike. It places too much power in the hands of any minister who wants to go in for high protection. I hope the Government will have something further to say about that dumping clause before the House votes on the Budget."

"We have our faces towards the rising sun," said Mr. Forke in closing, "and the way is clear to the abolition of special privilege and equal rights to all. We of this group are not afraid to go forward in this direction.

Bid for Progressives

W. F. Garland, Conservative, Carleton, said that it was all very well for Mr. Forke to deny that there had been any bargaining. The reductions in the tariff had been a direct bid for Progressive support, and the Government knew it would get that support. He gave some figures showing the importations of farm produce from the United States last year and said that agriculture was suffering from low tariff measures.

Mr. Garland protested against the admission into Canada duty-free of chicks which were labelled for the improvement of Canadian poultry stock. A very great proportion of these chicks were not select stock and did not have a beneficial effect on Canadian poultry.

The Government used some strange methods in implementing its policy of economy, Mr. Garland claimed. It bought and rented buildings "from those who were friendly with it at election time," instead of putting up adequate buildings which it would own. Its civil service economies appeared to consist in discharging the lower paid clerks, while those in receipt of larger salaries were not disturbed. He argued that the present immigration policy was quite unsatisfactory as indicated by the fact that people were leaving this country at the rate of 500 a day.

Claim from Toronto

D. Spence (Conservative, Parkdale) urged the necessity for the building of the Toronto railway viaduct. The Canadian Pacific Railway was ready. It remained for Parliament to vote the National Railways' share of the expense. He regretted that the Government had not given a better reception to the delegation which came down this spring to ask for support for the viaduct. It was urgently needed for the safety of Toronto citizens and the better industrial development of the city.

Mr. Spence said that 900 acres of valuable property were cut off by the level crossings from the city of Toronto. It would take five years to build the viaduct. The Government should honor its obligations to carry its share of the viaduct, as the C. P. R. was prepared to do.

He found it impossible to congratulate the Acting Minister of Finance on his Budget speech. It sounded the death knell of prosperity. The Liberals had sold out to the Progressives and would be known here after as the Liberal-Progressive party. No investor had confidence in the Government. He referred to a contract for iron valued at $150,000 which the International Harvester Co., had cancelled when the Budget speech was announced. Canada needed stability, not free trade. The tariff was keeping industry under suspend ed sentence.

Minds Too Narrow

It was "absolute rot" for the Progressives to try to compete with the American farmers without protection. "Your minds are too narrow," Mr. Spence told the Progressives, "you are continually thinking about yourselves and no one else."

Mr. Spence kept the House in a continual roar of laughter with his sallies about waste paper and the price of bacon. His cellar was full of unread publications sent by a paternal Government through the mails. So was everybody's else's. The printing bureau has sold 723 tons of waste paper in a year. Yet the Government had no money for necessary public works. But there was the Hotel Scribe and a man named Aronovici, neither of whom were needed

The West, he said, ten years ago, produced nothing but wheat. They took butter and all sorts of dairy products from the East. Now Alberta was producing the best butter in Canada and thousands of cars of poultry was coming into Montreal and Toronto from the prairie provinces.

Bargaining With Liberals Denied

OTTAWA, May 2.—(Canadian Press).—"I utterly deny and repudiate that there has been any bargaining between this group and any other group in this House," said Robert Forke, Progressive leader, in the course of the budget debate yesterday, referring to statements made in the House and on the political platform that the Government had bargained with the Progressives for their support.

"oS far as I know," added Mr. Forke, "no group in this house is under any obligation to support no group except the one which did me the honor to make me its leader.

"I made the statement. I stated at the opening of the session that the Government would get Progressive support when it brought down Progressive measures. I repeat that statement today."

He could not vote for the Woodsworth amendment because it meant nothing. To support it would compel him to vote against the budget, which he believed to be better for country than the "mere gesture" contained in the amendment.

CANADIAN WHEAT HIT BY U.S. TARIFF

Export Shrinks to Negligible Amount Under 12 Cent Increase In Duty.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The 12 cent increase in duty on wheat imports from Canada, placed in effect April 8, by Presidential order, has practically stopped such imports, it was shown in figures made avialable yesterday at the commerce department. Reports for last week show an almost negligible amount of wheat imported. The duty was increased by President Coolidge from 30 to 42 cents a bushel under the flexible provisions of the tariff law.

The Commerce Department figures show that wheat imports from Canada for the week preceding April 6, were 2,260,000 bushels, while only 37,000 bushels were imported during the week after the order became effective.

Imports of wheat from Canada into bonded bills for grinding to be exported again, are not affected by the increased duty and are not included in the import figures.

Daylight Saving Voted By Montreal Council.

MONTREAL, May 2.— Daylight saving will prevail in Montreal from May 18 to September 28 this year, the City Council having adopted the proposal to advance the clock an hour upon a motion to that effect at a special meeting yesterday afternoon. The vote was close, eighteen voting for and sixteen against the motion.

Nine C.N.R. Sections Are Dispensed With.

LINDSAY, May 2.— At a meeting of the Midland division, Uxbridge sub-division and Whitby branch of the C. N. R. held in Lindsay this week, a number of important changes were made relative to the operation of sections.

Carrying out the policy of retrenchment announced by the management, nine sections on these divisions have been dispensed with, thereby lengthening some sections to seven and eight miles. This means that a considerable number of men will be out of employment, as in some cases the foremen and two men have to handle the work on longer sections. This policy, it is understood, is being adopted on other divisions of the system.

Bulpitt and Payne Deaths Echoed in British House

Delegation to Visit Canada This Summer For Information Regarding Condition Under Which Young Emigrants Are Placed For Employment--Enquiry Also Into Method of Their Selection.

LONDON, May 2.— (Canadian Press Cable.)—At question time in the House of Commons Thursday an echo was heard of the suicide of two English boys in Ontario last winter, Charles Bulpitt, on a farm near Goderich, and John Payne on a farm near Lindsay.

The parliamentary secretary for overseas trade, William Lunn, was asked whether the department intended to prevent the emigration of boys from British charitable institutions to the dominions or colonies unless the conditions of life therein were fully and satisfatcorily guaranteed beforehand and provision made for periodical supervision of such boys.

Secretary Lunn reminded the questioner that a delegation was to visit Canada for the purpose of obtaining first-hand information as to the conditions under which youthful emigrants were placed in employment in the dominion. This delegation, he said, would sail for Canada about the middle of July.

The overseas trade secretary also mentioned that he already had instituted an enquiry into the methods of selection of young emigrants by boards of guardians and voluntary societies.

R. Richardson, labor member for Houghton-le-Spring, Durham, interposed with the remark: "I have received complaints regarding the children of my constituency who were sent there (to Canada). May I ask the minister if he cannot go himself whether he would send his private secretary or someone connected with his department?"

Mr. Lunn replied that he thought it hardly likely he wold be able to accompany the delegation himself, but he would consider Mr. Richardson's suggestion.

SHIP STRANDED WITHOUT GUIDE

A Government Employee Carelessly Gave Wrong Information Respecting Position of Lightship In St. Lawrence River.

MONTREAL, May 2. — "The Agent directly responsible to the Dominion Government fell down lamentably and totally in the discharge of his duties," commented counsel representing the shipping federation of Canada, at the enquiry continued here Thursday into the stranding of the S.S. Cornishman, 46 miles east of Quebec on April 23.

In summing up the evidence, counsel went over the main points so far brought out in the investigation. He stated that Captain Calvert of the Cornishman when 56 miles from Quebec had wirelessed Theo. Beland, the Government agent at the port for information regarding the position of the lightship at the Lower Traverse and that that Beland had wirelessed in reply that the lightship was in position.

Mistake Not Corrected.

"Naturally," said counsel, "when Beland receives the early morning message over the tlephone from the Marconi office asking for information, he is abed. He gets the message, sends a reply to the effect that the lightship is actually in postion at the Lower Traverse and then goes back to bed, rolls over and has another nap. Later the agent wakes up and thought that perhaps he may have made a mistake in sending the message. Does he send to the Cornishman another one saying he had erred? No, he falls down here, and it is not until some considerable time later during which interval the steamer is speeding towards the point where the grounding took place, that Beland confers with his assistant Kane, and a wireless message is despatched conveying the uncomfortable news to Captani Calvert that the substitute lightship was at that time going to her post."

Statement Untrue.

Counsel added that the statement Beland made under oath to the effect that the wireless operator had told the Cornishman was at Father Point when the first message was sent has been found to be untrue in every respect. It has been clearly brought out that this was not so, and shows, or should show the court that the agent was either not wide awake or not "on" to his duties.

"The extraordianry neglect of duty and delay in appraising Captain Calvert of his (Beland's) terrible mistake, and in giving out wrong information is almost criminal—but I must not use that severe word."

When the enquiry was resumed yesterday L. R. Sundstrom, wireless operator at Quebec denied in evidence saying at any time that the Cornishman was at Father Point. "Mr. Beland must just have imagined that," he said.

NOTICE GIVEN TO CUT SENATE

Government Employees Receiving Large Salaries and Additional Allowances Mentioned For Enquiry Comparison of Legislative Representation.

OTTAWA, May 2.— (Canadian Press,)— Hon. George Bradbury gave notice in the Senate yesterday that he would inquire of the Government what they proposed to do with the Government employees who were paid high salaries and drew large allowances in addition to their salaries.

On the resolution of Senator Turiff to reduce the Senate by one-third, Senator Shaffner placed on record the total representation of the American Congress and State Legislatures as compared with the total representation in our federal Parliament and Provincial Legislature. In the United States the House of Representatives has 435 members, the Senate 96, State Assemblies 5,661, and State Senates 1,770, making a total of 7,962.

In Canada the Commons has 235, the Senate 96, our Provincial Legislatures 540, Quebec Legislative Council 24, Nova Scotia Legislative Council 31, a total of 916. He also pointed out that in Great Britain the House of Lords had a membership of 740 and the House of Commons of 615. He suggested that if we had legislative councils in all the provinces that we would have had the millions guaranteed for railway construction we have as in Quebec and Nova Scotia, the two provinces with Legislative Councils there were no railway guarantees.

SAND CARRIED AFAR.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., May 2.—Fine sand, which fell here recently and struck lightly to buildings, is believed to have been carried through the air for several hundred miles from the Texas panhandle. The sand gusts startled local citizens during a bad storm.

British Facisti Oppose Rowdyism

LONDON, May 2.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Just before a meeting in Kentish Town (London) under Liberal auspices in support of free speech was timed to begin yesterday two charabanc loads of sturdy young man wearing badges inscribed with a large "F" drove up. The leader explained that they were members of the British Fascisti. "There has been rowdyism at certain meetings recently and we intend to check any rowdyism at this one," he explained.

Donald MacLean, M.P., one of the speakers moved a resolution condemning the "recent interference by socialists with the British right to public meeting." The resolution was carried. References to the labor party caused periodic disturbances which were quickly quelled.

REV. DR. PIDGEON FINAL SPEAKER FOR UNIONISTS

Interest Maintained On Thursday In Church Union Hearing By the Private Bills Committee — Minority Trying to Coerce Majority, Contended Catholic Lawyer.

MR. DUFF'S DOUBTS.

OTTAWA, May 2. Canadian Press —"The highest court of appeal of a man in matters ecclesiastic is the highest authority in his own church."

This principle was laid down by Rev. Dr. Leslie Pidgeon, of Winnipeg (the last speaktr for the unionists) Thursday, before the Private Bills Committee of the House of Commons in the hearings on the Church Union Bill.

This principle, he affirmed, had been claimed in the Old Country, it had been conceded in the United States, and was there the law of the land, and it had been claimed in Canada as far back as 1844 by the Synod of the Church of Scotland for Canada.

Dr. Pidgeon paid special attention to the demand for another vote of the church members on the present bill. He maintained that under the constitution of the Presbyterian Church, the Union question could not properly be reopened. Moreover he stated, no official demand had been made for another vote in the proceedings of the General Assembly, and no demand for another vote had been made by the Presbyterian Church Association.

Standing Room only.

The proceedings of the committee throughout the day were listened to by an audience that again crowded the committee room, the aisles and spaces about the walls being filled with standing spectators. At times the spectators broke into applause or laughter, and at one point in the afternoon session Chairman McGiverin threatened to have the room cleared unless order were kept.

The entire day was given up to statements by advocates of the bill. Four spokesmen were heard, including G. W. Mason, K.C., and Aime Geoffrion, K. C., on the legal aspects of the bill, while Principal Oliver of Saskatchewan, set the union situation in the west before the committee, and Dr. Pidgeon of Winnipeg, devoted himself chiefly to the regularity of the procedure in the Presbyterian church.

All the witnesses were insistently cross-examined by members of the committee, who were opposed to the bill, and the accuracy of the statements made as to the existence of 1265 union charges with 3000 preaching places was definitely challenged by Wm. Duff of Lunenburg.

Had General Authority.

Mr. J. W. Mason, K. C., was recalled before the committee when the session opened, and filed the actual proceedings of the general assembly.

Col. M. MacLaren, Conservative, Presbyterian, of St. John, asked Mr. Mason to read the minutes from the proceedings of the general assembly authorizing Dr. Gandier to sign the petition on behalf of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Mason pointed out that in the draft act the moderator was one of those mentioned who should sign the petition. A resolution had also been passed giving authority to do all acts necessary to bring the legislation before the parliament of Canada.

"But his authority does not only rest there," declared Mr. Mason, who pointed out that in the rules of the church the moderator is required to sign any document which requires signature.

Col. MacLaren: "But was not the authority of the general assembly given to a committee?" "There was express authority to a committee and there was general authority to the moderator to do all acts necessary," replied Mr. Mason.

Col. MacLaren then addressed his questions to the provision for voting out of churches within six months.

"A somewhat similar provision was introduced in the case of the other provinces, is that the case." "In a number of other provinces."

"Are the terms in reference to the question of majority that I have referred to similar to the Ontario Act?"

"I think so in all respects, but my recollection is that they were exactly the same in the maritime provinces, except a peculiar condition in regard to pew holders, but that is entirely obsolete."

To Change Date.

"Yes, but what happens to the Presbyterian Church if the bill passes?" pursued Dr. MacLaren. "Does it

Child Smothered In Flood of Grain

PETERSON, Sask., May 2.—(Canadian Press)—After Claude Dessulniers and Arnold Irwin, 4, clambered into a hopper of the Northern Elevator Companys' elevator here on Tuesday they played about in the pile of grain for a few minutes, and then tried the levers. Before the grain from the storage bin above had stopped flowing, Claude was smothered to death and Arnold was only saved from suffocation by the frantic efforts of his mother who jumped into the hopper and desperately labored to keep the mountain flood from covering her boy's head.

Help arrived in a few minutes and the Irwin boy was released, little the worse for his adventure. The Dessulniers child was dead.

DEPRESSION IN MINE INDUSTRY

Dominion Coal Company Reports Lack of Orders—Prospect of Broken Time Confronts the Miners of Nova Scotia.

GLACE BAY, N.S., May 2—(Canadian Press).—Owing to depression in the coal market there is likely to be slack times at the collieries for a month or two at least. According to reliable reports from Montreal, the Dominion Coal Company has sold little or no coal in that market and if present prospects are an indication, there will be little Cape Breton coal sold this summer. The coal company has in the past largely depended on the Montreal market for summer activity but this summer it is apparent that other markets must be found. The company had sought markets in Holland where the feeling was that if the British coal strike came off, the Dominion Coal Company would receive large orders, but the threatened strike did not take place and hence this market has not materialized.

Some months ago the company, anticipating difficulty in selling coal this summer, made a contract with the Canadian National Railways regarding the removal of the 350,000 tons of coal placed at New Aberdeen. This coal is being sold to the city at a reduced price, so reports from Montreal state.

With Montreal being flooded with other coal and no overseas market in sight, the company is faced with the prospect of placing the mines on broken time and the miners can anticipate "no work whistles" to blow before the end of next week. According to reliable, but not official information, the mines will work from four to five days per week alternately.

SOCIALISTS OF MONTREAL HELD ANNUAL PARADE

Red Flags Displayed and Seized By Police to Be Stored Away With the Trophies of Other Years' Demonstrations — Only One Punch Handed Out.

MEETING AT NIGHT.

MONTREAL, May 2.—(Canadian Press).—Montreal Socialists carried out their traditional May Day parade Thursday and Montreal police performed their time-honored function of capturing the red flag. Three large blood-red emblems, two emergency flags hoisted on an open umbrella, the brilliant sash worn by Michael Buhay who headed the procession and the red trappings from two auto buses filled with women and children, fell to the police who despatched the booty to headquarters to be stored away with the May Day loot of other years.

Seven times the officers raided the mile-long line, for the Socialists had all kinds of fuses for concealing their colors. The seizures were made without trouble beyond one burly Red, who received a stiff punch on the jaw for resisting the police. Rain forced abandonment of the usual Champ de Mars speeches, but a mass meeting was held last night.

Protest in Council.

"I say that the repeated seizures of red flags are only provocative and lead the people from whom they were taken to wonder if there really is such liberty in Canada as they had been led to believe," said Alderman Joseph Schubert of St. Louis Ward, Labor member of the City Council, who rose in protest at the afternoon meeting of the Council in connection with seizures of the Red flags.

Mr. Schubert stated that Premier Ramsay MacDonald had participated in such demonstrations and considered that in itself would be sufficient justification for the May Day parade and the flags carried therein by the participants. He added that the red flag was a flag of a minority. "In this country and throughout the British Empire minorities are respected. There are religious and political minorities, and these people who walk on May Day are in minority and proud of their rights."

No comment was offered by any other member of the Council when Alderman Schubert resumed his seat.

FIRE STOPS DANCE.

DU BOISTOWN, Pa., May 2.—When the wild jangle of the fire alarm broke up the dancing party of the city firemen and their wives in the borough hall here, the women assisted their husbands in dragging the hose cart to the scene of the fire and in laying the hose.

ARCHDEANERY FINAL SESSION MILLBROOK

Interesting Papers Read at the Various Sessions --Synod Business.

MILLBROOK, May 2.—The final sessions of the conference of clergy of the Archdeanery of Peterboro, which has been meeting in Millbrook this week for the first time in over twenty years, were held here, when Archdeacon J. C. Davidson conducted a celebration of the Holy Communion in St. Thomas Church.

Adjournment was made to the Sunday School Hall for the remainder of the conference, the opening paper on "The Old Faith and Modernism," being given by Rev. T. G. Wallace, rector of St. Stephen's Church, Toronto. The speaker, who had evidently read widely and given much concentrated thought and effort to the preparation of his material, covered an immense amount of ground in the short space of half an hour, though he began his address by stating that the rector of a city church, because of the many and insistent calls upon his time, has but a limited opportunity for real study as compared with his brother minister in a country parish.

That modernism is rather a misleading term since this trend of thought has been in the church for centuries, was brought out in Mr. Wallace's paper, and the points of contrast between the type of modernism in the Roman Catholic Church and the so-called "liberal" party in the Church of England, were delineated in detail. Quotations from the writings of Dean Inge, of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, England, from "Lux Mundi," and other writers, both ancient and modern, were copiously given to make the position clear. Cardinal Newman has been spoken of as "the unwilling father of modernism in the Roman Catholic Church" because he it was who opened its doors to such a party within its fold. Man is incurably religious and apparently there have always been and always will be historical and dogmatic methods of Bible interpretation.

The opening sentence of the Prayer-Book expresses the attitude of the Anglican Church: "It hath been the wisdom of the Church of England ever since the first compiling of her public liturgy, to keep the mean between the two extremes of too much stiffness in refusing, or too much easiness in admitting, any variation from it." It is quite evidently recognized by those in high position in the Church that this movement, first spoken of as higher criticism and now called modernism, cannot be crushed by the mere exercise of authority but must be dealt with by education and a wise reasonableness. The speaker made an appeal for broadmindedness in judgment since to know the truth is the ultimate objective of all parties and to this the spirit of truth will guide.

Canon F. J. Sawers, of Cobourg, opened the discussion in a very able manner, mentioning as some of the Biblical facts which modernists find difficult to accept, the Virgin Birth, the "descent into hell," the Ascension and the resurrection of the body and pointing out that the difference between fact and the interpretation of the facts must be differentiated. There is decided comfort in the Master's promise, "If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine."

Asked by Rev. E. W. Pickford, of Brighton, what he considered the basic fact of the Incarnation, Canon Sawers replied, 'God was in Christ,' and the method of the Incarnation, the Virgin Birth, though this latter presents a real difficulty in many minds. Mr. Pickford said he would state the basic fact of Christianity as "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son," or in the words, "Jesus is God."

Dr. R. C. Blagrave, of St. John's Church, Peterboro, also contributed to the discussion in a most helpful manner, expressing the conviction that it is a difficult thing to seek truth absolutely devoid of some prejudice. Indeed, in his judgment, it has appeared practically impossible to completely clear the mind of pre-suppositions in establishing any line of belief or thought. That the Creed is a centre, not a circumference, and that there is no place nor justification for its re-statement, was emphasized by Dr. Blagrave, who pointed out that it has come down through 2,000 years of history and was formulated by abler thinkers than we have at the present time, possessing a familiarity of expressive language not equalled to-day. To pass it on impaired, or altered to succeeding generations, would invite condemnation, for those who come after us will resting the same right of interpretation according to the demands of their age, always remembering that the spiritual needs of mankind are unchanging.

Rural Dean O'Connor-Fenton, of Norwood, Rev. T. G. Wright of Whitby, and Rev. Mr. Wallace were the concluding speakers before Archdeacon Davidson declared the discussion closed. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Wallace for his excellent paper was moved by Canon Allen and warmly responded to by all present.

Business relating to the General and Diocesan Synods took up the closing hour of the morning session, adjournment for dinner being made at about 1 p.m. Meals during the conference were served at the home of Mrs. J. C. Kells, who kindly gave the use of her house for the purpose, the ladies of the congregation providing what was necessary in the way of food and service. Very pleasant social hours were spent during the space between sessions, former friendships being renewed and new ones formed.

The afternoon session on Wednesday was given up to a most inspiring round table conference, the subject being, "Factors in advancing the kingdom." Many of the clergy took part under the different headings into which the topic was divided, and at 5 p.m., after the usual votes of thanks had been passed, the gathering was brought to its conclusion. The general opinion, expressed by Venerable Archdeacon Davidson, and by the othed clergy, was that no more helpful conference has ever ween held in the history of the Archdeanery.

BLACKLEG

Leading Druggists throughout Ontario, inform us that already a great many farmers are buying Blacklegoids preparatory to vaccinating their cattle this spring. There is no question but that this is a good move; something that every owner of cattle ought to attend to before it is too late. Veterinarians are agreed that there is little use trying to treat a case of Blackleg. It is almost invariably fatal and a single case is likely to so inoculate the soil with germs that the infection will linger for years to come.

Since it is a well established fact that vaccination will protect against the disease, no one ought to neglect this precaution. The next time you have an opportunity, go to Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter Street, where you will get booklets and full instruction how to use Blackleg Vaccine.

BASEBALL MEN AT WARKWORTH

Schedule Arranged for the Season — Business Transacted.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

WARKWORTH, May 2.— The executive committee of the Northumberland County Baseball League held a meeting here last night to discuss the schedule for the season and for the transaction of other business. Besides Dr. McKee, who is president, and Gordon Lapp, secretary, both of Brighton, the members present were: C. H. Davidson, of Campbellford, C. W. Varcoe, of Roseneath, Kosy Zufelt and Harry Belford of Orland, and W. Wellman, of Hastings.

The first matter of business discussed was the question of the admission fee to be charged for league games, a war tax of two cents on each entrance ticket being one of the obligations that must be met by the clubs.

Messrs. Davidson and Wellman moved that each club be authorized to try its own rate of admission, but Messrs. Varcoe and Zufelt offered an amendment that a uniform rate be fixed of 25 or 27 cents, according as the clubs decided whether to pay the tax themselves or to charge it to the patrons. The amendment carried by a vote of three to two.

The Schedule.

Secretary Lapp found himself faced with the necessity of drawing up a new schedule when Warkworth decided to drop out of the League. He submitted a draft of the first half and this was adopted without change after a brief discussion. The team finishing in the lead in the first half of the schedule will represent the League in the O. B.A. play-off. The dates as agreed upon last night are as follows:

May 21—Hastings at Brighton; Colborne at Orlando; Roseneath at Campbellford.

May 26—Brighton at Roseneath; Campbellford at Colborne; Orland at Hastings.

May 28—Campbellford at Brighton; Roseneath at Orland; Colborne at Hastings.

June 4—Orland at Campbellford; Brighton at Colborne; Hastings at Roseneath.

June 11— Orland at Brighton; Campbellford at Hastings; Colborne at Roseneath.

June 18— Hastings at Orland; Roseneath at Colborne; Brighton at Campbellford.

June 25—Colborne at Brighton; Hastings at Campbellford; Orland at Rosenath.

July 2— Brighton at Hastings; Campbellford at Roseneath; Orland at Colborne.

July 9—Roseneath at Hastings; Brighton at Orland; Colborne at Campbellford.

July 16—Hastings at Colborne; Roseneath at Brighton; Campbellford at Orland.

Secretary Lapp will draw up the second part of the schedule and submit it to the various clubs for approval, sending printed copies to each.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Annual Inspection of the Millbrook Cadet Corps —Personals.

MILLBROOK, May 2.—The annual inspection of the local Cadet Corp took place in the armouries on Wednesday at 2.30 p.m. Captain W. S. Heron, of headquarters staff, Kingston, being the inspecting officer.

Over sixty cadets were on parade, the Corp being divided into three groups, No. 1 platoon, signallers, under Lieutenant R. Shaw, No. 2 platoon, rifles, under Lieutenant Ewart Tucker, and No 3 platoon, juniors, under Lieutenant J. Larmer, went through their respective drills in a most creditable manner. Captain Heron, in his address, warmly congratulated Instruction Officer, Lieutenant E. E. Doxsee, upon the excellent work done, and expressed himself as being well pleased with the manner in which the boys had acquitted themselves.

Brief addresses were also made by Miss H. Todd, principal of the Continuation School, A.A. Smith, secretary-treasurer of the school board, and by Lieutenant Doxsee.

The inspection was brought to a close with three hearty cheers for the King, followed by three cheers for Lieutenant Doxsee.

Dr. S. W. Clarke, of Lindsay, was in town on Sunday motoring over with Rev. A. R. Sanderson of Cannington, who preached morning and evening in the Methodist Church, and also taking the service at Fallis Line in the afternoon. Dr. Clarke called on many of his old friends while in town.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Ingram, Mr. and Mrs. J. Steele, Messrs. W. G. and John Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. F. Rowen and son, were among those from Millbrook who attended the funeral of the late Miss Jennie Hadden of Bethany, this week.

Miss Currie, of Omemee, is visiting the Misses Mary and Annie Kells.

Mr. Louis Wood, a former resident of Cavan west of Millbrook, was in town this week motoring over from Bowmanville with the rector, Rev. G. G. Postlethwaite, who was in attendance at the Archdeanery Conference in St. Thomas church.

Mr. Herb Trick has removed his family from Millbrook to Campbellford to reside, having secured a position as sectionman on the railway at that point.

The first of the Thursday half holidays, which begin in May and continue until the last of September, was observed by the closing of all business places on Thursday, May 1st. For the convenience of their customers, the stores will now keep open on Wednesday evenings while the half holidays continue.

Mrs. F. McIvor, who has been with her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Blair, of Lindsay, for the past three months has returned home.

The Easter music, which was repeated by the choir of the Methodist church, by special request, after the regular service on Sunday evening, drew a large congregation, which was thoroughly appreciative of the musical treat.

The local branch of the Fish and Game Protective Association has now a membership of about 60, including a number of ladies, and the list is growing constantly. At a meeting of the executive held this week it was decided to give prizes of the value of four dollars each for the largest lunge, pickerel, bass or brook trout caught within a radius of twenty miles of Millbrook; competition to be open to members only. Pamphlets will be widely circulated explaining the object of the association and setting forth the natural beauties of Millbrook and vicinity, as well as the facilities for sport which the neighborhood affords. J. N. McGill is the president of the local branch and J. Arthur Vance, secretary-treasurer.

She was a faithful and devoted member of the Immaculate Conception Church, East City, for a number of years.

The funeral announcements will be made later.

WEDDING BELLS

ENGLISH—GEARIN.

St. Jerome's R. C. Church, Warkworth, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday, April 30th, when Kathleen, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Gearin, became the bride of Thomas Ambrose English, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael English, of Norwood. Rev. Father Ferguson officiated.

The bride was becomingly attired in fawn tricotine suit with hat and shoes to match, and carried ophelia roses. She was assisted as bridesmaid by Miss Christena Boyle, who wore a gown of sand canton and brocaded crepe and sand hat. Mr. William English, of Windsor, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents. Later Mr. and Mrs. English left on a short honeymoon, and on their return will reside near Norwood.

Previous to the wedding a miscellaneous shower was held at the bride's home. The many gifts testified to the popularity of the young couple.

NO WORD WAS RECEIVED FROM AMERICAN FLIERS

BREMERTON, Washington, May 2. — No report has been received at the navy wireless station here from Chignik, Alaska, regarding the probable fate of Major Frederick L. Martin, commanding the United States Aerial Squadron encircling the globe, and his mechanician, Sergt. Harvey, who left that point at eleven oclock on Wednesday morning, for Dutch Harbor.

REV. DR. PIDGEON

go into union immediately upon the signature of His Excellency being affixed to the bill?"

"The bill fixes a date on which union shall come into effect," replied Mr. Mason. "That will obviously have to be changed."

"When the date is fixed," asked Dr. MacLaren, "does the Presbyterian church enter the union at once?"

"Undoubtedly. If it doesn't there will be no union."

"But if it enters, what becomes of the people and the congregations who do not enter?" "I have enquired into the basis of union of 1875 and I find that the same situation existed then."

Defines Presbyterianism.

Mr. Mason went on to assert that according to the bill of 1875 at the Presbyterian union the dissenting congregations weer free to continue as Presbyterian churches and did so continue to function.

"In cases where they were numerous enough to do so they formed synods and functioned outside, until later they came into the union.

"Presbyterianism," he defined, "is not a form of worship, it is a form of church government."

At this there was a laugh from the antis.

"We take the view that the same procedure would be taken now as was followed then?" said Mr. Mason. "We could have suggested some form of organization for the non-concurring congregations, but such a thing would be a gratuitous thing and the non-concurring people might probably resent it.'

Aime Geoffrion, K. C., Speaks.

There was a loud buzz throughout the room when the chairman announced that Aime Geoffrion, K. C., a well-known French-Canadan, and Roman Catholic lawyer, would address the committee on behalf of the unionists.

"The point,' said Mr. Geoffrion, "which I wish to state in a few words is that the claim has been made throughout that there was an attempt to coerce the minority. Judging from the attitude it was more like a minority trying to coerce a majority. Going a little further on that point I respectfully suggest that what has to be considered here is whether you will respect the fundamental claim of the three churches, and every church, to have its own rules.

"I respect what has been said by a member of a committee that a study of the rules is important. I gather that the anti-unionists don't challenge our right to unite provided that the uniting would not involve an alteration in doctrine or discipline."

Mr. Geoffrion in proof of his statement produced a statement of claim of the anti-unionist against the unionist committee. From this he read that the Presbyterian Church was a church of Christ, having its origin on the 15th of June, 1875, by the union of four Presbyterian churches in Canada, consummated by the church courts.

"The church, a minority of which is now opposing union, was born of union," declared Mr. Geoffrion. "They could suggest that the four previous churches did not preseve its doctrine."

Mr. Geoffrion further quoted from the anti-unionist pleadings, saying that for many years there has been an agitation for union. They didn't protest against it, but said that the understanding was that it would not be effected unless the membership was practically unanimous.

Mr. Goeffrion read from the rules of the church, the enabling clause and the barrier act. The latter, it was quite clear, is a barrier on the exercise of the powers of the assembly which the Presbyteries, not the people, may invoke. To be able to change doctrine, the barrier act must be overcome.

"If there is power to unite, which cannot be denied, and there is power to change the doctrine there is power to unite while changing the doctrine, insisted the speaker.

Opponents to union would no doubt quote the case of the Wee Frees but Mr. Geoffrion declared the case was totally different to this one. They had only a barrier act and no enablying clause as here. Here we have the power to change the doctrine and therefore the Wee Free argument does not apply here.

Like a Plebiscite.

Mr. Geoffrion referred to certain analogies which had been drawn between the amalgamation proposed and company or corporation business The analogy was more difficult than that, he declared. The proper analogy would be found in a vote of parliament or in a plebicite. The members of parliament could call for a plebicite or not, as they saw fit. Similarly, the presbytery under its assembly was all powerful.

1284 Union Charges

Principal Oliver stated that the total number of union charges in Canada now was 1,284. He had with him the names of 1,243 of these. He dealt specially with the case of Nova Scotia, where William Duff had challenged the accuracy of the map of union churches. He said the maps had been prepared on the basis of information supplied by superintendents of missions in the negotiating churches. He read a letter from Rev. R. W. Ross, home mission convenor for the Halifax presbytery, that "my map is quite correct."

Gordon Wilson read a clause from the bill stating that the union may fittingly be described as national" and asked if that implied an established church.

"No," said Dr. Oliver. He believed that the Union Church was to me a "church dominion-wide ministering to the good of Canada."

Mr. Wilson:—"I'll accept that because I have to."

In reply to questions regarding the number of union charges in Saskatchewan, Dr. Oliver said that there were in that province thirty local independent union charges, 350 co-operating churches and 60 in double affiliation. Mr. Wilson asked where these churches got the right to use the term "union."

Dr. Oliver:—"They simply take it."

Mr. Wilson:—"Then you are using the term without the authority of parliament?"

Dr. Oliver:—"Yes, I am using it without the authority of parliament."

Map Accurate

Mr. Wilson asked about the accuracy of the maps circulated to the committee showing union charges and Presbyterian Churches. He asked if Dr Oliver was aware that in Nova Scotia there were Presbyterian ministers and congregations that did not appear on the map submitted.

Dr. Oliver said he was not in touch with Nova Scotia, he had accepted the map as being substantially correct.

William Duff proceeded to renew his challenge of the accuracy of the Nova Scotia map. Hantsport was marked "union"; Mr. Duff said it was Presbyterian. He gave a few other examples of inaccuracy, winding up with mention of Stairs Memorial Church in Dartmouth, marked as "union."

"Would you be surprised to hear that my brother-in-law is the preacher there?'

There was an outburst of laughter among the audience, which brought a sharp warning from the chair.

"The room will be cleared if this continues,' he said.

Mr. Duff then turned to discuss union in Saskatchewan and asked Dr Oliver if the Unionists in that province would go back from Union if the province would go back from Union if the present bill did not pass.

"We cannot help ourselves," was the reply. "We have no option. But we would go on with hardships."

Mr. Duff then pressed the witness to say whether he would object to amendments to the bill, under which Presbyterian churches should be permitted to vote themselves into the United Church instead of voting themselves out.

"I would object," answered Dr. Oliver.

TO VISIT CAMPBELLFORD

CAMPBELLFORD, May 2. — A foot ball team from the Canadian Woollens, Peterborough, will be here Saturday afternoon, to play the newly organized team from Christ Church. This game was scheduled for two weeks ago, but was postponed on account of rain.

It is announced that the football team of St. Mary's Church will go to Peterborough Saturday for a game with a church team in that "Lefty" White, well-known lacrosse player, left for Havelock last night to establish a residence so as to be eligible to play with the team of that village this season.

IN MEMORIAM

ADAMS—In loving memory of our dear mother, Ann Jane Adams, who passed away, May 1, 1921.
The depth of sorrow cannot tell
The loss of one we loved so well;
And while she sleep a peaceful sleep
Her memory we shall always keep.
Her smiling face to us so dear,
Her gentle footsteps no more we hear,
Her willing hands and face so sweet
However long our lives may last,
Whatever joy or grief be ours,
We will remember you.
—Sadly missed by son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Adams.

FRIDAY, MAY 2, 1924.

SHOULD BE CHANGED.

That the group system does not fit into the present rules of procedure in the House of Commons is evident from the tangle caused by the Woodsworth amendment.

The rule that only one amendment can be made to a budget, it is clear, was never intended to meet a situation such as at present exists in Parliament.

It was necessary under the two-party system, for without such a safeguard an Opposition, if it wished to tie up the business of the House, could introduce amendment after amendment.

But the circumstances are entirely different at present with four groups, Liberals, Conservatives, Progressives and Labour, in Parliament.

Each of these groups should have an opportunity of setting its views before the House by means of an amendment.

Instead the one-amendment-rule has resulted in a party of only two members, representing but a few thousand electors, by rushing in a surprise motion, preventing the official Opposition from introducing an amendment voicing its views upon the Budget.

The rule is absolete and should be amended in fairness to the parties which now comprise the membership of the House.

DARING THE FALLS.

Some time ago it was announced that Bobby Leach, who some years ago made the trip over Niagara Falls in a barrel, was contemplating the attempt of a similar trip in a huge rubber ball.

A report from Niagara Falls, however, announces that the authorities will forbid the feat being attempted.

It is to be hoped that the latter report is true.

No useful purpose would be accomplished if Leach did succeed in daring the mighty cataract once again, and the chances are that he would lose his life rather than take the drop in safety.

There never was a time when there was justification for this kind of foolhardiness, and to permit anything of the kind now would be to admit that our civilization is not so far advanced as we are fond of boasting that it is.

Leach tried the experiment once and his life was spared.

He should have sufficient gratitude in his make-up to keep him from ever attempting such a thing again, and if he hasn't the authorities are well advised in forbidding him to risk his life in this manner.

There are enough chances of disaster in ordinary life without drifting over Niagara Falls in a rubber ball.

SHOULD BE PUBLISHED.

The Toronto Transportation Commission has been taken to task by Mr. ustice Latchford for publishing its annual financial report in the newspapers on the ground that the money spent in this way was wasted.

Ignoring the fact that the publication of these statistics is required by an Ontario statute, it may be said that the judge's opinion in this regard is not likely to be generally shared.

The Examiner feels that in the case of all public bodies handling the money of the people the full details of the financial operations should be published each year.

The people want the information, and they are entitled to it—and they will not object to paying the expenses involved in the publication of the facts.

The newspapers cannot be expected to print this detailed information without being paid for the space it occupies.

All of them everywhere publish without charge a vast amount of information each year about public bodies and a great deal of the time of their staffs and a large portion of the available space in their columns is devoted to the preparation and publishing of such news in the public interest.

Financial statements such as the one attacked by Mr. Justice Latchford should be given to the public, and the cheapest and most effective way of reaching the people is to print them an advertisement in the daily newspapers.

FARM PROBLEMS.

The inquiry into agricultural conditions in Ontario by a special committee of the Legislature should at least achieve a useful purpose in bringing forth a large amount of important information as to farm problems.

The difficulty of securing an adequate supply of farm labour and the desire of farmers to enjoy more of the conveniences that are possessed by their city friends will be found two of the pressing grievances.

But probably the most serious complaint will be the difference in the price of the things the farmer sells, as compared with the prices he is called upon to pay for the commodities he has to buy.

Something is wrong with the system of marketing and distribution.

In many articles there is too great a spread between the price received by the producer and that paid by the consumer.

The farmer who sells a dozen eggs for 20c and then finds himself being called upon to pay 40c for a couple of fried eggs in a city restaurant goes home firmly convinced that there is something decidedly awry in the general scheme of things.

The bonusing of rural power lines will help to bring electric energy to many farmers who have hitherto been shut off from this blessing because of its prohibitive cost, and the motor car, the radio and gramaphone have brought to many a farm home a new pleasure in life.

But many things remain to be done, and the most important seems to be an improved system of distribution that will give the man in the country a better position financially without going too far in the other direction and throwing the burden upon the shoulders of the consumer.

AUSTRALASIAN NAVAL DEFENCE.

If any doubt existed in the minds of those who favored the abandonment of the Singapore base as to the strength and sincerity of the Australian attitude, it must have been rudely dispelled by the news from New Zealand and from Melbourne, says the Montreal Star. The island Dominion intends to maintain a second cruiser in place of the contribution she had offered to the Singapore scheme. The Australian Commonwealth is determined to establish a complete self-contained naval force to provide the protection the Singapore base would have afforded. There will be four fast cruisers in addition to long-distance submarines and smaller ships. There will be aeroplane bases along the coast and new munition plants, in addition to a reorganization of land forces and of railway equipment to facilitate the swift movements of troops.

This is the most elaborate and determined scheme for naval defence ever put forward in Australia. It has the enthusiastic endorsation of the press, and it is likely to be just as whole-heartedly supported by the people. The Australasian is awake to the responsibilities of his geographical position, and he understands its strategic features. He realizes, as nobody living in any other part of the Empire can realize, that if the Singapore base, which would have ensured effective and swift protection for Australian interests in peace or in war, is to be allowed finally to drop, he must take steps to make good that protection himself, if Australia is to continue to exist with any sense of security. So he is going about the task in the most practical manner possible, losing no time and wasting no energy on fruitless protests to the British Government over Singapore.

A CRITICAL BRITISH BUDGET.

The secrets of the British Budget are so carefully guarded that although Britain's first Labor Chancellor of the Exchequer is to introduce his taxation proposals and reductions tomorrow, the London newspapers even now seem to be diffident about making prophecies and predictions.

It is indeed easier to foretell what these proposals will not be than what they will be. Two years ago it could have been forecast with a fair amount of certainty that Labor's first financial proposals would at least be as radical as Lloyd George's revolutionary and "antiducal" Budget of 1909, and that it would pivot upon a levy on Capital.

The Capital levy was blotted out from the Labor program on the day that Ramsay MacDonald returned to Parliament with so large a following that his early accession to power was assured. Moreover, the "landed gentry" are better targets for game when the shots are fired from the soap-box of Hyde Park than when spoken by a responsible Minister of the Crown who must depend on the Liberals and on many old Whig families for continuance in office.

With another general election not only likely this year but almost assured, the Budget proposals to be announced tomorrow will no doubt take on what is known as a "popular" tinge. It will almost certainly be a "poor man's budget," with a reduction of two pence or three pence a pound off tea and at least half that amount off sugar. There has also been considerable agitation for the abolition of the entertainment tax and it would no doubt be popular (and therefore vote-getting) for a Government so to arrange its taxation that it can make family attendance at the movies a little cheaper. As there is no desire to conciliate the Tories, there will likely be heavy increases in the death duties, with no income tax relief and the taxation in modified form of large estates.

Yet the crux of the Budget will be found in the question as to whether or not the Chancellor will remove the preferences given under the Safeguarding of Industries Act of 1921 and known as the McKenna duties. Part I of this bill provided for the imposition of a customs duty amounting to thirty-three and one-third per cent. ad valorem on certain commodities, consisting for the most part of scientific instruments, chemicals, glassware and synthetic organic compounds. Automobiles and later watches and clocks were included in this Act under the anti-dumping clauses.

Now the Labor Government finds itself in something of a dilemma with regard to these McKenna duties. If it abolishes them, as seems likely, there will be considerable hostility from the automobile industry, which claims that the country will be flooded with cheap American cars, and from some of their own followers who as representing industrial districts are not at all assured of the sacrosanctity of Free Trade. To continue them will be to flaunt a red rag in the face of Liberalism, and may bring on a crisis.

The life of the Ministry will probably depend on the skilful handling of this vital element of the Budget. —Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Toronto plasterers want $11 per day. Apparently the attitude of the employers is best expressed by the slang phrase, "Try and get it."

The Queen of the May arrived in a turbulent mood yesterday, but she will have a warm smile before long.

Referring to the demand of plasterers for $1.40 per hour, the Globe remarks that it is not strange that substitutes for plaster finish are becoming popular.

Peterborough's musical organizations are proving as successful in putting this city on the music map as her baseball teams were in putting Peterborough firmly on the sporting map last season.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Wonder what has become of the old-fashioned congressman who was going to reduce our taxes?

In Sedalia, Mo., two sisters married two brothers, which makes them sister-in-laws, so now they can fuss more than ever.

Russia is getting cleaned up and wants to trade with us so we might buy enough whiskers to make hair mattresses popular again.

In Washington, when you see a congressman smiling you know the charges against him have been dismissed.

The bank cashier worries us. He sits in a cage behind bars and every time he takes our money the cage looks like a cell.

The Dawes report, says another expert, will turn Germany upside down. This is nice. She has been on her car a long time.

The world gets better. You seldom see a motorcycle now.

TORONTO, May 1.—There was but a very small market today, with only three or four loads of cattle to clean up, including a few held-overs. There was practically no change in prices.

Prospects are looking fair for a good steady market next week. Farmers are getting busy at their field work, and probably have already pretty well marketed their spare cattle. In that case there will not be too heavy runs.

There is a good steady demand for choice butcher cattle for the domestic trade.

As there are two more boats scheduled for Liverpool next week, there will be an active export market for the heavy beef cattle.

In the butcher section choice finished steers and heifers steady to firm, with a keen demand. Common rough butcher slow and slightly lower.

Fat cows steady to firm.

Bulls steady.

Calves, choice, steady; common easier.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs 25c lower at $7.25 f.o.b., and $8.15 off cars.

Quotations:

Export cattle, choice heavy steers, $7.50 to $8.50; heifers, $7 to $7.50; bulls, $4-$4.75.

Choice butchers, steady to firm, $7 to $7.50.

Calves easier, $9 to $10.

Choice fat cows steady to strong, $4.50 to $5.50.

Sheep, choice, steady, $8 to $9.

Lambs, yearlings, clipped, $12 to $14; with wool, $15 to $16; spring lamsb, $14 to $15.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, May 1.— Sterling exchange rates were quoted here to-day:

Demand 4.4563.

Cables 4.4600.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, May 1. — Receipts continue to increase. Offerings of prairie province eggs on the eastern markets are lighter. On the Montreal market it is reported that a car of prairie province firsts sold at 23 f.o.b. Brandon and a car of seconds was offered at 18 f.o.b. Winnipeg.

Toronto jobbing fresh extras 28 to 29, firsts 26 to 27, seconds 24.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 1.— With purchase of wheat here for mills, the best in some weeks, and with new private crop estimates bullish, the wheat market to-day scored a moderate advance. Prices closed firm, 1-4 and 3-8c. to 3-4 and 7-8c. net higher, May $1.03 7-8 to $1.03 7-8 and $1.04, and July $1.05 7-8 to $1.06. Corn finished at 1-8c. off to 1-4c. gain; oats at 1-4c. decline to 1-8c. advance, and provisions showing a rise of 2c. to ten cents.

According to a leading crop expert, the domestic spring wheat acreage this season has been reduced to 16,400,000 acres, the smallest total since 1897. Other unofficial crop figures issued to-day suggested a domestic winter wheat yield fo 560,000,000 bushels, about 12,000,000 bushels less than was harvested in 1923. Moreover, reports were at hand that Canadian and Argentine offerings at Liverpool were dearer, that Germany was in need of much wheat, and that the 1923 wheat crop in France had been greatly over-estimated.

FISH FOR SMELTS.

KELSO, Wash., May 2.—All sorts of makeshift nets and dippers are used by the hundreds of fishermen who line the banks of the Sandy River here daily to scoop up smelts. The smelts make their annual run from salt water to the headwaters of the Sandy in solid masses, often packing the shallow rapids. No other western river is known to contain these six-inch fish.

HASTINGS AND THE DISTRICT

One Hundred Present at a Dance on Wednesday Evening.

HASTINGS, May 1. — At the dance held in Lynch's hall on Wednesday evening, the proceeds were donated to the Dorontal Chapter, I. O.D.E., for war memorial purposes. Owing to the inclement weather the attendance was hardly up to expectations, but about one hundred guests were present.

The music was supplied by "The Star" orchestra, which is composed of local talent, and consisted of piano, violin, saxaphone and drums. Considerable credit is due the musicians as it is the first attempt they have made in public on such an occasion.

A rather unique guessing contest divided in two competitions, namely, A and B, were a part of the programme. Class A calling for who would purchase the first Star and Durant car in Hastings from May 1st, 1924 to June 31st, 1924.

From the number of names turned in it would indicate that a large number of cars will soon be sold on the Hastings teritory. The name of the winners will be published in local and district papers about the first week in July. Three prizes for the above will be given, first, car bumper, second motor meter and bar, third, heavy tourist tube.

The question in Class B was, What does it cost to operate a Star car for one mile. This contest aroused considerable interest and resulted in very close competition. W. H. Burkholder was the winner of the first prize in the latter, the correct percentage being 2.453, the competitor's estimate was 2.428 cents per mile. Second and third prizes were given and eleven contestants were next nearest. A draw was made necessary and the result was: Mr. J. Hurley drawing second and Mr. J. Knight of town, third. The prizes for this were: First, 30 x 3 1-2 cord tire, second, stop light, third, scuff plates.

Three representatives from the Durant Motor Sales were present, Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald of Peterborough, being unable to be present. Mr. C. Elliot was present to represent him, Mr. Selkirk of Peterborough and Mr. Harris of Toronto.

Finally found health in Kellogg's Bran after suffering long with constipation

Mr. Patch writes that Kellogg's Bran "solved his problem." It has solved the problem of constipation—mild and chronic—for thousands of others. It has brought relief when all else has failed because Kellogg's Bran is ALL bran. Nothing but ALL bran can be 100 per cent effective. Read Mr. Patch's letter:

Dear Sirs:

I have been a constant sufferer from constipation and have wondered what was the cause of it. I have tried about all the cereals I could think of, and finally tried Kellogg's Bran. This solved my problem. I feel 100 per cent better and I owe it to your Bran. . . . Thanking you very kindly for the great cereal, I am

Very respectfully,
Chester C. Patch.
(Address on Request.)

It rids them of the dangerous poisons that lead to other diseases. It is guaranteed to bring results, or your grocer will return your money.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is delicious with milk or cream. You will like its nut-like flavor—so different from ordinary, tasteless brans. Sprinkle it over the cereals. Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is made in Toronto, Canada and is served by the leading hotels and clubs everywhere. It is sold by all grocers.

STILL BELIEVES PLAN FOR RED ARROW TIRES SAYS LATE PRESIDENT

J.J. Turner Declares Faith In Walters and the Merchandizing Programme — Should Have Taken Longer Time — All the Directors Depended On Walters and Stockdale.

EVIDENCE ALL IN.

The cases for both plaintiffs and defendants in the suit against the four directors of Red Arrow Tires, Ltd., were closed last night with all the evidence in, and counsel argued the case before Mr. Justice Wright this morning. There were called yesterday J. A. O'Brien, J. R. McDonald, S. R. Armstrong, V. M. McCabe, P. P. Westbye, C. A. Ackerman, Leon Frazer and J. J. Turner. Mr. Turner had the longest examination in the hearing, spending altogether five hours and forty minutes in the witness box.

Mr. Turner demonstrated his belief in the project when he said yesterday that he has still faith in it, and only the speed with which it was sought to complete the sale of the stock caused the downfall of the company. If the work planned for a few months had been spread over a year he thought it would have succeeded.

S. R. Armstrong, City Clerk, said he had received information that impressed him favorably regarding the proposed company.

Vincent Martin McCabe, an employee of the McDonald Lumber Co., said he was in the office when Mr. Walters and Mr. Hayes called on Mr. McDonald and he heard Mr. Hayes tell Mr. McDonald he would like to see him take this thing up and become a shareholder. The visitors were in the office more than once and on one occasion Mr. Hayes told Mr. McDonald his name had been suggested as a director. He wanted Mr. McDonald to take stock so that he would be in a position to take the position.

Mr. Hall: "You evidently wish to create the impression that there were two interviews?"

"Yes."

The witness did not know whether Mr. McDonald had taken stock or not.

Favorably Impressed.

Peter P. Westbye, examined by Mr. Kerr, said he has experience in incorporated companies, being vice-president of William Hamilton Co. and a director of the Ackerman-Dawson Co. He became interested in Red Arrow Tires, Ltd., through City Clerk Armstrong, from whom he received an invitation to call in the city office. Walters made a good impression on the witness so far as rubber manufacture went, and showed he knew something about making tires. He impressed Mr. Westbye favorably regarding his capacity and honesty.

The merchandizing plan was explained at an interview.

Mr. Westbye paid in a cheque for one share on October 8, 1921, made out to Peterborough Securities Co. He testified to seeing the formulae at a meeting when they were handed over by Walters and recognized those produced in court.

Statements made by Messrs. Gillespie and McDonald regarding the dating of certain minutes were confirmed by the witness, who said he knew nothing of an agreement between Walters and Stockdale for the transferring of stock.

Mr. Westbye understood the contract with Stockdale meant that the latter would sell preferred stock at a commission of 25 per cent. He did not understand that Stockdale was to sell common stock.

Mr. Westbye's company was asked to put in a tender for boilers and smokestacks for the plant, and he was called to the architect's office to examine the plans. He was there as a representative of the William Hamilton Co. and not as a member of Red Arrow Tires.

"Had you as president of the William Hamilton Co. any projects in contemplation?"

"Yes."

"What were they?"

"Two boilers and a smokestack."

"Did you go there for the purpose of instructing the architect or finding out what the architect was doing with reference to your stock plans?"

"I wanted to see whether our stock plans of boilers would fit in."

He did not give Mr. Blackwell any advice, and in consequence of information gained at that interview the William Hamilton Co. later tendered on the equipment.

Before the tender of John E. Hayes & Sons was accepted the formulae and processes supplied by Walters were on hand. Mr. Hayes' agreements with Stockdale were unknown to the witness and it was not known that Mr. Hayes had loaned Stockdale $3,000.

Mr. Kerr: "Stockdale promised by a certain date to hand over $25,000 to the company. Can you tell me just how he managed to sidestep his promises?"

Mr. Westbye: "He promised and promised, next month and next week; he went to Buffalo to get money."

Mr. Kerr: "Did you believe him for a considerable length of time?"

Mr. Westbye: "I did. He said if he did not sell so much stock he would put in the money himself."

"It is charged that you were a party to a scheme to put out 184,000 share of common stock as paid up when they were not paid up?"

"I thought they were paid up by Mr. Walters through his formulae and processes."

"Because Walters took 184,000 shares of common stock and preferred shareholders came ahead of common, did that influence you in your opinion of Walters' honesty?"

"No."

"How was Walters with his common stock to get anything?"

"By making the company go."

"Did the company pay Walters for his organization work?"

"No."

There was no arrangement that the directors were to get 2,000 shares of common stock each from Walters. A certificate was issued to Mr. Walters for these 184,000 shares.

Relied on Walters.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hall, Mr. Westbye said no blue prints were produced by Mr. Walters with the formulae, and Mr. Westbye relied solely upon his statement regarding the value and worth of the formulae.

Mr. Hall: "Where are the share certificate books?"

Mr. Westbye: "I don't know."

Mr. Parmenter: "I suggest you ask Mr. Stockdale."

Mr. Hall: "I have traced him from three lock-ups in succession, Montreal, Ottawa and Brockville, and the last I heard he had been discharged from Brockville. I have been anxious to get him as a witness."

Charles Ackerman said in his belief the commission of 25 per cent. offered Stockdale for marketing the preferred stock was very reasonable considering the conditons. It would be very difficult to sell stock in a new company and the charge of 25 per cent. would be reasonable.

On Walters' Yacht.

Leon Frazer, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said in 1921 he had a communication from John Stockdale in Buffalo saying he had a client who was considering locating in Peterborough. The Industrial Commissioner, Mr. Armstrong, and Mr. Frazer went to Buffalo with Mr. Turner. They interviewed Mr. Walters first in Stockdale's office and later on Walters' yacht. He was considered there to be wealthy, and the impression Mr. Frazer gained was particularly favorable.

Mr. Frazer did not own an automobile, otherwise he would have been a stockholder, he said.

Mr. Frazer received in July, 1922, a letter from Joseph Rath asking information about Red Arrow Tire stock which he had purchased. He asked the market value at that time and intimated that he was a member of Buffalo Chamber of Commerce.

Still Has Faith.

J. J. Turner told of the visit to Buffalo, and said the conclusions of those who visited the promoters in Buffalo were favorable to the project.

One of the criterias of good faith was the fact that Walters, taking common stock in the company, could not gain anything unless the company paid, and the success of the company depended upon his formulae and efforts. Mr. Turner did not know at any time that Mr. Walters would transfer 100,000 of these shares to the directors. Mr. Walters insisted upon the directors taking the common stock shares. This was between January 24 and February 15.

Mr. Turner described the merchandizing plans proposed at the time.

Mr. Kerr: "From the standpoint of the merchandizing plans, have you lost faith."

Mr. Turner: "No."

Mr. Turner at the time the tender was let to Hayes had the formulae in his safe and was satisfied that Walters had fulfilled his agreement.

On November 16, 1921, Mr. Turner saw Mr. Hayes in the building, having been notified by telephone. Hayes did not attend the directors meeting. He had been very close with Stockdale and Walters nearly every day, morning, noon and night. The witness first learned of the secret agreements in this action. He did not know at the time of the sod turning that Mr. Hayes had not signed a formal conract. "I knew the security had not been put up. He objected or didn't wish to pay out the money, and in lieu he undertook to put up certain securities."

Mr. Hayes never told him he would not sign the contract because Mr. Walters' name appeared on the contract in place of an architect.

The reason for the work ceasing was the impossibility of getting customers fast enough. Mr. Hayes demanded money on December 15 and again at the end of the month he put in his claim without substantiation, and Curtis Bros. said they delivered less brick than Mr. Hayes said he had laid. Mr. Walters said, "How can I certify his check when he says he has laid more brick than was delivered."

Referring to Mr. Stockdale as a single and singular man, Mr. Turner said he had done all he could to bring Stockdale to make a report and to ensure the success of the factory.

"I worked night and day to make it a success. I had my reputation and the reputation of these other men who were associated with me.

"I haven't lost faith in Walters now. If he had only stuck with the job long enough he would have put it over. It was too big a proposition. If we had attempted to do it in twelve months it would have gone with a bang. It seemed feasible at the time.

"Anything I go into I go into it with my whole heart. I tried my very best to get these men to come to time and expended my own money on the work to make the company a success for the good of the community."

Mr. Turner did not receive the stock certificate books. Mr. McLaughlin a stranger in the community, must have been mistaken when he said he handed the books to him in his office, Mr. Turner said.

CROP REPORTS

Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the Head office of the Bank of Montreal from its Branches. The Branch Managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with Crop conditions in all sections or the districts mentioned.

General—The season is from ten days to two weeks late all over the Dominion except in British Columbia Work was well advanced last autumn, however, and seeding has commenced under favorable conditions in thte Prairie Provinces, Ontario and British Columbia. In the Maritime Provinces little work has been started to date, but this is largely offset by heavy autumn ploughing.

Prairie Provinces.

Seeding generally all will be later than last year, the seed bed throughout the Prairie Provinces is in excellent condition. Edmonton district—operations in full swing and seeding general this week. Calgary district—seeding about ten days later than last year, but should be general in a few days. Lethbridge district—seeding in south commenced under favorable conditions. Saskatoon district—seeding commenced but not likely to be general for another week Much ploughing to be done, acreage estimated about the same as last year Regina district—seeding was commenced in south eastern Saskatchewan but has been retarded by heavy snow fall. Wheat acreage probably less than last year. In the western section seeding is fairly general with indications of an acreage approximately same as last year, soil conditions good. Winnipeg district — operations begun early in April were stopped by snow storms followed by heavy rain. Weather now favourable Seeding in south expected to begin in few days and be general in ten days. Acreage under crop will probably be about same as last year.

Province of Quebec.

Fall ploughing was well above the average of the previous year on account of the mild and open autumn. Spring ploughing not yet general. Pastures wintered well and weather this spring has been favourable.

Province of Ontario.

The season is about ten days late owing to cold weather but as much ploughing was done last autumn work is well advanced. Seeding has commenced in most localities and is general on high land. Moisture is adequate. Fall wheat has wintered well and an average acreage is sown. Pastures and hay meadows are late but promising. Warmer weather is needed.

Maritime Provinces.

The spring is late and practically no work has been started, but much ploughing was done in the autumn which mild and open. The snow is not yet all gone but there is little frost. Apparently there is sufficient moisture for the crops in general. Apple trees have wintered well. An increased acreage of potatoes has been planned for New Brunswick.

Province of British Columbia.

Spring opened early and work on the land is well advanced. No winter damage is reported. Ploughing and seeding are about completed. Fall grain is in satisfactory condition Growth generally has been retarded by cool weather and lack of rain but is latterly improved. Potato plantings larger than usual. Several districts reports damage from recent frosts to fruit trees, principally early fruits. Small fruits and hops wintered well. Strawberries acreage reported reduced owing to poor returns last season. Pasturage is backwards.

DETROIT, May 2. —(Canadian Press.)—Uncle Sam is going to tag all motorists that cross on the Windsor and Walkerville ferries daily, to regulate the flow of motor traffic betwee Windsor and Detroit and to check up all automobiles. The view of elimination gangs of motor car thieves on both sides of the border who dispose of cars stolen in one country through agents in the other. Yellow tags will identify American tourists in Canada and blue tags will identify Canadain motorists in the United States.

KING'S MOTHER LOST EYE SIGHT

Dowager Queen Alexander Has Been Forced to Give Up Reading.

LONDON, May 2 — (British United Press). — Eye trouble has forced the Dowager Queen Alexandra, mother of King George, to give up reading, according to the Daily Graphic to-day, quoting "a high authority."

The journal makes refutation of a recent alarming report as to Her Majesty's health. It states that she may be described as "very fragile," but her condition is not alarming, and she has lately displayed much of her former vivacity with regard to the possibility of the King's winning his first Derby next month.

The Graphic adds that the present affliction is largely a nervous ailment, and that her medical and other attendants "will be greatly pleased when next Tuesday is passed, since it marks the fourteenth anniversary of the death of King Edward—always a very sad day with Her Majesty."

The Dowager Queen is now 79 years old.

CANADIAN SCHOOL TEXT BOOKS NEED DISARMAMENT

WASHINGTON, May 2.—(Canadian Press).—The school text books of Canada require "disarmament," Miss Agnes McPhail, member of the Canadian Parliament told the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom in an address last night.

She spoke on Canada's problems in relation to the world peace. The history and literature as taught to Canadian youths teemed with war sentiment and idealized the warrior, she said. She denounced cadet training in the curriculum of schools, and spoke for free trade by maintaining that the great boundary between Canada and the United States, while unguarded by a single soldier, contained a source of international irritation in the army of Customs officers.

SHAREHOLDERS OF HOME BANK TO PAY TWO MILLION

TORONTO, May 2.— (Canadian Press.) — Of the $2,000,000 due from Home Bank shareholders on double liability call, time for payment of which expired yesterday, barely $200,000 had been remitted up till last night. Very few of those who did so in person, vast majority being content to mail in their contributions. What action will be taken to speed up dilatory payments now rests with the liqiudators. It is expected, however, that a large number of remittances will be received within the next day or so, many of which are no doubt in the mails.

Better Movies His Hobby

George W. Bingham, though 78 years old, still is working for better movies. He has just perfected a new sprocketless camera and projector that uses perforationless film. It will permit the use of a single film for three years, he declares, while the life of a film is now three months. Bingham has been in themovie game more than 20 years, starting in the old Vitagraph days.

THEY'RE NEVER WIDE AWAKE

An old-time "shell game man," who used to follow the circuses and stuffs his pockets with shelkel of the yokels who thought they could guess which shell the little pea was under, says:

"I worked on the theory that nine people out of ten are never wide awake. They go around in a sort of trance. Being drowsy, they are constantly off their guard. It takes a powerful emotional stimulant to rouse them—a loud shout, shrill auto honk or a spectacular appeal to the eye or to the primitive emotions."

Anyone who drives a car and notices absent-minded jay-walkers crossing the street without watching for danger will agree with the theory that many people are in a trance state.

Another favorite form of trance is plodding along the wrong side of the walk, especially in a crowd. These peculiar specimens are so "dopey" that they do not even follow the line of resistance. Instead, on the wrong side, they fight their way strenuously into the oncoming stream of pedestrians.

Then there's the man who walks into an elevator ahead of a crowd, and instead of moving to the rear, stands close to the front, blocking most of the entrance.

Everyone has noticed that on some days he feels more wide awake and active than on others. One day he rises alert and keen as a razor, next day yawning, drowsy, thick-headed.

The "all in" sleepy feeling is usually caused by toxins—poisons that have accumulated in the bodys as a result of improper diet, lack of necessary exercise or insufficient sleep. Any of these three is as poisonous as over-indulgence in stimulants.

These piosons, fortunately "chloro form" the victim into a condition where he "can't keep his eyes open." Once asleep, nature begins throwing off the toxins and restoring his vitality and alertness.

Undoubtedly there are people who rarely, if ever, have a really wide-awake day. Their bodies are either so full of poisons or naturally function so languidly that they go about in a trance.

You seldom find a keen, alert, wide-awake man who is an out-and-out failure. His eager ambition may land him into disaster now and then, the same as running too fast, but in the long run he wins out.

And most failures—with, of course exceptions—are the victims of not being wide awake.

Success, therefore, is largely a matter of good health of the body and mind. Sensible food, outdoor exercise, fresh air, plenty of sleep—these are more than half the battle.

POSTAL EMPLOYEES WILL NOT ACCEPT GOVT. TERMS

OTTAWA, May 2— (Canadian Press.)— Recommendations of the Civil Service Commission to the Government as to revised salary schedule for the postal employees of Canada will not be accepted by the employees, says the Citizen this morning. A definite statement to this effect was made by G. R. Jackson, Toronto, President of the Dominion Federation of Postal Employees last night according to the paper.

"If the report as published in the Citizen is the substance of the official report from the Civil Service Commission, terms are entirely unsatisfactory and will not be accepted," said Mr. Jackson, who is in the capital.

The expense of maintaining schools in the United States is $9.80 for every person in the country.

HAIR DRESSER CHARGED WITH MAKING LADY BALD

NEW YORK, May 2. —(Canadian Press.)—Claiming that as a result of the treatment to her hair it turned pink and fell out, leaving her nearly bald, and that it caused the postponement of her marriage for many months, Mrs. Laura Brown is suing Fifth avenue hair dressers for $25,000.

Several of Mrs. Brown's friends corroborated her statements and testified that before the alleged visit to the hair dressing establishment Mrs. Brown had beautiful long hair. Defense is that Mrs. Frown had in some manner already ruined her hair when she came to them.

DYED LACE

Dyed lace is used extensively on lingeries this season. Nile green and apricot are two very popular shades the advantage of dyed lace is obvious since in order to keep colored silk garments fresh looking it is necessary to re-dip them occasionally and the lace is bound to become colored, so it might as well start out that way.

CHATHAM COMPOSERS IMMORTALIZE THE GIRLS

Outspoken Avowals of Their Affection Break Forth in Such Songs as "K-Katy, My B-Beautiful K-Katy"

ALTHOUGH given to vaunting its affluence in the matter of literary geniuses, Chatham takes a few moments off now and then to blow about its composers. For, though the rest of Canada may be unaware of the fact, Chatham lays claim at least to three musical composers who are definitely recognized in New York, the musical metropolis of America.

Stan. Merritt

The first and admittedly the most famous of these favored sons is Geoff O'Hara, a younger brother of F. C. T. O'Hara of the federal department of trade and commerce. Geoff at an early age developed pronounced musical proclivities. He resides now at Yonkers, N. Y., and spends a good part of his time in New York city. The composer of many classics, including the impressive, "There is No Death," O'Hara is, however, most widely known as the author of "K-Katy, my B-Beautiful K-Katy," so popular in the trenches.

The other "Chatham composers" are Howard Simon, now a resident of Detroit, and Stan Merritt, who still clings to the city of his nativity. The two have, on occasion, collaborated in the production of songs more or less jazzy, but admittedly popular.

Incidentally, a curious commentator recently remarked on a peculiar circumstance which would indicate either that composers are peculiarly susceptible to feminine charms, or that the atmosphere of Chatham (near or remote) impels young men to outspoken avowals of affection.

Geoff O'Hara led off a few years ago with his modestly stuttering avowal of affection for "K-Katy, My B-Beautiful K-Katy." The stutter indicating, doubtless, that Geoff was a bit timid about spreading the news of his affections broadcast.

A little later, Howard Simon, the second on Chatham's musical string, burst into rhapsody, "Mary Ellen, Since I Fell In—Love With You."

And now, to cap the climax, Stan Merritt has emerged from his dugout with an impassioned outburst, "Edie, Yes In-deed-ie, I Love You."

As the story has it—Once might be called an accident and twice a coincidence, but a third time makes it look like a habit.

TSAO KUN'S PRESIDENCY DUE TO HIS LOUD SNORE

Chinese Tale of New President Tells How Penniless Drifter Left Haystack for the Army

WITH the accession of Tsao Kun to the presidency of China, the usual crop of fantastic stories purporting to account for the rise of any notable figure has appeared, not the most fantastic being one obtained from native sources in Tsao's own province of Chili.

According to this account, Tsao's enlistment and subsequent rapid advancement as a soldier in the armies of the old Manchu dynasty would have been impossible but for his sonorous snores.

Tsao, originally, was a cloth merchant's apprentice, having been put into that service by a father, noted for his stern disposition, the story goes. Becoming proficient, he was provided with a barrow and stock of goods wherewith to make rounds among prospective buyers and chaffered keenly with the housewives of neighboring villages. He was discontented with this prosaic occupation, however, and sought solace for the pangs it caused his adventurous spirit by engaging in escapades which failed to find his father's approval.

The parent cast young Tsao adrift and the lad, bethinking himself of a career that would supply his demand for activity and color, sought to enlist at a militry camp not many miles from his home. He was rejected because of inability to provide a proper guarantor. Although despondent, he was determined not to return to his family and sheltered himself in a haystack, where he fell asleep.

An officer from the camp, strolling through the vicinity, heard the lusty evidences of Tsao's slumber and roused him unceremoniously. In response to the officer's inquiry as to why such a robust young man should be sleeping the day away, Tsao told his story of eviction from home and rejection by the recruiting officials.

The officer became interested, used influence to obtain the waiving of the necessary guarantor in Tsao's case, and the youth enlisted. His rapid grasp of military matters impressed his superiors and a sensational military career, culminating in Tsao's advancement to the highest ranks and elevation to the presidency, followed.

QUITS WITH THE BISHOP

THE latest story about the bishop of London concerns a week-end he spent recently at a friend's house in the country.

On the Monday morning he was playing tennis with his host's young son, with whom he had frequently played before.

Usually the bishop more than held his own with him, but on this occasion it was not so.

Between games he remarked to his opponent: "I simply can't stand your service to-day."

"Then we're quits," was the cheeky reply. "I couldn't stand yours yesterday."

Sure Proof

"ONLY the other day we heard of a parlormaid who refused to vote for the local candidate because she was certain that he was a Roman Catholic. Questioned as to her evidence, she replied that she had read his announcement of a 'Mass meeting.'"—Saturday Review.

Two Ways to Describe It

Man Who Hanged 120 Murderers Resigns the Post of Executioner

Friends Believe Britain's Hangman is Haunted By Grim Memories—Incurs Risk By Officiating at Irish Executions—Pitiful Task of Pinioning Mrs. Thompson May Have Had Effect on His Nerves.

Ellis Retires From Official Hangman Quartet

HERE is a rather unique photograph of a rather unique quartet. These men are the official hangmen of England, whose duty it is to officiate at the executions of persons sentenced to the gallows. Seated in front at the left is Ellis, who has just retired. At the right is Pierrepont. Standing left to right are Billington and Ellis' assistant, name not known.

HAUNTED by the faces of the 120 victims of his noose, some imaginative people say, John Ellis, the English hangman, namesake of Arthur Ellis, the Canadian executioner, has announced his resignation.

No explanation is given in his formal declaration. He has simply retired. In private life Ellis is a hairdresser and newsagent in Oldham road, Rochdale. Here he resides happily with his family and is respected by his neighbors. In appearance, like Arthur Ellis, who really borrowed the name of Ellis from his English confrere, John Ellis is entirely unlike the mental picture one would draw of a man following his grim occupation. He is of medium height, mild manner, pale complexion, and sandy hair.

It is from his gentle manner, increasing of late, that his friends draw the deduction that he is nerve-broken from memories of the great throng of human beings he has jerked into eternity. Among the many notorious criminals of this number is Dr. Crippen and Dunn and O'Sullivan, the Sinn Feiners who shot down Field-Marshal Sir Henry Wilson as he came out of his London home. Dougal, of Moat Farm fame; Smith, who drowned his brides in a bath, and Mrs. Edith Thompson, all passed through his hands. It was Ellis, also, who sent the arch traitor, Sir Roger Casement, to his doom at Pentonville Prison during the war.

Customers who endeavored to "draw" Ellis regarding the gruesome details of his job as hangman were seldom able to glean much from him, as he was always particularly reticent about the painful nature of his calling. Of late months, according to his friends, he will not even kill one of the chickens that he raises for sale, so chary has he become of taking life in any form. His temperament has always been peculiar, for although shy and retiring, and of a kindly disposition, he is yet regarded as one of the coolest and most self-possessed hangmen ever known. While performing his duty he never betrayed the slightest emotion or indicated in the smallest degree that he was affected by the painful proceedings in which he was playing a leading part.

Hard Times for Hangmen

IT is, therefore, somewhat surprising that he has decided to retire, but there are rumors that the job is not what it was. The fees paid are small and the number of executions grows less. Moreover, the authorities were not too ready to grant additional payments to meet the increased cost of living since the war. But an executioner must live, whatever happens to his clients.

Moreover, in recent times, Ellis has incurred a certain amount of personal risk by officiating at Irish executions, and it is no secret that he has on occasions been afforded police protection. This may have influenced him in his decision to rest on his laurels, so to speak, and to relinquish an office which, after twenty-three years, has not even the attraction of novelty or originality.

Stronger nerves than even those of Ellis must have quavered before the crowd of Irish sympathizers who gathered outside the wall of Pentonville prison on the morning of August 3, 1916, the day Casement was hanged. Two hours before the execution men, women and children by the hundred shouted their imprecations. But at 9 o'clock the traitorous knight who had attempted to land arms from Germany on the Irish coast ascended the scaffold. Twenty minutes before the great prison bell had begun to toll, and it was to its deep booming that Casement was led to the execution shed only five yards away, accompanied by two priests who had been his spiritual advisers since his conversion after his capture to the Roman Catholic faith.

Ellis was waiting for the party in the shed. While the priests recited the litany of the dying, Casement responded in low tones: "Lord have mercy on my soul." Ellis quickly pinioned him. Casement mounted the gallows steps firmly, commending his spirit to his Maker as he stepped on the trap. A long wail sounded loud above the cheering as the great bell by one dull clang announced that the doomed man had paid the last penalty. A little distance from the crowd at the back of the prison a little group of Irish men and women fell on their knees, silently praying for the repose of the soul of their fellow countryman.

Harrowing Case of Mrs. Thompson

OR was it the hanging of the beautiful Mrs. Edith Thompson that Ellis cannot erase from his mind? This most sensational, perhaps, of all English murder trials came to a close in the last month of 1922, when Mrs. Thompson and her lover, Frederick Bywaters, were sentenced to death for the murder of the woman's husband, which, although accomplished by Bywaters, who stabbed him, had been plotted, according to the testimony, by the two.

For the first time in thirty years a woman died on the scaffold in England, and Ellis was the man who officiated at her death. Simultaneously as Bywaters was hanged at Pentonville prison, Mrs. Thompson was carried in a collapsed condition to the gallows at Holloway jail, where Ellis had to pinion this woman who could not stand up. It was to her harrowing enquiries about her lover that Ellis had to listen as he pulled the trap. The reaction at this revolting drama, even among the people of England who thought that the woman was guilty, was indescribable. Its effect upon Ellis, his friends admitted, had been incalculable.

Only one murderer is known to have entertained an open grudge against Ellis. This was Pomroy, who was hanged for the murder of his sweetheart in a taxicab in Leicester square, and as he was placed on the drop he said, "I hope that Ellis will drop down dead as soon as he pulls the lever" — a charming valedictory wish that was not realized.

Ellis has more than once denied any relationship with Arthur Ellis, the Canadian executioner. "I have often been asked if the official executioner for Canada is related to me," he is reported to have said. "His name is Ellis, too. But that is only a strange coincidence, and nothing more. We are in no way connected, and I should like it to be known both in Canada and Great Britain that there is no family relationship between us." He did not know that Arthur Ellis had only assumed the name, probably because it was so well known in England, before he came to Canada.

Ellis is said to possess a good baritone voice, and earned his living in a humble way as a singer in his youth. It is, however, unlikely that his retirement from the post of hangman will have a sequel in the shape of a debut on the concert platform, although it is quite possible that he would prove an attraction.

Up and Down

ANXIOUS OLD LADY (on river steamer): I say, my good man, is this boat going up or down?

Surly Deckhand: Well, she's a leaky old tub, ma'am, so I shouldn't wonder if she was going down. Then, again, her b'lers ain't none too good, so she might go up.

ROBSON: Now that you are living in the country I should think you find it aggravating to hurry to catch your morning train.

Dobson: Oh, no. It's hurrying to miss it that I find aggravating.

Detroit Ford Hospital Called Human Garage

Doctors Complain That Automobile Magnate Is Efficiency Mad—Patients Pay in Advance

THE doctors of Detroit are boycotting the big Henry Ford Hospital, stating emphatically that even efficiency run rampant may be the worst inhumanity to man.

They claim that the Ford hospital is nothing but a human garage, handling patients like Ford cars in need of repairs.

The hospital is run on the famous Ford efficiency lines. Patients "pay as they enter." There is no credit extended to anyone. Charges are based on work to be done, as in a garage, so much for cutting a leg off, so much for removing an appendix, and so on.

Henry Ford

All patients, regardless of financial circumstances, pay alike. John D. Rockefeller would be treated at exactly the same price as a day laborer.

No charity work whatever is done. Mr. Ford believes no one ought to expect to get something for nothing in a hospital any more than he would expect to get it in a garage.

Patients are not allowed to consult outside doctors. All work in the hospital must be done by the Ford surgeons.

Doctors and nurses work on a strict schedule of hours and punch the time clock just as in the Ford factory.

The hospital has no connection with the Ford factory. It is open to all citizens of Detroit. Mr. Ford's object in starting it was to show that a hospital could be made to pay as well as an automobile factory. The hospital does pay.

Detroit doctors claim that a hospital should never refuse to treat patients because they have no money and that rich patients should be charged more to make up for the cost of treating people who cannot pay.

Mr. Ford says charity is "bunk," and people should pay for what they get and pay alike.

BLONDE AND BRUNETTE

MISS MARIE TEMPEST, following the prevalent fashion, is writing her reminiscences. The book should be interesting reading, for the popular actress has a large and varied assortment of stories that are as a rule both new and good.

One of her favorites concerns two theatrical stars whose relations were none of the best. A certain manager wanted them, for business reasons, to be friends again.

To this end he invited them to dine with him, and over the fish he said, addressing them both:

"Come, ladies, make up!"

"But Thais," said the blonde star, "is already made up."

Thais, the brunette, bit her lip and waited her chance. It came with the dessert, when they started to discuss a mutual acquaintance.

"She's a spiteful cat," said the blonde star. "She said I was a frump, and couldn't act anyway."

"Very rude!" remarked Thais sweetly. "Still my dear, it's better than having her tell lies about you."

HAPPY MARRIAGE

WHAT is the secret of a happy marriage? Recipes are many and varied; therefore, an eastern view is interesting, especially when it comes from Sessue Hayakawa, the Japanese screen and stage star.

"The secret," he says, "is not to treat a woman too well. An English husband keeps on saying 'my dear' and 'my darling' to his wife. If he forgets to do so, one day the wife is hurt."

This, of course, is an eastern view. Sessue is very happily wedded, and his wife combines charm with business talent.

'Ware Agreements

SHE: You and I never agree about anything. I wonder what would happen if we did?

He: I should be wrong.

'TAY PAY' TELLS REAL NAME EARNS BIG MONEY AT 75

Is Chief Movie Censor for Great Britain Besides a Much-Sought Writer at Substantial Rates

T. P. O'CONNOR the veteran Irish leader in the British House of Commons is enjoying a prosperous old age, according to Barron's.

Mr. O'Connor, who is now about 75, is the father of the House of Commons.

He gets around $2,000 salary as a member of Parliament.

"Tay Pay"

Then he is chief movie censor for Great Britain, and that post pays him $5,000 a year.

He writes a column for the London Daily Telegraph, for which he receives $12,500 a year.

As editor of T. P.'s and Cassell's Weekly, he gets $10,000 a year and a portion of the profits.

Besides this he does considerable special writing for American newspapers at high prices.

All in all, at 75 he is a big money earner.

Sir Henry Lucy, another famous English journalist who died recently worth more than a million dollars, made the statement that it was he who gave the familiar nickname of "T.P." to T. P. O'Connor. This Mr. O'Connor, however, says is entirely inaccurate.

"As a matter of fact," he says, "I was never called 'T.P.' until I entered the House of Commons. I don't know that I am entitled to the name even now. I was christened by the name of Thomas—the name of my father, and with none other. I was rather disappointed with this single and not particularly romantic name, and longed for a better one. My opportunity came with confirmation, for when you are confirmed in the Catholic church you have the right of adding another Christian name or two to those which you were given at baptism. I don't know why it is that I always had a particular affection for two Christian names. They seemed to me essentially romantic. One was the name Charles, the other Edmond; and I resolved that I would add these names to the homely Thomas. But my mother had a special reverence for the name of Bernard—a notable saint in the Catholic calendar—and insisted that I should add Bernard to my list. What happened was that the bishop was in a bit of a hurry. He heard only the name 'Charles,' which I duly got; by the time my gasping tongue had got to Edmond and Bernard, the bishop had passed on to the next boy; and so I remained with Charles, tout court.'

"I was profoundly dissatisfied, and I found a device which relieved the situation. My mother's name was Power. It is not uncommon among Irishmen to take the name of their mother, as is the universal custom in Spain. So one day I put Power into my name, gradually dropping the Charles. But up to the time I entered the House of Commons—I had just turned thirty-two then—I had never been called 'T.P.' If I had been I would not have recognized it immediately as referring to me. My friends and intimates and my family always called me 'Tom.'

"The first time I heard myself called 'T.P.' was when a parliamentary colleague—Lysaght Finnigan, who had a few blazing hours of political glory and then disappeared into early and tragic night—shouted up to my top room in Barnard's Inn—where I lived—calling me 'T.P.' I recalled the name with something like a shock. It was so new and strange to me. But, apparently, it caught the taste of the House.

"But the 'Tay Pay' version of my initials came in a different way, and was the creation, curiously enough, not of a friend, but an enemy. When I first entered the House there were still many members left of the old Irish party; but the rise of Parnell, the tremendous verdict of the constituencies in his favor, had discredited this older generation; they were a pretty rotten lot—all or nearly all looking for jobs. Among them was a gentleman named Philip Callan. He was extremely unpopular with the little body of Parnellites. He returned their hate, as well he might, for they destroyed his prospects of a big government office—the governorship of Queensland—on which he had set his heart and for which he had pawned all his future. He capitalized his revenue and staked everything on his chances of this lucrative office.

"In the debates on the Bradlaugh case I took strongly the side that Bradlaugh had the right to take any form of oath his conscience dictated. Callan thinking this an opportunity for creating some religious bigotry against me, attacked me and in private spoke of me as 'Tay Pay,' and the name stuck. As a matter of fact, it is incorrect; for many Irish people still say 'Tay' for tea; but never 'Pay' for P. But there it is."

GLAD HE WAS GOING TO DIE BEFORE THIS CENTURY

"LADY STANLEY, widow of the famous explorer, H. M. Stanley, gave the world an unpublished dictum of Mr. Gladstone's in the bright little impromptu speech she made at the Livingstone film expedition reception recently," records the Christian World.

"In conversation one day with Mr. Gladstone, who was a great friend of hers, she asked the grand old man if he would not like to live on into the twentieth century. 'No,' he said, 'I am glad to think I have lived in the great pioneer century, the freeing century. The twentieth century will be a co-ordinating century, and we shall all be turned out alike—like peas on a plate!'"

MORAL—KEEP AWAKE

IT is said that Mary Pickford and her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, frequently indulge in more or less friendly arguments upon the future of the world.

"You'll wake up some day and find that the world is being ruled by women," Mary predicted during one of these arguments.

"Ain't that just like a woman?" said Doug.

"What's just like a woman?" demanded the world's sweetheart, momentarily, taken off her guard.

"To take advantage of a man while he's asleep," answered Doug, as he made for the nearest door.

Thornton Waves to Mrs. Cooper Lone Woman in Locomotive Shops

Holds Down Her Job With Best of 600 Men—High Up on Platform, She Operates Cranes That Lift Locomotives—Domesticated Woman as Well—Keeps Up Home for Her Little Daughter.

ALTHOUGH the Anglo-Saxon world has grown accustomed to finding women occupying an equal plane with men in business, politics, education, religion and many other professions, nevertheless, it comes as a distinct surprise to find a woman working in the erecting shops of a great railroad system. Such an atmosphere, where giant machines tear apart and build up the locomotives that draw the great passenger and freight trains across the continent; where the air each day is surcharged with the din of steel against steel and where, to say the least, the monotony of common toil is tinged with the thrills of uncertainty—such an atmosphere is scarcely that which one expects to find a woman choosing for her daily work.

Strange as it may appear, one woman at least earns a living for herself and child side by side with the army of laborers, mechanics and motive power engineers who are employed in the erecting shops of the Grand Trunk Western lines of the Canadian National Railways at Battle Creek, Michigan.

She is Mrs. Annabelle Cooper and she is a lone woman among 600 men, but her story is known to them all, and she is accepted among the Bills, Joes and James of the shop just as "Annabelle". When the war broke out, necessity made it imperative that she should secure work. She did, and she did her job so well that when the war ended and found her still facing the task of keeping her little home together, she was retained in the service; and, at the present moment, is holding down her job with the best men in the shop.

Her's is the job of operating all the cranes that lift locomotives which come into the shop for repairs; and some of them weigh more than 150 tons. All day long she works on her little platform, from 40 to 65 feet in the air. It is a job of thrills—at least to an ordinary woman. Required to walk an eight-inch platform 65 feet in the air, she has not many competitors in the country. Nor has she had the slightest mishap during all the five years of her work. It is also her duty to detect defects in the wiring, fingers, contacts and brushes of the cranes and to see that they are kept in repair.

Do the men like her? They unanimously say, "You bet." As for cussing around the shops where she is, it just isn't.

The necessity of filling the shoes of both father and mother for her little daughter, Hilda, accounts for her taking the unusual job. In spite of her peculiar work, she is a real woman. She says "I love my home and my child. Of course the work in the shops is not a woman's environment. As it is the practical thing to do, I wear overalls while doing my work. When I am through there for the day, I leave that side of my life behind me and go home to the life of housekeeping. I believe women should have the same chance as men to earn a living. I get the regular wages of a machanic. My one desire is to give my little girl an education and the things other children have."

She is succeeding admirably in realizing her desire.

Mrs. Cooper has shown what women can do when thrown upon their own resources. She has supported herself ever since she was fifteen. Left with her daughter to care for, she has bought a home, furnished and redecorated the interior, besides doing the cooking and general housework. She also does all the sewing for herself and her daughter. She has selected her furniture and decorations with artistic taste, and her home is one of which any woman would be proud.

Upon the visit of Sir Henry W. Thornton, president of the Canadian National—Grand Trunk Railways to Battle Creek, he commented upon the remarkable vocation of Mrs. Cooper. While making an inspection of the shops, he paused to wave his hat to her while she was at her post. He also sent his personal compliments to her.

A Marvel of the Century

The first quarter of the twentieth century has witnessed many epoch-making discoveries. What further triumphs of human genius may be in store no man can foretell; but the record of the last few few decades is one at which to marvel. The opening of the century saw many tentative efforts in realms hitherto unexplored. There were the early triumphs in flying and the first experiments with gasoline cars, both depending upon the principle of internal combustion. Since those days, only twenty-odd years ago, what wonderful progress has been made! Science and ingenuity have concentrated on the problem, and the conquest of space, in the air and on the ground, has been accomplished. Development has proceeded at a phenomenal rate, and progress is not halted yet, though, looking around on the beautiful models of cars on exhibit at the Motor Show one would be disposed to say that perfection had been reached at least in that line of endeavor.

It is interesting in view of the recent Show at the Armouries, to look back to the early days of the automobiles—so well within the memory of the middle-aged—when the "gas buggy" was a thing of mere curiosity and frequently of ridicule. Ungainly in appearance and unreliable in performance, it gave little indication of its future destiny. A quarter of a century ago the forerunners of the motor cars of to-day made their first erratic appearance on the streets of Peterborough. It was a bold venture to ride in them and a bolder venture still to possess them. They were, however, not long in gaining popularity.

What was at first the luxury of the wealthy few has become a necessity for all. Thanks to the enterprise of inventors and manufacturers it did not take so long to satisfy the great popular demand for an efficient and cheap machine. Quantity production has put the motor car within the power of practically everyone to possess, and the people of Canada have not been slow to respond to the opportunities offered them. Improved roads were an inevitable consequence of the increased output of automobiles, and the two together have revolutionized transportation and communication methods in all progressive countries in the world. The service rendered by the motor car in these days is, in fact, so efficient and so extensive that one wonders how the world could have ever got along without it. It has added enormously to the enjoyment of life, and increased beyond all estimation the facilities for self-development and healthful recreation. East and west, the Arab of the eastern, and the millionaire and the business man of this western hemisphere, meet on common ground in admiration and need of the modern automobile.

The motor car is an indispensible asset of modern social life. It has brought the advantages of the town to the dweller in the country, and it has brought the delights of the country to the dweller in the city. In this way old unreasonable prejudices have been broken down, and a much greater appreciation and better understanding have sprung up between these two main classes of population. Several speakers in Peterborough recently have stressed the need for a wiping out of the boundary of thought and distance that separates east and west as a condition precedent to the full progress of Canada. Who can tell but that, with increasing numbers touring from coast to coast, camping in villages and at farms along the way, the motor car may not serve this great purpose by annihilating distance and enlightening the minds of intelligent people from both sections!

FURNITURE SHOULD SUIT ROOM

Comfortable furniture may produce unrest and discomfort if placed without a preconceived plan in any room.

A room apparently put in order may produce a sense of disorderly arrangement, if it isn't furnished correctly.

The cause for such reaction is the violation of a simple principle in house furnishing. It is this:

Rugs should be laid and furniture placed in accord with the lines of the rooms.

A room generally has rectangular lines. Very seldom do we find one with a curve in it.

Lines Conflict.

Place a rug so that its lines will run diagonally to those of the room, and a new decorative idea is produced. There are two conflicting plans for arrangement of the furniture.

However, there is a monotony to such an array that can very well be broken by a single piece placed diagonally at a corner, or at the fireplace. Even this should be a small piece of furniture, nothing more than a chair, and should not be exactly diagonal to the walls. At best it should form a slight although noticeable relationship to the rectangular plan of the room.

When groups are arranged, the pieces should not be placed at an acute angle to one another. Instead they should either be parallel or at 90 degrees. In a large room, for instance, a sofa may be placed in front of the fireplace, and chairs grouped at right angle to both, on either side. This makes the chief grouping of the room and yet does not detract too much from the rest of the groups.

Were this group to be placed at an angle, it would call attention to itself, so that it would become the most annoying attraction of the room, to the exclusion of all other groups.

The main idea is to have only one plan of furniture arrangement, and that in accordance with the lines of the room.

THE SANTA CLARA SOLDIERS REVOLT

Serious Disorders Reported From Havana—Several Clashes.

HAVANA, Cuba, May 2.—(United Press).—The situation created by revolt of a number of soldiers in Santa Clara Province assumed more serious proportions to-day following a persistent report that General Velez has landed on the north coast and will assume charge of the movement against the government of President Zayas.

Armando Soto, brother of the secretary of the Veterans and patrols association was reported killed when government soldiers fired on rebels in a clash at Abreaus, in Santa Clara Province, late yesterday.

The military has issued an order for search of all automobiles and other vehicles leaving Havana for the interior.

President Zayas has asked an appropriation of $1,000,000 to combat the rebellion and the United States cruiser Cleveland has arrived in Havana harbor.

Unconfirmed reports tell of a number of clashes between government forces and rebels.

All demonstrations scheduled for Labor Day yesterday were suspended. A new uprising was reported in the province of Cienfuegos.

The government has put a censorship on news from the interior and press has been asked to print only such reports as are authorized.

There are more widows than widowers in the United States.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH?

Doctors claim people are healthier than they used to be. One reason is that few can afford to be ill these days.

The high cost of sickness is one of the lustiest children of the high cost of living.

A few generations ago, nearly every one had time to burn. No one rushed unless the sheriff was after him or he was in danger or missing a train.

Women sat placidly around at "sewing circles," comparing surgical operations. There was even a time when a woman's social standing was determined by the number of times she had gone under the knife. Men, too, had leisure. They congregated at the tavern bar or around the stove in the general store, swapping remedies for rheumatism, backache and the "all-in" feeling.

The public had a morbid interest in diseases. Also, it had spare time to gratify the craving to be ill. While this might not have been exactly a craving, still every one sort of expectad illness as a part of fate, not to be dodged.

This mental attitude made them succumb easily.

Today people can't afford to be sick. They can't afford the time. They can't afford the money. Where a patient once was reasonably sure of getting off with a diagnosis that he had some simple ailment as the grippe or hives, science has discovered all sorts of mysterious, complicated maladies with hifalutin' names.

Where grandpa might have had indigestion, we can't get off with less than botulism, excessive secretion of the endocrine glands, or a physic "complex."

The old-time country doctor drove his horse 12 miles, devoted an hour to examining the patient, measured out a quart of stuff that tasted like extract of gall, and threw in half a peck of pills of various colors for good measure. His charge was a dollar for the whole works—and he was an optimist if he expected ever to get the dollar.

Times have changed. The patient often is sent to have his teeth X-rayed. He's shunted from one specialist to another. After a few experiences, he subconsciously discovers that he can't afford to be sick. So he forgets about it. So he forgets about it. Maybe it "gets" him and he dies. But it's sure-fire imaginary ailments.

A steep bill from the doctor is excellent medicine, about the best there is. We're not implying that all diseases is imaginary. Far from it. But much of the sickness of former generations was either imaginary or the result of foolish living—Gluttony, lack of sanitation, and the absence of quarantine in infectious epidemics.

The doctors have taught us how to live sensibly. That's their public service and it's a tremendous one.

SLENDER GIRL

A most attractive frock for a slender girl is of blue taille silk with large overchecks in red and black. It has a wide sash tied with a puffy bow at one side.

BUTTONS.

The row of buttons right down the front of the frock may be of glass, carved wood, pearl, or self material, but they are in evidence on the majority of afternoon costumes.

CAMPBELLFORD CADETS PRAISED BY INSPECTOR

Captain V. M. S. Heron Pronounced the Public School Corps Second to None In This Military District — High School Cadets Included In Eulogy.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 2.—"When you go home to dinner to-day you can tell your parents that the public school cadets of Campbellford stand in the front rank," said Capt. V. M. S. Heron, cadet inspector for the third military district, who was on his annual official visit here yesterday, and who made a short address to the boys after having seen them put through their various evolutions by Principal Haig and the officers of the corps.

"You should try to get your parents interested in your organization," continued the Captain, "and in this way you can make greater progress than ever. I am very much pleased with the showing you have made, and I must say that you are a credit to yourselves, to your school, and to your instructors."

As a reward to the boys, the Captain asked Principal Haig to declare a half-holiday for the afternoon, and the announcement was heartily cheered, not only by the cadets themselves but by the other pupils.

There were 70 cadets in the exercises which were held on the lawn in front of the public school, and the young fellows, in their natty uniform, made an excellent showing. They went through the various evolutions without a hitch, and Capt. Heron told Principal Haig, when complimenting him privately, that the corps was second to none among the public schools in the military district of which he is inspector.

Principal Haig is instructor of the corps, Raymond Foy is company commander, Gordon Fairman, Walter Bibby and Morley Peeling platoon commanders, and Ralph Plumpton is quartermaster-sergeant.

A prize is given each year to the platoon making the best showing at the inspection, and this, two large boxes of chocolates donated by Principal Haig, was won yesterday by Gordon Fairman's platoon. The prize, however, was shared by all the members of the corps.

COLONEL HENRY OTWAY, Men's Social Secretary, whose department is responsible for the assistance given to prisoner's families when the bread-winner is absent, as well as the finding of work for released prisoners. Hundreds of jobs are found and thousands of meals provided for the unfortunate men this department comes in contact with. It is under this department that lost relatives and friends are located and families re-united. The Annual Self-Denial Appeal is conducted to help this and other departments function efficiently.

High School Cadets.

Capt. Heron was just as well pleased with the High School cadets, who were out 60 strong, and who, with their rifles and other accoutrements, all of which were in the pink of condition, presented a truly military appearance.

"I don't know what has happened in Campbellford since my visit a year ago," said the Captain at the close of the exercises. "There has certainly been a great improvement all around. You were fair in 1923, but this year you are excellent. In facet you are so good that you are entitled to new uniforms, and I hope that these, smatter and in every way worthy of your standing, will be furnished by the Board of Education. You are certainly a credit to your town and teachers, and I wish to congratulate Messrs. Greig and Stephens, your instructors, upon their success and the improvement they have made in the corps during the past year."

Capt. Heron also declared a half-holiday for the High School.

The officers of the High School corps are E. H. Greig, B.A., and E. Stephens, B.A., instructors; Arthur Soucks, captain, whose work as commander was highly praised by Capt. Heron; Cecil Longmuir, Jack Twigg and Allan Bonneycastle, lieutenants; Gerald Wilson, quartermaster-sergeant.

The members of the corps were regaled with ice cream at Long's restaurant at the conclusion of the inspection, their hosts being their instructors, Messrs. Greig and Stephens.

Stores Closed.

A number of stores were closed yesterday afternoon, the half-holiday that had been advertised for the past two weeks. Among these were several, the owners of which have always been in favor of holding the weekly half-holiday on Friday. It is understood that next week the stores will close on Friday, a majority having declared finally for that date, and in the meantime the new arrangement will be advertised by the display of cards in the shop windows.

The barber shops closed yesterday, the owners announcing that, beginning with next week, they will close on Friday afternoon, and will observe this date if it is generally adopted for the half-holiday.

LOST.

LUNG EXERCISES.

MANSFIELD (England), May 2.—Breathing exercises for children would cure most human ills, declares Dr. J. E. Wilson, famous health expert. Special lung exercises easily may cause an infant of 2 to weigh as much as many children of five or six, he says.

KNICKERS WIN.

REEDY, W. Va., May 2.—Reedy women may don knickerbockers to their hearts' content. The privilege of wearing knickers on the streets has been granted through a referendum vote which shows a majority of one in favor of the women.

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, May 2.—The approaching centenary of the Bay of Quinte conference, which is to be held at Hallowell (now Picton), where the Canada conference, after its first organization met on August 25, 1924, is stirring up the old historical records, Dr. A. Green, in his records of the day, says of this first assembly of the Methodist Church in Canada: "The conference was held in a new church, the best in the Province, erected in 1820. It was the first organization of ministers on Canadian soil, having for its object the cultivation of the Canadian field. In it a missionary society was organized and by the timely exertions of this conference incipient rebellion was put down."

It was about the year 1824 also that Hon. Peter Robinson brought out a shipload of Irish emigrants to be located in Peterborough. They landed at Cobourg and the most of them being Roman Catholics, were accompanied by their priest, probably Rev. Father Butler who, from that time on, came to Cobourg every three months to have mass here, and also officiated at Port Hope every three months. The Catholics residing in this district would walk many miles to be present at these services.

The late Bernard McAllister, of Cobourg, told of going with his mother to the old court house, before the erection of a Catholic Church here. William Street was at that time not yet opened for vehicular traffic. There was a fallen tree across the creek at the spot which was later spanned by the Matting Factory Bridge, and that served pedestrians who desired to cross the stream. The hon. H. Ruttan was sheriff at the time. Mr. Burke was jailer and Mrs. Burke kindly loaned a table for an altar. Later, Father Kernan came to Cobourg and before the building of the old Catholic Church in Cobourg, used to say mass in private houses.

An Anglican Church Built Here In 1819

The first church to be erected in Cobourg was an unpretentious frame building that occupied the site of the present St. Peter's Church on King Street. Here, Rev. Mr. McAuley ministered to the needs of the Anglican people of this district, living in Northumberland, Durham and Peterborough Counties.

The old burying ground at St. Peter's is an historic spot, for there were buried some who came to this district a little before the landing of the Loyalists at Adolphustoun in June, 1784, an event that is to be celebrated with great eclat at Belleville this coming June. By his work among the settlers, his efforts in advancing education, and instituting the first grammar school, this pioneer Anglican clergyman did the people of this community a great service.

Ladies Wore Fashionable Attire

Mrs. Stewart, who, with her husband, and family, came from the Old Country to Cobourg in 1822, and remained here for a time before they, with a Mr. and Mrs. Reid, went out to Douro Township to take up the first land grants there, says in her letters, preserved under the name of "Our Forest Home," that she found the ladies of Cobourg to be very stylish, and that they thought nothing of paying a large sum of money for a "tippet" if they desired it to complete their costume.

Flashed Lantern Into Tunnel

Although Mrs. Stewart does not record the fact, another writer in telling of the congregations of a Toronto church at that time says the ladies wore immense poke-bonnets that protruded out beyond the face, nearly obscuring it. As a man and his wife separated at the church door, the one sitting on the right side and the other on the left, it was necessary at night for the man to carry a lantern, which, when leaving the building at the conclusion of the service, he flashed into the mouth of the bonnet tunnel to see if it was the right face at the other end. This prevented the mistake of walking home with another man's wife or sweetheart.

Four Hundred Mile Circuit

In 1824 David Breckenridge, Jr., was in charge of Smith's Creek Methodist circuit, extending over twelve townships and including Cobourg. Anson Green was appointed by the first Methodist conference held in Canada, to assist Mr. Breckenridge, and this is the story he tells in his journal: "With the best horse that I could secure, and saddle-bags all ready, I started, and after riding twenty-five miles, stopped at the hospitable home of Mr. Charles Biggar at the Carrying Place (the entrance to the Murray Canal). My first sermon was preached at Cramahe, now Colborne, on the 10th; next at Four Corners, Haldimand, the 12th; on the 19th I preached at Hawkins school-house and Cobourg, a small village with about a hundred inhabitants. We have a good church two miles north (the Hamilton Chapel), and a small log cabin near it, which is called the parsonage, and is really the head of Smith Creek circuit. On the 28th I started for the Township of Smith, passed through where Peterborough now stands, only one house there, out of sight by the river-bank. My path was a winding Indian trail. In a clearing with two or three log cabins, lived a Godly Yorkshire woman. Her one room served for kitchen bedroom, dining-room, church, where I preached to eight and was happy. In the home of Mr. William Morrow, Cavan, I had the best congregation yet found in these woods. I met an intelligent Irish local preacher, Blackstock. We had a good class-meeting and rejoiced together."

Sky Pilot Lost His Way

"I was not surprised to know that my predecessor, Mr. Belton, lost his way in these primeval forests. I was told he took a wrong path one stormy day. At night he fortunately met a man who knew him. 'Sure, is this your Reverence? Where are you going?' 'Oh, to hunt up the lost sheep.' 'Indade, I'm afeared the sheep stand a poor chance when the shepherd is lost.'" He was six miles out of his way, but the belated wayfarer was piloted safely to his waiting flock.

"Thursday, I preached at Mr. Schecleton's where I met Mrs. Thompson, who pressed me to preach in her house in Monaghan. I found a stirling family, Wesleyans from England, and a good congregation. 'When we came to these woods,' said she, 'we were three years without seeing a minister; fifteen miles I walked to hear one. I begged him to come and preach to us and he consented. I went to every house and got a pledge from every man and woman to come. Seeing the track of a horse in our field as I returned, I knew the man of God had come.'" So eager were they in those old days for a privilege which very many today esteem but lightly.

It is recorded by another authority in speaking of the work in 1923-24: "The Smith's Creek circuit from York to Belleville circuit, was extending into the township of Monaghan and Cavan, finding the Thompsons, Gardners, Russells, Morrows, and other Irish and English families, and Moses Blackstock, who became a local preacher. But to return to Anson Green, who states further: In the home of Mr. Wm. Morrow, Cavan, I had the best congregation yet found in the woods."

Making haste to escape a storm, Mr. Green's horse stumbled and fell, but without injury to either.

25c For Travelling Expenses

Mr. Green then left for the front. At Presqu Isle he found a large log house with excellent class and James Lyons, M.P.P., for leader. His next stand was at Cold Creek, then to Percy Mills, through the woods to the front, preaching at Joshua Wilster's, and returned to the Hamilton Church near Cobourg, for Sunday. Of this trip of 400 miles, embracing 40 appointments, and which took in new appointments at Newtonville, Bulloch's and Major Willmott's at Bowmanville, he says: "I received 25 cents for travelling expenses, but no quarterage as it took all the money paid to meet my superintendent's moving expenses."

Opened Cobourg Church in 1825

Anson Green, in his journals, says later: "On Nov. 28, 1825, had the pleasure of opening our new church in Cobourg, assisted by Father Wilson."

How He Began His Work

It is told that early in the year 1822 or 1823, there came into the Hallowell circuit to teach school a young man, who in boarding around among the juveniles, as was the castom in these days gave evidence of unusual gifts and zeal. One Sunday evening, after he had walked four miles to worship and back, he was suddenly informed that an announcement had been made for him to preach that evening in the 'Quaker settlement.' It was thus in those days that a young man sometimes received his call to holy orders. He accepted the inevitable, and it is said, preached a strong Gospel sermon. A revival began, and at once the ministers of the surrounding circuits joined in and helped him. A Methodist society was organized at the place (now Bloomfield). That was the introduction of Anson Green to the work of the Methodist Church in Canada, which filled the rest of his life.

Other churches in Cobourg had their inception as follows:

The First Presbyterian Church In Cobourg

The old St. Andrew's Kirk on William Street was built in 1833, and remained the place of worship of the Presbyterian body up to 1866, when the present St. Andrew's Church was erected. The first pastor of the old Kirk was Rev. Mr. Murdock, who died a short time after coming here. He was followed by Rev. Thomas Alexander, Rev. John Laing, Rev. Mr. Douglas, Rev. Mr. Ballantine, Rev. Mr. McCrea, Rev. John Hay and other pastors of more recent date. The new church building, built in 1866, was a considerable addition to the architectural structures of the town.

The First Congregational Church

It was the year 1833 also that Rev. Wm. Hayden came to Cobourg and organized the first Congregational Church. In 1835 he superintended the building of a frame church on the site where the present church now stands. There was a brick residence at the rear of the old church for the resident pastor. Among his successors were Rev. Mr. Snell, Rev. Mr. Pedley, and others. It is significant also that this church now enjoys the ministrations of one of the Pedley family, Rev. James Pedley, whose excellent discourses are thoroughly enjoyed.

HEALTH AND VITALITY FOR WOMEN

Health and Vitality can be yours without narcotics or drugs. Keeping well is largely a matter of keeping at bay those dread ailments peculiar to women as evidenced by headaches, nervousness, dragging-down pains, backache and irritability. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been overcoming such conditions and restoring sick and ailing women to health. It surely pays every suffering woman to try it.

STINGS ON Q.T.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The yellow fever peril no longer exists in the United States. But the so-called yellow fever mosquito still is the commonest household mosquito in the Gulf States, according to the bureau of entomology. This insect attacks its victims silently, and has been shown to cause "backbone fever."

COALGATE, Okla., May 2.—Tommy Wilson wanted above all things to get into the jail here to see his friends. Now he is in the State penitentiary for five years, and probably wants above all things to get out. Failing other means of admittance to the jail recently, he pried several bars off a cell window and invited his friends to escape. They declined and told the jailor.

GROUPED FURNITURE GIVES THE HOMELIKE ATMOSPHERE

Large Rooms Especially Require a Tasty and Tactful Arrangement of the Furniture For Comfort.

The test of a home lies in the impression it gives to visitors.

If your guests feel perfectly at ease and chatty, if not one of a large party is left alone and bored, the hostess can consider her affair a success.

This depends in large part on the tact and keenness of the hostess, but one mechanical detail which she will find of great help to her is the arrangement of her furniture.

Arrangement of furniture meets its greatest test during large parties. But it must also be considered at all other times. For it, to a great degree, helps make your home feel like home.

Large rooms especially require a tasty and tactful arrangement of furniture. Otherwise they might look like barns—cold, colorless and uninviting.

No matter how large or small, or strangely designed, a room appears at its best when its furniture is arranged in groups. That is, no single piece is left standing alone. A soft chair has its table and lamp, and another chair facing it or at its side. A sofa, practically a "group" in itself, also has its one or two end tables and lamp. A desk has its chair and lamp. A piano has its stool and lamp. And so on.

Help to Hostess.

The result is, that when many persons are being entertained, they are unconsciously divided into small, chatty groups, by the furniture arrangement. And the hostess is relieved of the unpleasant job of keeping her guests together.

No only the living-room, but every room in the house, should have its furniture arranged in groups. Although this arrangement helps most in the living-room, it is of almost as great importance in the bedrooms. Each bed should have its table and night lamp, for convenience, and even a chair nearby, if it possibly can be placed there. The chifforobe can stand alone, but the dresser, of course, must have its chair.

The only exception to this rule, if it can be called so, is the dining-room. Even here the table in the centre has its chairs, equaling the number of people who eat there daily. All the remaining chairs are placed alongside the walls, in the most convenient arrangement possible. There need be no attempt to group these remaining chairs, because the dining-room is used for only one purpose, perhaps only once a day, and when that comes the people in the house of necessity form into one group around the table.

Fireplace Pieces.

The central group of the house, more than likely, is the one about the fireplace, for the fireplace in most cases is the piece about which the rest of the living-room is arranged. Therefore, where there is room, the largest and most cozy grouping should be arranged about the fireplace. The sofa should be facing the fireplace, wherever possible, or at least it should be alongside.

Then there should be a soft, upholstered chair at one side at least, and the end tables accompanying the fireplace pieces. A lamp or two in the group makes this a restful, comfortable arrangement.

There is an atmosphere about such a group that alone furnishes rest and ease to the tired housewife and her husband.

HEARTS AFIRE

by May Christie

The Brilliant Novelist of Modern Society

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

Prudence Page—a pretty country girl has awakened from a brief and unhappy love affair with unreliable

Bert Traymore—a fascinating philanderer, guest at the home of Mrs. Vansittart—wealthy woman, who owns Winston Towers, a charming country home. Another of her guests is

Virginia Dale—a blase beauty, who sees a rival in Prudence, and who has set her mind on capturing

Peter Armstrong—a clever young inventor, much attracted to Prudence. The latter goes to New York, is caught in a fire and taken to hospital. Peter comes to see her, but the arrival of Bert Traymore leads Peter to think that Prudence cares for Traymore, and not for him.

Virginia, meantime, thrown herself on Peter's chivalry, saying he must marry her, as he has involved her in a scandal by having her in his cottage on the night of the thunderstorm.

Prudence, returning to her home in the country, and knowing nothing of this, awaits the coming of Peter.

She hears that he is engaged to Virginia.

CHAPTER LIX.

Virginia Dale and Peter—engaged!

Not from any other lips but Peter's own could Prudence have believed the news!

Peter—the one man in all the world who was a tower of strength, a rock to lean upon—the man to whom she'd given the whole love of her fervent young heart: Peter—to marry a girl who hated her—a girl who wasn't worthy to unlatch his shoe-strings!

The blow was so terrible that for one dizzy moment she was stunned and speechless.

"I wanted to tell you first," Peter was saying, in a low, strained voice, standing by the edge of the little tinkling stream that ran along the roadside.

In vain she tried to find her voice.

The 'correct' thing was to congratulate him, wasn't it?

How could she?

Peter! She loved him—ardently. Always she would love him, until breath left her body.

Pale moths darted arcoss the path and over the running brook, and larger moths passed with a low hum of wings. The scent of honeysuckle drenched the night air with loveliness, and the whiteness of bramble blossom was like a lamp in the dark.

But, oh! What pain this beauty brought!

Beauty . . . without the love of Peter Armstrong!

How could she face the endless train of nights like these, knowing she'd missed the one great thing that changed existence from prosaic round of humdrum tasks and so-called pleasures to a pulsating joy that poets sang about and people died for?

Love!

Farewell to Love!

Peter stood there in the moonlight, his clean-cut, handsome face as though carved from ivory, his strong, square chin more prominent than ever, his fine lips set, as though a battle must be fought.

Prudence never realized how much she tempted him at that moment—how he longed to cast all wisdom to the winds and kneel down on the dusty roadway, right at her feet, and tell her that no matter what honor demanded of him, he loved her, and her alone—would always love her, till the the moon and stars faded and the earth crumbled into dust.

But before him and between them them was the tear-wet, supplicant face of the girl whom—all unwittingly—he'd 'compromised.'

Virginia had played her part well—and had won. An inglorious victory, it is true, but——

"If he isn't head over ears in love with me now he soon will be," that self-complacent damsel had confided to her hostess, with a confident little smile, which seemed to say: Few men can resist ME for long!"

Mrs. Vansittart had thrown her weight in on Virginia's side.

"The whole countryside is talking about how this silly girl spent practically the whole night in your cottage. You can't outrage Mrs. Grundy and get away with it, you know. Unfortunately, it's always the woman who pays."

Peter had listened with a set face and a despairing heart. He was chivalrous to a degree—quixotically so, as nice men very often are—and his way seemed plain before him. He had compromised the girl and he must make amends, even though his happiness were wrecked thereby.

Had he known that Prudence loved him, and had Bert Traymore failed to stage that little drama at the hospital giving the very definite impression that Prudence was his girl, and that he certainly didn't intend to let her go, it is very doubtful if Peter would have had the strength to link his own name further with Virginia's in a formally announced 'engagement.'

But Fate had worked hard for Virginia, skilfully aided by herself.

Peter had seen Traymore with his arm round Prudence, and what made matters worse was that, but a few minutes before Peter himself had held her in his own strong arms, and Prudence had yielded as a girl—unless she be the veriest coquette—can only yield when love has come to her.

She had tacitly admitted Traymore to be her sweetheart, immediately after responding to another man's embrace.

That meant she was a heartless flirt.

But as he stood there in the moonlight, taking farewell of her, thoughts of rancour and bitterness fled from Peter's mind. He could only see the beauty and the sweetness of her; and painfully, agonizingly, force himself to believe it wasn't meant for him—and never would be his.

Prudence found her voice at last.

"I—I ought to—to congratulate you, oughtn't I?"

How queer the banal words sounded. How cold and formal!

"That's—kind—of you."

Kind?

She could have laughed hysterically in her agony.

But all she said was:

"I hope you'll be very happy."

(Yes, the words came easier now, although it seemed as if some other girl were speaking.)

"Happy? Is anybody happy?" Peter stared moodily across the little stream to the woods where a nightingale, as though in mockery of his misery, has started to trill out a throbbing love song.

Then, stooping down, he plucked a spray of honeysuckle growing by the roadside, hardly conscious what he did, except that to look into the face of the girl he loved was something that he couldn't compass without breaking down entirely.

A will-o'-the-wisp flew over the hedge, and as Peter saw it his lips curved into a bitter smile.

"That's happiness for you—a will-o'-the-wisp!" said he, nodding towards the glittering point of light. He made a swift move as though to capture it, but it was gone! "Symbolical, isn't it? Reach out and try to catch it, and——" (here Prudence saw that the tiny glowing insect was again circling round the hedge, but always out of reach)—"it mocks you for a fool!"

Was this the speech of a man in love? thought Prudence, a queer hope springing up that this sudden engagement with Virginia was a mistake Peter would soon discover, and correct.

But his next words dashed that hope to atoms, putting her outside the pale of Peter's life.

"I hope that you'll be very happy with Bert Traymore."

FABLES ON HEALTH

GET REAL FRESH AIR.

"Sure, I get plenty of fresh air," insisted Mr. Mann of Anytown, under the cross examination of his physical instructor.

"Um!—but do you know what to do with it after you get it?" asked that very wise gent.

"Fresh air is the cheapest and most efficient health builder on the market. It's the thing that gets into the little old red bloos cells which absorb the oxygen and give off the carbon dioxide.

"Maybe you leave your windows open and some air comes in, but the right place to get fresh air is, obviously, out of doors. How often do you really get out of doors? Not any oftener than you can help it. Cooped in the office all day and in the house on Sunday.

"Men and women who work in offices and factories don't get much of a chance at outdoors. But it's worth making a special effort.

"Meanwhile, since you feel you have to stay in an office, the main thing is to keep the air in circulation. In other words OBTAIN AS GOOD A SUBSTITUTE AS POSSIBLE. The first hygienic requirement of an office is that it be not too hot. To maintain a good circulation, a window board or screen can be used to deflect the air so that a draft will not be created.

"And here is something few people know: the best way to open windows is at both the top and bottom."

KEEPING COFFEE FRESH.

Keep coffee in bright tin or glass, tightly closed, away from the light where it is dry and cool. Fresh ground coffee is much stronger and has a better flavor than that allowed to stand for a time after being ground.

Paderewski's Pet Poodle Ill

Too much travel, too little exercis e, an attack of cold and old age was too much for Ping Lung, Ignace Paderewski's 15-year-old pet Pekingese poodle. The poodle is sick—maybe it'll die. Hence Paderewski cancelled his engagements, wired ahead for specialists and nurses and then took Ping Lung from Siox City, Ia., to Chicago in his special car. Mr. and Mrs. Parewski are in constant attendance while an attempt is being made to save the purp. Picture show the Paderwskis and the dog.

An office is on constant guard at the special car, in Chicago, wherein specialists and expert nurses are trying to save the life of Ping Lung, Padedewski's pet dog. The photograph shows reporters waiting for Paderewski to come out and give them the latest word.

LANDLORD CELEBRATES.

NEWARK, N. J., May 2.—Tanko Sokolowski will keep on washing windows. He likes his job. He has saved his money and recently he bought a $100,000 apartment house in which some of his employers live. Some day he may have enough money to buy the Woolworth Building or Grant's Tomb. But he will keep on washing windows. He likes his job.

"GOOD MORNING" Always—when you serve

SCARFS.

Scarfs of lace or of chiffon are draped about the new hats with ends that may be thrown about the shoulders for a scarf.

DRIED IN AIR.

Wet furs should always be dried in the air, but away from heat if you wish to keep them in the best condition.

FLESH LINING.

The black chiffon or lace frock of to-day is much more apt to be mounted on a flesh colored lining than on a black one.

SILK COATS.

Silk coats are being extensively shown now, and they are frequently part of a three-piece outfit as well as a separate wrap.

REMOVE STAINS.

To remove stains of chocolate or cocoa, moisten with cold water then cover with borax and let stand for a few minutes before you rinse with boiling water.

You'll Get Rid of Blackheads Sure

There is one simple, safe, and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this, get two ounces of peroxines powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dirt and dust and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The peroxine powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WORK ON EDUCATION

The District President at Deloro Meeting Found Experience In Institute More Practical Than College Course — Two Branches Were Entertained.

MARMORA, May 1.—The Women's Institutes of Marmora and Springbrook were the guests of the Deloro Institute on the evening of Wednesday, April 30.

Mrs. Saunders, the president at Deloro, was in the chair. Mrs. Shannon delighted those present by an instrumental solo. Mrs. Williams, of Deloro, sang in her usual pleasing manner.

Mrs. Saunders gave a short resume of the year's work at Deloro. They had 30 members and had an average attendance of 18 for the year. They had held eleven regular meetings and five special meetings, including a bazaar, a dance and social evenings. During the year they had raised over $400. This had been spent mainly in relief and charity. Their main work this year was in sending a little Deloro lad with a deformed foot to the hospital. The latest reports were that he was showing considerable improvement.

Mrs. Brown, of Bonar Law, district president, said she considered Deloro one of the best societies in the district. They had the reputation of being most prompt in sending in reports, also that they have the first Girls' Institute in the district. Mrs. Brown said she was speaking to the girls tonight and the older people could listen if they wanted to. She spoke of the value of institute work and what it meant if a band of 18 girls were working for the good of the community and if they improve the community they help the nation.

Like College Course

She said she had heard one speaker say that a thorough knowledge of institute work was equal to a college education. At the time, Mrs. Brown said she doubted the statement, but the more she thought of it, the more she believed it. So much of a college education could not be put to practical use.

She spoke of the different courses provided by the institute, home nursing, domestic science, millinery and dressmaking. She laughingly told the girls that if they wished to experiment in the millinery course, they could experiment on her.

Mrs. C. Bleeker, of Marmora, said that while in Toronto last week, she had been speaking, both to the provincial president and also the Dominion president, Mrs. Todd, and they had said that while for a few years institutes had seemed at a standstill, and there had been some misunderstanding with the department, that now it was moving forward with a new impetus and the future looked bright.

Minister Interested

Mrs. Bleeker, also spoke of a conversation with Mr. Putnam, and he spoke of the interest the new minister of agriculture, Mr. Martin, had in institute work, and that he had some plans for the rural work, which hadn't been announced yet.

Mrs. Bleeker said every one who made a speech, in reality made three, (1) The speech he planned to make, (2) The speech he made, and (3) The one he might have made, but that as she was speaking impromptu, this didn't refer to her.

Mrs. Shannon and Mrs. Williams again favored the audience with much appreciated musical selections. This was followed by community singing.

Then, Mrs. Williams gave an excellent reproduction of an English family visiting the theatre, and being troubled by a lady ahead with a big hat. This was enjoyed by all. Very dainty refreshments were served by the two Deloro institutes.

Mrs. Milliken moved a vote of thanks to the ladies who had given addresses.

Mrs. Nickle, president of Marmora Institute, moved a vote of thanks to Deloro for the delightful evening given, and Mr. Williams, of Springbrook, thanked the ladies for the splendid supper provided.

Mr. Baker sang several solos and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Repairing Roads

Work is progressing rapidly on the roads in town. The steam crusher has been busy for several days on Forsythe Street and minor improvements are being made on the other roads.

Mr. Moir, of Trent Bridge, was in town on business Tuesday.

Mr. H. Payette, former principal of the Continuation School, was visiting friends in Marmora over the week-end.

While Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Wiggins and daughter, Helen, of Belleville, were visiting old friends over the week-end, Helen took the opportunity of meeting all her school chums by calling at the Continuation School on Monday.

Business Change

Mr. Wm. Linn moved his grocery stock out of the Narrie Block yesterday and is discontinuing his business. This is necessitated owing to the purchase of the block by Mr. Narrie, who is putting in an entirely new stock of boots and shoes. Mr. Linnex pects to resume his old occupation of cheese making.

Mr. Philip Sopha has purchased a new sedan, which is a fine addition to his taxi and livery business.

The property on Forsythe Street, formerly occupied by Mr. J. D. Narrie's shoe store, is being cleared up after the fire. The removal of the wreckage greatly helps the appearance of the street. The property on which Sweet Bros. old store, which was also destroyed by fire, stood, is being cleaned also, and Mr. Michael Kouri, who has bought the lot, intends to build a store on it in the near future.

MAKING MAKE MONEY MONEY

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

The high cost of burglar and some other forms of insurance has brought about the development of a new type of insurance.

Mr. A. insures his goods against burglary in a straight policy that costs him, we will say, $40.00 per thousand. But he finds that by co-insurance he can reduce this cost to $32.00 if he will accept the 80-20 clause. This means that in case of loss by burglary the company will pay him 80% of his loss and he must stand the other 20%. And for taking 20% of the risk he saves 25% (and often considerably more) of the premium.

By sharing part of the risk he becomes interested in his own protection; he looks after locks and bolts and takes more precaution than if none of the risk was his. For that reason the company can afford to insure his goods for less.

Automobile insurance is developing a similar type of protection though it does not have the same name. The insurer agrees to pay the first fifty dollars of damage, the company takes over the rest. This greatly lowers the cost of insurance while it still protects the owner from heavy loss.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE TWINS SAVE TOM THUMB

Sure enough, there was Tom Thumb

"You'll never, never guess where we are going next," said Mister Muggs, as he started his little automobile.

"Where?" cried the Twins.

"To see Tom Thumb. He lives in Once-Upon-a-Time Land, too, with his father and mother."

Well the little car went past seven forests and over seven rivers and finally stopped at a gate in front of a farmhouse.

When they knocked at the door, Mrs. Thumb herself opened it.

"Oh, dear!" she sobbed. "Isn't it dreadful! You've heard the bad news, of course."

"What bad news?" asked Mister Muggs. "No, we didn't hear of any bad news. What's happened?"

"It's Tom!" cried Mrs. Thumb. "He's gone again. Once he was lost down a mouse-hole, and once the cow ate him, and once the wolf gobbled him up."

"But when he came home the last time we thought he was safe, and now he's been gone since yesterday morning."

"Well, then, if that's the case," said Mister Muggs, "we'll hunt for him. That's what we came for, to help anybody in trouble. For although the stories all say, 'and they lived happily ever after,' you can never be sure. The Fairy Queen sent us."

First they went to see the lion.

"As big as one of your eyes, said the fairyman.

"Ugh! I wouldn't be bothered," said the lion. And he turned over and went to sleep.

Then they went to see the tiger.

"Did you eat up Tom Thumb?" asked Nick.

"How fat is he?" asked the tiger.

"Not fat at all," said Nick.

"Then I wouldn't be botherrd," said the tiger, giving his tail a whack against the ground to show that he meant it.

Then they went to see the bear.

"Did you eat Tom Thumb?" asked Nancy.

"How sweet is he?" asked the bear.

"He isn't sweet at all!" said Nancy.

"Oh, get out!" growled the bear. "If I can't have honey I won't eat anything."

So they all went back to the house.

"What were you doing yesterday?" asked Mister Muggs.

"I made apple-butter," said Mrs. Thumb.

"Where did you put it?"

"In big crocks in my cellar."

"Then, that's where your son is," declared Mister Muggs.

And when they lifted a lid, sure enough there was Tom Thumb, looking like a Brownie.

WEEKLY LONDON LETTER

BY MILTON BRONNER

LONDON, May 2.—Christiania, capital of Norway, has busted right into the front page of the great Scandinavian newspapers with something new under the sun—a trades union of errand boys and a threat of a big strike if they don't get what they demand.

And all up and down the capital's leading retail business street you can hear the shopkeepers saying they don't know what the world is coming to. Fancy? These kids have named a committee and actually had a circular printed and distributed all over town urging all the boys to join the union.

Their principal demands are three: They don't want to be used by their employers in any strike-breaking work when their elders are on strike; they want holidays with full pay, and finally they want pay for overtime.

From Temesvar, a town formerly Hungarian and now Rumanian, comes the strange news that Elena Jovanovics, having waited 103 years for death to come along, finally got tired of the strain and took the job in hand herself.

Very deliberately she drove a nail in the wall of her bedroom, twisted a bed sheet into a rope and hung herself. She has already outlived 13 children, 20 grandchildren and any quantity of great grandchildren.

When you knock around among Frenchmen and Englishmen who fought in the great war, if you mention the Portuguese troops, you are usually met with a sarcastic laugh.

But just the same Portugal, following in the footsteps of the big allied and associated powers, has just done homage to her dead by burying not one, but two unknown soldiers in the great church of Batlaha. One of the unknown soldiers died fighting for his country in the battlefields of Africa, near the Portuguese possessions, and the other died in the fields of Flanders.

Our big cities usually boast about their progress. Paris boasts about its stomach. At least, one scribe took the trouble to go to the great central market and get the official figures as to what Paris consumes in a year's time.

Among the various items he found that it ate 1,000,000 quintals of wheat and 2,500,000 of flour; 1,000,000 quintals of potatoes; 200,000,000 kilograms of meat taken from 250,000 cows, 300,000 calves, 2,000,000 sheep and 500,000 pigs. For it coffee, its warm drinks and its cakes it used 1,200,000 quintals of sugar and it also swallowed 350,000,000 of litres of milk.

You can easily convert these figures by remembering that a kilogram is about 2.2 pounds and that 10 quintals make nearly one of our tons. A litre is 1.76 pints.

Between laughs, Italy is trying to figure out whether the joke is on the big city of Milan or on Amundsen the great explorer.

Recently the latter was expected in Milan on a certain train. The reporters of all the big journals were on hand and sure enough a man, bearing a striking resemblance to the pictures of the honored guest, stepped out of the train. They immediately made a rush for him and he obliged by giving a very exciting interview about the polar regions. And he spoke a very perfect Italian, so a good time was had by all.

A few hours later the chief clerk of Milan's leading hotel phoned to the newspapers that Amundsen had arrived.

"But we interviewed him three hours ago."

"Not at all. He has just arrived."

FERGUSON GIVEN A BIG RECEPTION

He Outlined the Policy the Government Intended to Follow and Spoke Well For Agriculture the Paramount Importance of Ontario

TORONTO, May 2. — (Canadian Press—Large and enthusiastic meeting of the members of ward one, Liberal Conservative Association was held last night in the St. Barnaby's Hall, when Premier Ferguson, Hon. John S. Martin, minister of Agriculture and Geo. Oakley spoke. Premier Ferguson who was given a rousing reception, outlined policy that government intended to follow and stressed the fact that although agriculture was of paramount importance to the province, building up of strong industrial fabric was equally essential and would help further to further to stimulate agriculture by providing stronger home market for produce. In this respect he referred to visit to England of Hon. Charles McCrea, who, he said it was confidently expected, would interest wealthy British investors in possibilities of Northern Ontario.

Premier also referred to program of welfare work that government was undertaking and co-operation that was being received from various philanthropic societies, future, he intimated to audience might be looked forward with hope.

DRAMATIC CLUB OF DOWNEYVILLE

DOWNEYVILLE, May 2.—At the Hall here, Wednesday night, the Downeyville Dramatic Club presented the play, "A Celebrated Case," in a most creditable and able manner to a very large audience, the hall being packed to the doors. It was a difficult play, and the different characters were very creditably taken. Miss Agnes Murry, as John Renaud's wife, and Clare Harrington, as John, were splendid; also O'Rourke, the Irish servant, by Paul McGuire, was indeed worthy of mention.

The Duchess d'Aubeterre, by Miss Pearl Herlibey, and the Duke, by Leslie Lucas, were all that could be desired; also the Chanoinesse, by Miss Mary Collins, were worthy of special mention. There were also some twenty soldiers in uniform, besides guards and villagers.

A synopsis of the play follows:—

Just prior to the battle of Fontenoy, between the French and English, a soldier of the French army, John Renaud by name, discovers Lazare, a camp follower, plundering the Count de Mornay, a proscribed French nobleman, who, while fleeing from his native country, is caught between the two armies and seriously wounded. John Renaud drives off the robber, and then receives from the dying count a sum of money for himself, besides some jewels and deeds of property which he entrusts the soldier to give over to the Count's little daughter. John Renaud accepts the sacred trust, and being but a short distance from his own home, takes the deeds and jewels and money to leave with his wife. He has an affectionate scene with his wife and little daughter, Adrienne, and then hurries away to join his regiment. He has been followed to the house by Lazure, who enters it and, at the point of a revolver, is compelling John's wife, Mdaeline, to say "I am with your father," to the little daughter, Adrienne, who asks who is there. He also secures the key, and takes all papers, deeds, monies, etc., murders Madeline, and escapes. The villagers enter, and the child, when asked who has been there last, replies her father, thus throwing the accusation of murder on John Renaud. He has a military trial and is condemned to the galleys for life.

After twelve years the little daughter, Adrienne, who has been adopted by the Duchess d'Aubeterre, who is also the guardian of Valentine, the daughter of the late Count de Mornay. In this act Lazure, assuming the title of the Duke de Mornay, and fortifying his claim by the deeds and papers he has stolen from the murdered woman, returns to France and lays claim to the estate and also assumes parnteage of the Count's daughter, Valentine. John Renaud also appears in the guise of a convict, and in a highly dramatic scene, his relationship to his daughter is discovered. She sets about proving her father's innocence, and securing his liberty from her foster father, assisted by O'Rourke, a valuable Irish servant, who promised John to look after his daughter.

Lazure, who has secured the estates, over-reaches himself, and when called by John Renaud to establish his innocence by testifying that he (the alleged Count de Morney) had given his valuable jewels and deeds to the soldier on the battlefield, thus establishing the cause John Renaud had given for his visit home the night of the murder and insuring his innocence, the bogus Count denies that he ever gave papers or jewels to his rescuer as they are now in his possession. "Then they must have been returned to you by the murderer," says the convict. "I tell you no," replies Lazure. "Then I tell you that if no one ever restored them to you, you took them from the hands of my dying wife," said the convict.

John Renaud's accusation is assisted by the presence of the Chanoinesse of the College, who knew the real Count and recognized Lazure as an imposter. The play ends by the arrest of Lazure and the restoration of John Renaud to his liberty.

Characters in the play:—

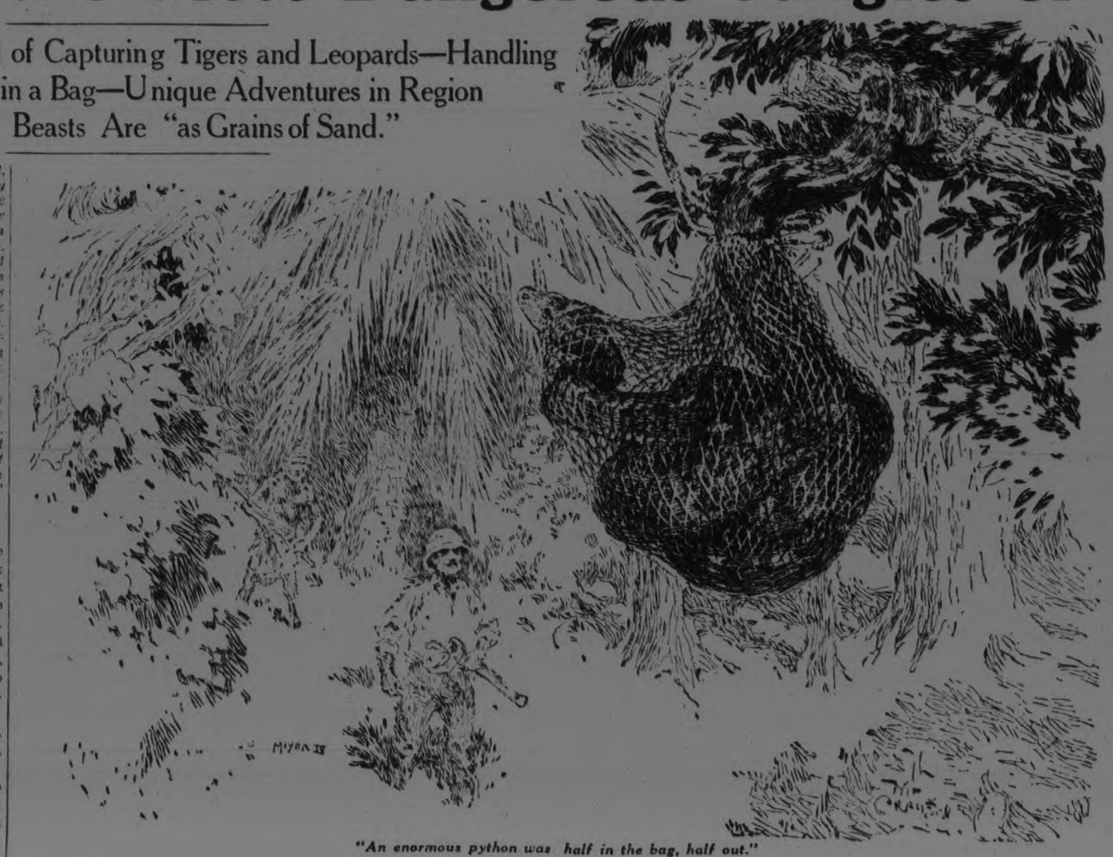
Catching Big Game Alive in a Magic Net In the Most Dangerous Jungles of Sumatra

Testing New Method of Capturing Tigers and Leopards—Handling a Huge Python in a Bag—Unique Adventures in Region Where Beasts Are "as Grains of Sand."



"An enormous python was half in the bag, half out."

After having been compelled, through the misfortune of a heavy storm, to cast on the China sea the entire consignment of beasts that he was transporting as a royal gift from the king of Siam to the king of Spain, Mr. Mayer and the passengers and crew of the tramp steamer Poo Ann escaped with their lives only by his inspiration to have the vessel use copra as fuel when the coal was gone. Thus they limped into port, whereupon Mr. Mayer returned to his home at Trengganu, where we now find him.

This is [illegible] of a new series of articles upon adventures in the wilds of Sumatra and Borneo by Mr. Mayer, who is one of the most noted of animal trappers and trainers of the Orient, or the west. The fifth article, "A Death Duel in the Jungle," will appear in an early issue.

By CHARLES MAYER

IT was when I was idling at the kuala in Trengganu, making daily visits to the Sultan—just for the pleasure it gave me to be with him—that an idea struck me. It struck me so hard that it knocked me out of the mood for soft cushions, tobacco and slow talk. I decided to go at once to Palembang, in Sumatra, and get into action.

"Pack up," I said to Hsi Chu, I, my Chinese "boy," and to the Sultan, "Now I must go away."

"You are like a man," he said, "to whom some hand is beckoning. What is this sign you see? is it a good sign?"

"I cannot tell you in words," I answered, "because it came to me in a picture. I will make a picture of it for you."

With a pencil and paper I drew a diagram. It was my new idea set down in black and white—an idea for catching the wild beasts that climb in trees. It was very simple.

The Sultan looked me full in the eyes. "You are very clever," he said. At the moment I was so pleased with my invention that I was almost inclined to agree with him.

From Trengganu to Palembang is a long journey. But I knew Sumatra—knew that it was a trappers' paradise—and I was eager to try out my new scheme. I went first to Singapore, where I took a small steamer that deposited me in Palembang in two days. I realized then that it was not only the business of animal trapping that had brought me, but a longing to be again with an old hadji, my first real friend in the Malay States. I had not seen him since my visit to him after the tragic death of Ali, his nephew, and my faithful servant, gored to death before my eyes by a tapir.

New Way With Beasts

IMPATIENT as I was to be off to the Malay quarter, I must first present myself at the government house. I there received a sort of verbal freedom of the settlement.

As I walked toward the house of the hadji, he came to meet me. He touched his brow and his breast and his deeply lined and kindly face shone with pleasure. "You have come here to see me—to honor an old man with your visit—but there is some other thing that has really brought you. What is it?"

"A picture came into my mind," I told him, "as if it had walked on legs, and I saw myself capturing wild beasts in trees in a new and strange way."

"You were ever a worker of magic, tuan," he answered.

I said: "When I wish to trap a rhinoceros, I get him to step on a spot that he thinks is good solid earth, and it gives under him."

"Betul" (True).

"It will be the same with a leopard. He will trust his weight to the branch of a tree that seems solid in every part, but, since it is half sawed in two, it will break beneath him."

"And he will fall to the ground on four good legs, according to his habit, and take himself off?"

"No, no. Before he falls, lured by the smell of live chickens, he will have sprung into a net that lies mouth open along the branch over the gash in the limb."

"Then net and beast will fall to the ground together?"

"No, once more. In and out, round the mouth of the net, is laced a rope. The end of this is tied to a strong branch above. When the lower limb breaks and falls, the mouth of the net is drawn together by the rope, pulling against the weight of the beast. He will hang from the upper branch until I come with my men and cut him down."

After the morning meal next day, the making of the trial began. The hadji selected two rapid rattan workers. An audience gathered to watch them, and their fingers flew. The net, when finished, was long enough to hold a large leopard and had a round opening three feet in diameter. A twisted rattan rope with a long, free end was laced around it.

By the time everything was ready for the "try-out" my fame had spread to the farthest corner of the Malay quarter, and we had an audience of a hundred or more trailing after us when we went out to select a tree.

A Fascinated Observer

A SUITABLE tree was found just outside the kampong. It had two strong branches, one above the other. A man was sent up to saw half through the lower branch, and the net was so placed along it that this gash came at about the middle of its length. The body and mouth of the net were held open by slender strips of rattan tied to twigs. The end of the draw-rope was attached to the upper branch.

The man now sat straddling the limb before the open mouth of the net, and a stone weighing about twenty pounds was hoisted up to him. He held it poised in his hands for a moment, then heaved it into the rattan bag. There was a crash. Down went the end of the limb, the net and stone with it. The men below sprang away, but the net did not touch the earth. With the mouth drawn closely together, it swung free, suspended from the upper branch.

So far, my invention worked. The hadji explained to the bewildered audience that this was a dress rehearsal and the stone would later be a leopard trying to get a chicken. It was interesting to watch their faces as they caught the idea. "Betul," they said. Over and over: "Betul! Betul!"—slowly nodding their heads.

It was a lucky thing for me that among the onlookers there was a traveler from the southwest, Abdul Rahman, who had come down the River Musi from a place six days' journey away. He had come down on a raft of bamboo poles and had brought crude rubber to sell and the very best quality of rattan. The raft itself was to be broken up and the poles sold for building purposes. He and his men would go back in the boat they had brought down as a trailer. That was his original plan, but, being a man of resources, he decided to change it and take me back with him. He had fallen in love with my swinging bag. Abdul Rahman was a man of importance in the district from which he came. He was the Peng-hulu (headman) over three kampongs.

No monarch could have invited me to his kingdom with greater dignity than Abdul Rahman, as he asked me to come to his kampong. "There are beasts in the jungle there," he said, "many, many, like grains of sand, and their skins shine like level water in the sun."

I talked the matter over with the hadji, whose advice I greatly valued. He assured me that the man "spoke truth."

It was Abdul's bamboo raft and the evident ease with which he had come down the river that finally decided me. The finest animal in the world is no good to a collector if there is no easy means of transportation at hand.

The hadji picked out the boats I was to take. The one in which I was to travel was fully forty feet long and the one that was to carry my supplies was thirty-five feet. The supply boat was capable of carrying a ton and a half. They had been made by the hollowing out of huge logs and they had been very carefully thinned down and were shaped not unlike great canoes.

Facing a Tiger

WHEN the time came for the selection of the men, an embarrassing situation arose: Almost the entire male population of the kampong offered itself. I had not only a reputation as a worker of magic, but as a man who bestowed money freely. The expedition promised plenty of food and plenty of sport. The hadji took over the delicate matter of selection. He picked out ten men for me, fine specimens, five for each boat. The men traveled light. They carried merely an extra sarong, twisted round their heads as a turban. They all wore at their sides their parangs, heavy, eighteen-inch knives. A Malay without a knife is no Malay at all.

We got off at sundown. Abdul Rahman's boat led the way.

It was in the afternoon of the sixth day that we neared his kampong. A crowd had collected on the river-bank. The kampong was naturally expecting the return of its headman, but instead of one boat, here were three! The kajang-roof on my boat meant to them a European, because the natives never used this protection from the sun.

Abdul Rahman waited until we had all landed and he was surrounded by a wide-eyed circle. Then he announced: The tuan is a pawang (witch-doctor). No beast can take his life. He has come to kill all the animals in the jungle. He is a worker of magic. I have seen."

The crowd parted silently to let me and my men pass. They were deeply awed.

Abdul put me up at his own house. While I waited on his veranda, his women gave it a furious house-cleaning. The supplies were brought up by many hands. "Chu I" allowed them to carry everything but the sacred guns; these he looked after himself. Every man and boy wanted the honor of carrying one of the tuan's possessions. "He is not a Dutchman," I overheard them saying. And: "He can work wonders. The peng-hulu has seen and heard."

I told Abdul that I must have quantities of rattan in lengths of at least thirty feet and that his men must cut for me straight young trees two inches thick and at least twelve feet high. While this was being done, I decided to make an excursion into the wilds to look the ground over. I took with me my ten men and Abdul Rahman with three of his men. We had gone a very short distance when the men in front stopped dead.

"There is a tiger!" they cried.

The tiger came unawares, and probably as surprised as we were, for rarely is this beast encountered in the daytime. The men jumped back, leaving me at the head of the procession. I never carry anything in the jungle but a parang in my hand. My gun was with Abdul, who was close behind me. He thrust it forward, and I grabbed it.

Here was the first test I was to be put to in the eyes of these natives. It was a vital moment. The tiger was about a hundred feet away—a beauty. Up went his tail. I knew what that meant. A tiger always twitches up his tail before he springs.

The Marksman's Spot

IN a moment he would let out his coughing roar and leave the ground in a spring. I have heard that roar dozens of times. It is paralyzing. No man or beast can hear it calmly. But the roar never came. On the striped creature's breast was the snowy white spot a tiger wears, as if for the benefit of the marksman. I took a quick but careful aim and sent a 50-110 explosive bullet straight through it. The tiger rolled over in the grass. I ran forward and the natives followed me. The bullet had made a killing wound.

The men began to heap insults on the dead creature. They spat on him and called him names. "Why didn't you stay at home?" they cried. "You wanted to see who was coming, didn't you? Well, you saw! You wanted chicken, didn't you? You got some lead!"

They hung the body up so that it would not be eaten by animals while we finished our reconnoitering. When we came back in an hour or two, all hands helped at skinning it. Our little party went back to the kampong in a state of jubilation—not so much because a tiger had been killed as because I had stood the test.

When a number of the swinging bags had been made under my direction, I called together the men of the kampong to explain how these nets were expected to work.

When I went to look for trees in which to place them, I found a dozen or more with fresh marks of leopard's claws on the bark. The leopard, after all, has much of the domestic cat in him and where he goes he goes again. Fortunately, before I set out, the possibility of having trouble with monkeys had occurred to me. The place was full of them.

A monkey has no legitimate interest in live, fluttering chickens, but his curiosity is enormous. If he discovered one of my ropes tied to the upper branch of a tree, he was capable of worrying the knot or even sliding down the rope itself to investigate. In order to guard against this, our final operation, after the net was placed, was to smear the upper branch and the net itself with bird-lime. I took the greatest care in arranging the nets.

About eight o'clock the following morning we started out to see what luck we had. There were twenty men with me. The first net to which we came was empty, but there was a stupid monkey chattering above it. He had his paw stuck up with bird-lime and had also managed to damage some of the pieces of rattan which held the net open. We repaired the mouth, which was sagging, and then went on to the next net—empty, too!

"Ghost! Ghost!"

AS we neared the third one, Abdul Rahman was well in the lead. He caught sight of it in the distance, stopped dead and threw out his hands, palms back, as if to warn us. He continued to stand there without a word, without moving. I ran to him. He turned and stared at me with a queer, dazed look.

This man bred on the edge of the jungle had seen a strange sight. For a moment I did not understand. I could make out the bag clearly. It hung down limp from the upper branch and was distended. Obviously an animal was in it.

Then something happened that was stranger than anything I had ever seen in my life. The bag swung slowly to the right, then to the left, and lifted itself straight into the air. When it had stopped there for a moment, needing no support from above or below, it waved about with a sickening motion, then slowly lowered itself and hung limp again.

The men crowded up to see. I could hear their heavy breathing. "Ghost! Yes, ghost!" I heard them say. The air was thick with superstitious awe. There is a contagion about that sort of thing. I was by no means ready to take an oath that I had not caught the devil. I had never seen gravity defied before.

It was Abdul Rahman's "Let us go back, tuan," that sent me running forward. The spotted sunlight confused me and it was not until I was almost under the net that I saw what had actually happened. There my relief broke from me in English, which I had hardly spoken for months. I heard myself shout, "That's no sight for a drinking man!"

An enormous python was half in the bag, half out. He had shot into it for the chickens, had swallowed one, in fact. The branch had broken with him; the draw-rope at the mouth of the bag had tightened about his middle, and it was further tightened by his weight.

A Terrifying Prisoner

THE end of his tail was wrapped about the branch. He proceeded to give me another demonstration of how he could haul himself up with it. I began to laugh. I roared. There is nothing so reassuring as laughter. The natives ran up to me. When they saw what it was, their half-naked bodies swayed and doubled with mirth.

My own laughter stopped suddenly. The thought had come to me that, though we had a fine prize, more than three yards of snake were still free. This was sobering. The managing of a python's tail is a matter of life and death.

Fortunately we had plenty of good rope with us. I sent a fine, active fellow up the tree with explicit directions. He was to tie a rope in a slip-knot on the snake's tail and—very near the end of the tail—to give the rope what is called a "half-hitch." He carried out the directions and then, passing the rope under the branch, he threw the free end to the men below. They gave it a strong pull, which loosened the hold of the snake one coil, drawing the tip of his tail downward.

Holding quite taut the rope attached to the tail, they threw the free end of the rope to the man in the tree. He passed it over the branch and dropped it again. A strong jerk and another coil was loosened. In short, they unwound the snake, loop after loop, by means of the rope, which served, in a way, as an elongation of his tail.

Another rope, fastened with a slip-noose around him where his body extended beyond the bag, was pulled also to loosen his hold on the branch. A second man was holding the rope by which the net was tied to the upper branch—ready to lower it when the time came. It was delicate and most dangerous work. A python's constricting power reaches to the last inch of him, and, though half of him was confined, he could still strike a terrific blow. When the last coil was unwound, the men held the tail and body-ropes taut, and the bag was lowered.

The "Magic Charm"

WHILE the net was still off the ground, we dealt with the snake's head. He had managed to force it through the mesh of the net and was hissing his threats. A python is not poisonous, but he can give a nasty bite. One of the men took off his sarong. This was folded flat and used to press the snake's head back into the bag. Then, pulling and hauling, all hands set to work to wrap the free end of the snake round and round the bag as if it had been a spool.

When he had been wound to the point where the rope was tied round his body, that was wrapped with him—being passed over him, back and forth, to hold him more firmly. The rope on the tip of the tail was also put round him and the bag for good measure.

The whole thing was then attached to a pole. Since the great bundle was fully eight feet long, it was looped up to the carrying-pole at both ends. The python weighed all of two hundred pounds. He was twenty feet long. The men had been at the work of securing him for two hours without a break. To keep Malays at work for two hours is an art in itself. They were pouring sweat. I decided that they had all better have a rest before we undertook the home stretch.

We sat on the ground, I smoking and the men chewing betel-nut. Each man began telling the others just what he had thought when he saw the bag waving in the air.

Abdul Rahman leaned towards me. He touched his brow in some embarrassment. "Would the tuan do me the honor," he said, "of telling me the charm he pronounced when he saw the net lifted high? Was it words of strong magic?"

For the moment I could not remember. Then it came back to me. I had shouted, of course, "This is no sight for a drinking-man!"

"Abdul Rahman," I answered solemnly, "it is a charm that has to do with the devil of devils!"

Loud Speaker Easy to Make

An emergency loud speaker can easily be made by putting each telephone receiver of a headset in an ordinary china cup with the ear cap down. The volume obtainable is often astonishing. Round cut glass fruit bowls or wooden chopping bowls are also quite effective. If the bottom of the dish is rather flat, the 'phone must be propped up by a couple of match sticks. Working along the same lines, picture frames and window panes can be experimented with. A very novel effect can be had by hanging a loud speaker unit, or a particularly good earphone, against a window which is draped with curtains. If an unsuspecting person is then seated near that window and the set turned on suddenly the result is very amusing.

RADIO BECOMING EDUCATIONAL FACTOR

EDUCATIONAL institutions, churches and newspapers have recognized the value of radio broadcasting, according to a recent issue of the commerce department radio service bulletin. This pamphlet is on sale at the government printing office, Washington, D.C. The February issue, which includes the latest broadcasting list, shows that ninety-five stations are owned by universities, colleges or schools. It lists forty-six newspapers or publishers operating stations, and twenty churches, not including some which utilize other stations. Every state has at least one station broadcasting entertainment, lectures, weather reports, &c. Two stations broadcast data from their market bureaus, and nine municipalities, chambers of commerce or boards of trade, have stations serving police forces or other community interests.

Quite Relieved

A WOMAN rushed excitedly to a house in a Yorkshire town. She knocked once very nervously, but there was no reply. A second knock produced no answer. Presently the window above was thrown open, and a woman's face appeared.

The woman below looked up and exclaimed, hurriedly: "Mrs. Skinner, yer 'usband's got a month's imprisonment!"

"Oh, dear me, Mrs. Bickersley," replied the other, "'ow yer did frighten me! I thought it was the man after the rent again."—Pearson's Weekly.

The Eel's Homing Instinct New Wonder Just Revealed

Impelled by Some Mysterious Force to Return to Place of Origin —Female Swallows Husbands and Lays Eggs at Bottom of Ocean

THE wonderful homing instinct and the remarkable passage by land and sea of the eel was discussed at the British Association.

Dr. J. Schmidt explained to the zoological section that "the breeding ground of the eel had at last been definitely located at a spot in the Atlantic northeast of the West Indies. From this breeding ground elvers migrated at the age of three years, and, following a northeasterly course, arrived ultimately at the coasts of Great Britain. The impulse forcing them to set out on this journey was apparently the search for fresh water, and there seemed to be no limit to the efforts the young eel would make in his endeavor to reach it. In illustrating this point the lecturer exhibited slides of young eels unable to ascend waterfalls wriggling a tortuous path over rocky ground, and in some cases crossing fields.

"It was, he said, remarkable that fish hatched in deep salt water in the tropics should undertake so great a journey to a colder climate. After a sojourn of about twelve years in British waters the eel was impelled by some mysterious force in Nature to return to his place of origin, and, reaching there, soon after reproducing the species died."

Another glimpse of this wonderful chapter in natural history is given by a correspondent of the London Observer, who says:

"The male elver does not proceed upstream beyond the limits of tidal waters. In these he may remain for from five to six years before attaining maturity, and a total length of not over twenty inches, when he takes to the sea once more.

"The female persists in her journey upstream, wriggling through minute interstices, or climbing the rough and weed-grown surface of lock-gates, until she ultimately reaches some suitable fresh-water pool, or gentle stream or deep ditch, in which she remains for from five to twenty years—burying herself in the mud in hard winter weather. When mature she may be from two to three feet in length; and, at this time, the head (like that of the male under similar circumstances) becomes longer—owing to a forward growth of the jaws—and the neck thinner; while the eyes acquire greater brilliance and an enormous size. By river and estuary she makes her way down to the sea—meeting there from four to six successive husbands, and devouring each of them after mating—and swims straight to the immemorial spawning ground at the bottom of the Atlantic, which occupies a comparatively small area—between 22 and 30 deg. N. and 48 to 65 deg. W.—thus trenching on the eastern border of the Sargasso Sea.

"Here she swims straight down to the bottom of the ocean—in this region presenting a deep depression, where the water is still and free from currents—one of the advantages which doubtless led to the selection of this locality for the safe deposition of the small and delicate ova. Here she lays her eggs and dies; and here, in absolute darkness (for sunlight penetrates to but a small fraction of its depth) in an abysmal shrine, the eggs are hatched."

"Here was the first test I was to be put to in the eyes of the natives."

What is the Supreme Human Art?

It Is an Art Open to All, and Does Not Require the Musician's Ear, the Painter's or Sculptor's Eye or Any Special Technique

By SALEM G. BLAND, D.D.

LET not my title be interpreted as the audacious attempt to settle a very debatable question—which of the forms of what is commonly known as art is of highest value.

A good case might be made for almost any one of them.

Does the highest place belong to the fashioning of a noble building, especially of one framed in fitting setting of lawns and trees and flowers and, it may be, rocks and hills and water? What loveliness is more untiring?

Or the still more enduring art of giving life to the marble?

Or the less lasting but more vivid and gripping appeal of the picture?

Or the art of what will outlast the canvas, the marble and the stone—the poem or the story. Or, most evanescent of all forms of art, yet, perhaps the most powerful, because making the strongest impact on the deepest element of human life, the emotions, the art of the musician, the singer, the actor?

I will not say which of these is the supreme art. I am thinking of an art beyond all of these.

Not as possibly may occur to some one, the art of character building. I do not count that an art. Character is not built or fashioned. It grows. In the formation of character there is no place for conscious art. In proportion as one thinks of building his own character does he fail to build it worthily. High character is not an achievement but a by-product. We win it not trying to win it. We achieve it when we are thinking of something else.

Self Forgetfulness

WE cannot by thinking add one cubit to our moral any more than to our physical stature. Self-forgetfulness is the indispensable atmosphere of the highest life. The supreme art is the art of living together. Supreme in the first place, because most vital to happiness. Our relations to people outweigh everything else. Place on one scale friendlessness—universal dislike or even universal distrust or, worst of all, universal contempt, and you could not find in all the world weights to pull that scale up. No man could endure such a condition. If he could not flee into some strange land and build up around him a new and friendly world he would end a life that had grown insupportable.

Wrong human relationship on even a limited scale—how this poisons life! A quarrel with just one man or woman may be devastating. Haman, after reciting the glory of his riches and the multitude of his children and all the things wherein the king had promoted him and how he had advanced him above the princes and servants of the king and how he alone had been invited with the king to Queen Esther's banquet, added, "Yet all this availeth me nothing so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting at the king's gate."

"Better a dinner of herbs where love is than a stalled ox and hatred therewith." A husband growing indifferent, a wife growing peevish, a son growing wayward, can turn the costliest home and most tasteful furnishings to dust and ashes.

Most Universal Art

AND the supreme art, in the second place, because the most universal.

This art is open to all.

We are not all endowed with artistic gifts, and where they are lacking it is impossible to supply them. The musician's ear, the sculptor's or painter's eye, must be there or education can do nothing. All of us are more or less shut out of the lower kingdoms of art. They are all notably aristocratic; each in its perfection is only for the few.

But into the highest kingdom of art all may enter, and not merely enter but achieve distinction—as high a place as they will.

Some, it is true, seem more gifted. They have a natural grace, tact, buoyancy, charm. Some are temperamentally glummer, grumpier, slower, less tactful. But the compensation for the latter is that their effort, because plainly more difficult, is more appreciated. It has more of moral value in it. They have less charm but people feel more sure of their sincerity and depth. The smile of the man who smiles only with a little difficulty has a peculiar attractiveness. Men of quick impatient temper who unquestionably try to control it are peculiarly loved. And so are men and women who wound by their frankness of lack of tact but are equally quick and frank in expressing regret. The kindness of the naturally rough and uncouth and reserved—how beautiful it is.

"You had not deemed so cold a mien
Could ere have kindled so,
And yet the sunlight may be seen
Less lovely on the summer's green
Than on a lawn of snow."

Happy Human Intercourse

WE cannot all hang our walls with costly paintings, but the face of a happy child is lovelier than any picture. No music is so sweet and restful as kindly words. No interior decoration, however mellow and harmonious, can give to the home what is given by the sense that pure hearts are sure of each other.

Life is not so constituted that the most precious things are the rarest and most difficult to win and hold. The more indispensable anything, the commoner and the more accessible. And so the most essential ingredients in that loveliest and most delightful of all things—happy, human intercourse—are precisely the things most open to all—sympathy, appreciation, confidence, eagerness to help and to be helped.

Perhaps there is nothing more to be desired than that there should come to us Canadian people a vision of how beautiful and stimulating and inexhaustible and ennobling a thing ordinary human intercourse may become.

Perhaps as a people, like the great and energetic but too materialistic race to which most of us belong, we have been more bent on achieving the conditions of happy and beautiful human life than achieving that life itself. We have been so busy accumulating quantities of stone, brick, lumber, tiles, porcelain, art glass, rugs and pictures that we have not had time to construct the house.

We are too ready to suppose that the business of living together is an instinct or is earned unconsciously. It is not. It is the highest, hardest, yet most universal and most rewarding of all arts.

COUNSEL PRESENT THEIR ARGUMENT

Many Citations in Support of Arguments Presented to Court in Red Arrow Tire Case.

In the continuation of the case of Hayes vs. the Directors of Red Arrow Tires, Ltd., this morning, Mr. Hall opened the argument with a statement of the law as he read it, and declared that the four defendants had expressly or impliedly authorized the incurring of liabilities by the company before ten per cent. of the authorized capital had been subscribed and paid for. The authorized capital was $2,000,000, and $200,000 should have been subscribed and paid before contracts were entered into.

Mr. Hall proposed to show that the agreement between Walters and the directors was a sham transaction showing breach of duty on the part of the directors. It is the duty of the directors not to accept the statements of promoters. "The promoter is the very last person on whose uncorroborated statement the director should rely in saying 'I had reason to believe.'"

The directors should have made independent inquiries.

Before October 28, 1921, there were seven recognized shareholders in the company, according to the minute book, and they were subscribers for one share each, equal to $700. These things were known to Walters, who was present, and he knew the arrangement with Stockdale to sell 10,000 shares of preferred stock. On that date all the provisional directors and Walters knew that none of the common stock had been disposed of because Walters was dealing with the company for 184,000 shares out of an issue of 200,000 shares.

The directors and Walters knew the proposed objects of the company were to manufacture automobile tires and tubes and apply for patents for processes and formulae.

The directors and Walters are deemed by law to be governed by the provisions of the Companies Act, Sections 26 and 113, the latter section making it a crime punishable by imprisonment to commence business before ten per cent. of the authorized capital is paid up. These sections are remedial legislation and should receive most liberal construction.

The purchase of these formulae and processes constituted the commencement of operations by the company. "I submit that the provision of Section 26 must be complied with before the company can commence operations."

Mr. Justice Wright— "You contend that paid for means in cash?"

Mr. Hall—"Yes, my Lord."

"I submit the agreement of October 24 between the company and Walters was illegal and void because prohibited by statute and punishable as an offence. The by-law was ultra vires as being authorization to carry on an illegal object. The object, too, was invalid. In the buying of the formulae and processes from Walters the directors all acted contrary to the statute, and the transaction is tainted with illegality and contrary to public policy.

The court must look beyond the form of the documents and look to the real substance of the transactions.

Mr. Justic Wright: "There's no question, you can't conceal fraud by formality."

"No, my Lord. I submit the agreement between Walters and the company is a sham transaction to evade sections of the Companies Act toward starting operations."

Protected by Law.

The creditor had every right to rely upon the Companies Act, providing that the company had ten per cent. of its captial paid up, Mr. Hall said.

The agreement of October 24 to barter and exchange 184,000 shares of stock for the formulae is not a subscription and payment. Walters never subscribed for any stock; his name was never entered as a shareholder and there is no pretense that he ever paid for any stock.

No resolution was ever passed by the directors accepting his formulae and processes or alloting him any stock.

The entries in the books of the companies are the protection of creditors and are open for inspection. These directors at the time did not intend to recognize Walters as a shareholder. His name not having been registered in the books of the company or recognized by resolution before the company went into dissolution, they cannot do it now. There was no subscription, allotment or payment in Walters' case.

There was a standing representation that ten per cent. of the capital stock had been subscribed and paid for.

Executory Contract.

The contract between Walters and the company is executory—it has not been carried out by either party. Walters is to furnish his formulae and processes and is also to furnish the company with all knowledge at his command, and the full fulfilment of Walters of his promises is a condition precedent to his calling on the company for 184,000 shares.

There is no record by by-law or minute-book that the formulae and processes were ever accepted. Turner merely received 20 sheets of paper, and there is no pretention that he ever furnished the knowledge. "Walters doesn't display any modesty about the knowledge he has acquired, and the directors believed they were getting the exclusive use of that knowledge locked up in that most valuable head."

The president of the company should have said, "I'm going to find out if we're getting so much trash and submit the question to my co-directors, and if satisfied we will pass a resolution alloting the stock to you."

Walters himself draws attention to his intention to deliver the blue-prints. He admits he had blue-prints and he thinks he gave them with the formulae, but has his doubts. Later he admits he did not think he gave them to the directors. He appreciated the importance of the blue-prints and interpreted the blue-prints as part of his written agreement. He did not furnish the information necessary to the working out of the formulae because the time had not arrived. These facts would be conclusive against any action Walters might bring against the company to enforce the registration of his name as a shareholder. Therefore in law and in fact he was not a shareholder. Walters could not enforce specific performance of his agreement and the company could not place him on the list against his will.

Formulae Condemned.

No money value was placed on Walters' formulae and processes. That statutory debt of $920,000 was not balanced by a determined value for the formulae. There was nothing new in the formulae and processes according to the defendants' expert. He would not use the formulae in his own factory or recommend it to others. On the one hand is $920,000 and on the other a consideration that their own expert would not use or recommend.

Even if Walters had been issued a certificate for the 184,000 shares he would not be a shareholder since he had not paid for his shares. "It is impossible for Your Lordship to define how to divide the formulae from the other considerations to be given. Your Lordship cannot say 'the formulae are worth so many shares of stock.' The contract is indivisible."

The four directors with all knowledge of the facts sat down with the promoter and endeavored to carry out the illegal objects, and they were doing what amounted to conspiracy.

Mr. Justice Wright—"There cannot be conspiracy without intent."

"Well, in any event it was illegal."

Hayes was dealing with the parties without knowing the internal organization of the company.

In closing with a list of thirty-three citations for His Lordship's reference, Mr. Hall said: "I think I have pretty well covered the various points."

"I don't think you have missed any," His Lordship smilingly replied.

Charges Not Consistent.

Mr. Parmenter: "I submit my Lord that this is a case where the maxim applies, "He who comes into equity must come with clean hands." Hayes was practically the promoter. He introduced Walters to my client, Mr. McDonald, and persuaded him to become a director. It ill becomes Mr. Hayes to make the charges which he makes in his statement of claim.

Mr. Justice Wright—"There are some things in that contract of Mr. Hayes that require a great deal of explanation."

Mr. Parmenter said Hayes was given advance information on the tenders and made the secret agreement with Stockdale.

Mr. Justice Wright: "That is hardly consistent with the lower tender. There is no room for doubt in my mind that Stockdale and Hayes conspired to see that Hayes got the contract. I am quite satisfied that these defendants acted in perfect good faith."

Mr. Parmenter: "The contract was never a legal contract on the part of the company. There is not a scintilla of evidence that Walters was dishonest. His evidence shows that Hayes knew all about the plan to sell one share to each shareholder and about the formulae and Stockdale's activities, and that his getting his money was conditioned on Stockdale's selling the stock. This is corroborated by Mr. Fragg, who says Hayes was in the office constantly.

I argue that he is now estopped from setting up this claim by his dealings with Stockdale.

The secret agreements with Stockdale indicated that Hayes knew the company might not have the money to pay him and he knew there was not ten per cent. of the stock paid up. He lends Stockdale $3,000, he says. In the witness box he said he would not give Stockdale credit for twenty-five cents. Walters says he urged Hayes to sign a contract and told him he continued at his own risk without one. Walters said in his evidence on commission that Hayes told him: "To the devil with the directors, I'm looking to John." "John" referred to Stockdale, with whom Hayes said he had a thorough understanding.

Hayes refused to enter into the contract he knew the directors had authorized and undertook to look to Stockdale. If he had any legal right against the directors by that course of action he waived it. He was not misled in the slightest into doing the work.

Mr. Justice Wright: "I have no hesitation in finding that."

Hayes Bought Property.

Hayes is now the owner of the property, having bought it through a dummy. It is conceivable that he might at some future time sell the property at a profit.

Mr. Justice Wright: "His position cannot be affected by that."

Directors do not owe any duties to creditors except as specified in the act, Mr. Parmenter continued. We could not sell our stock that we are required to sell before we can commence operations without employing a stock dealer.

Mr. Justice Wright: "That is different; the company was not incorporated to sell stock."

"No, my Lord, I agree with that. The object of the company was to make tires. It could not do that without a formulae and it could not get the formulae without an agreement and contract.

Mr. Parmenter: I understand your Lordship agreed with my contention that the Walters agreement did not commence the company's business."

Mr. Justice Wright: Oh no, that is a matter for serious consideration. I did not agree with that.

Mr. Parmenter contended that the construction of the building was merely incidental and was not part of the operations of the company, and that the agreement with Walters did not mark the beginning of operations for which the company was incorporated.

Agreement was Executed.

The agreement itself is really two in one. The real consideration for the stock is the formulae and processes. The contract between Walters and the company called for the delivery of the formulae and processes, and the giving of his services and skill and knowledge were a separate covenant in the same contract.

Mr. Justice Wright: "Then there would be no consideration for the last?"

Mr. Parmenter: "There might not be except that it was under seal."

Regarding the value of the formulae and processes Mr. Parmenter asked the court to accept the testimony of the defendants' expert that they were of some value.

Mr. Justice Wright did not think the court should enquire into the adequacy of the consideration. "There is no doubt that they were of some value," he said.

Mr. Parmenter contended on another point that there is no legal necessity for notice of allotment. The bylaw is an allotment and is all that is necessary.

Mr. Justice Wright: "I don't think that he could be heard to say he was not a shareholder.

Mr. Parmenter: "I contend that the stock is fully paid up, since it is not for the court to inquire into the consideration unless fraud or deceit are present. Even assuming that this is an illusory consideration it has been held that the court will separate the real and illusory and say what is a true value.

"Assuming for a moment that this might be treated as a colorable transaction, you would deduct the 100,000 shares transferred to the directors and the 35,000 given as security, you still have 49,000 shares at $5, equal to $245,000 paid up. So still we have complied with section 26 in that ten per cent. of the stock had been paid up."

Mr. Parmenter maintained that the directors had acted in good faith and the stocks they issued for consideration of the formulae was fully paid up. The directors all believed they could with these formulae start business and make a profit.

MUSICIANS AT KIWANIS CLUB

Prizewinners at Musical Festival Were Guests of Honor Today--Address by Mr. Percy Lees.

Musicians who, by individual or collective effort won prizes at the Musical Festival in Toronto this week were guests of honour at today's Kiwanis Club luncheon. The list included Mr. John Crane, president of the Symphony orchestra, Mr Rupert Gliddon, conductor of the orchestra, Mr. Fred Skitch, president of the Peterboro Male Voice Choir, Kiwanian Martin Chenhall, conductor of the choir and Stanley Thompson, secretary also Mr. R. A. Browne and Mr. Maurice Park both prize-winners in the vocal contests. Other guests to-day were Mr. Percy Lees territorial secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. G. H. Roper, local secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Dr. A. Y. McNair, Mr. Gray Copping Mr. E. R. Fraling of Muskoka and Mr. George Scrimger of Toronto. President John R. Marshall presided.

Kiwanian Jack Dewart in a brief but capable address reviewed the work of the Peterboro artists at the Toronto Musical Festival and expressed the hope that their recent success would be but an earnest of still greater accomplishments in the future.

Mr. Rupert Gliddon in reply referred to some of the difficulties that confronted the orchestra in Toronto and said the support given to the festival was such a disappointment that those responsible for the affair were seriously thinking of holding it in some other city next year. Peterboro had been mentioned as a likely selection. Mr. Percy Lees representing the Y. M. C. A., gave a stirring address on the work of that institution and its effort to create character and courage in the youth of the land. Play the game and see that the play life of the boy is carried on under proper conditions advised Mr. Lees. Fathers should take part in this play life and encourage the boy and never lose contact with him. Mr. Lees related the story of a young man who "saw it through" on the rugby field and who later "saw it through behind a Stokes gun where he gave his life in the world conflict. It is up to every individual to interest himself in the youth of the country and give them the encouragement they need to fit them for citizenship in the greatest country in the world, said the speaker in conclusion.

Kiwanian Ed. Wood revealed the details of a party that will be held a week from Tuesday in the Peterboro Club at which bridge, five hundred and a dance will be features of an interesting programme. Aid in preparing for this event was enlisted from among the rank and file of the Kiwanis Club. Each table will be in charge of a Kiwanian.

...NTIER'S VICTORY ...RED TO VIENNA ...KING ASSOCIATION

Ring... pinion Said the Kno... of Townley In Seco... ound Was Clean Cut, ... Association Was App... ed to For a Verdict —Pe... e Held Up.

SCIENCELESS BOUT.

VIENNA, May 2.— Four and one half minutes sufficed for Georges Carpentier to defeat Arthur Townley, the British light heavyweight, in what was to have been a twenty round bout, here Thursday.

The Frenchman knocked out Townley in the second round with a clean solar plexus blow, one minute and a half after the round had started. Under the impact, Townley ... several times before had been ... doubled up with pain, crashed ... the canvas and was counted ...

... some of the uninitiated Austrians the blow appeared to be low. ... experts of the fighting game ... at the ringside were of the opinion that it was one of the cleanest cut knockouts on record. The Vienna Boxing Association was appealed to against the manner in which the final blow was delivered. The Association will render its verdict on the fairness of the knockout to-day. Meanwhile, the purse money will not be paid. The withholding of the Association's decision may cause a delay in the departure of Carpentier from Havre for the United States on Saturday to meet Tom Gibbons.

Spectators Jolted.

It was a prosaic and scienceless, lumberjack battle, as far as it went, and its quick ending was a rude jolt to the spectators, coming as it did in less time than it took those in the high-priced seats to count out their stocks of crowns to pay for the privilege of seeing what had been advertised as an exhibition of manly art. Although there was keen disappointment for a while, hero worship finally prevailed and the 15,000 persons present, among whom there were numerous women, cheered the victor.

At the sound of the first gong, Carpentier rushed to close quarters with his opponent and engaged him in fierce in-fighting. Townley was badly punished about the body during the milling. Then, just before the gong ended the round, Carpentier stepped back, and whipped over his famous right to the jaw. Townley fell flat, and was lying prone on the canvas when the session ended.

The Finish.

Coming out for the second round, Townley appeared to be groggy. Carpentier, nevertheless, was wary. After sparring for a moment, the Frenchman again clipped Townley on the jaw, and the Englishman took a count of four. When he ... Carpentier again sent him down for a count of eight. Again ... the Englishman endeavored ... stave off defeat by clinching. ... Carpentier, however, worked in and ... a right to the solar plexus. ... Englishman's knees sagged, he ... dropped to the floor and was counted ... out.

Although Townley failed to land ... four clean blows during the ... bout, he defended himself against ... onslaughts of the Frenchman ... great gameness.

The crowd in attendance, although not up to the expectation ... the promoters, was the largest ... ever gathered together in Vienna ... excepting for one of the greatest ... football matches.

BALL SEASON OPEN TOMORROW

Royals of Toronto and the Peterboro Central Leaguers Will Pry Off the Lid at Riverside.

The lid will be pried off the local baseball season at Riverside Park tomorrow afternoon when the fast Royal Canadians of the Riverdale League, Toronto, runners up for the Ontario Championship last year will clash with the Peterborough Central League team. The game will be called at 3 o'clock and with favorable weather it is expected a usually big first day crowd will see the 1924 Petes in action against a team that proved a sensation in the Ontario play off last season.

Ramsay will likely get the assignment to open the game for the visitors and Lefty Maguire and Ball will both get a turn on the rubber before the battle is over while Heckman will be the Petes first pitcher in action followed by Charlie Serth.

Every player who has signed a Peterborough certificate is expected to be on hand at to-night's practice and at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Uniforms may be obtained at Eddie Wrights' Cigar Store this evening and signed players are asked to care for them.

Manager Solomon is attending a meeting of the O.B.A.A. executive in Toronto today and tonight's practice will be in charge of Max Swanston.

To-morrow's game will afford a good line on the Petes chances in the campaign that is just opening. It should besides be a rattling good game of ball and will provide the hungry fans with a afternoon's entertainment such as they have long been waiting for.

HIGH ROLLERS TAKE THREE STRAIGHT FROM C.G.E.

Last night at Solomon's Alleys in the City Ten Pin League the High Rollers took three straight from the C.G.E. Some good rolling featured this clash.

Solomon was high man of the evening with a nice score of 578. Thomas was next in line with 535, while McIlmoyle had 520 and Fielder 526. Thomas had the high single of 213.

Following are the scores:

TORONTO LOST OPENING GAME

Attendance of 5,000 at the Island Lowest on Record — Four Home Runs and Three Doubles in Newark's Clouting.

TORONTO, May 1.—Cold weather greeted Toronto and Newark for the opening of the International League season here to-day, the Bears winning 10 to 7 before 5,000 fans, the lowest attendance in the history of a local opening.

Jess Doyle was clouted for fourteen hits, including two home runs by Kane, and one each by Sheehan and Whitman. The Bears also jammed out three doubles.

Fileshifter and Musante were wild, but they were fairly effective in the pinch, twice retiring the Leafs with the bases loaded. Zitman and O'Rourke starred in the field. The score:
Toronto . .020030002— 7 15 0
Newark . . 021020113—10 14 2
Doyle and Stanage; Fileshifter, Musante and Devine.

JERSEY CITY WINS.

ROCHESTER, May 1.— Jersey City defeated Rochester in the opening game of the season here today, by 11 to 3. The batting of Jacobs, who made six hits in as many times at bat, featured. Manager Stallings used four pitchers during the game, and Jimmy Walsh, the Jersey City mentor, called on two. Cold weather held down the crowd to about 7,500. Score:
Jersey City 200301302—11 18 2
Rochester . .010002000— 3 9 3
Barnhardt, Zellars and Freitag; Karpp, Moore, Crowder, Matthews and Lake.

Billy Evans Says

Major league ball clubs weak at shortstop seldom get anywhere in the quest for a pennant.

Weakness at that position is a glaring fault that often makes an ordinary ball club out an aggregation that looks like a pennant contender on paper.

The Boston Red Sox, tailenders in the American League last season, got away to a flying start this spring.

Regardless of where the club ultimately finishes, the early spring form of the Red Sox will stand out as one of the initial thrills of the season.

In the early success of the Boston club, no player has stood out more prominently than Shortstop Dudley Lee.

"He is the greatest shortstop I have ever been teamed with," says Second Baseman Bill Wambsganss, secured by Boston in a trade with Cleveland.

That is quite a compliment, coming from so fine a ball player as Wambsy, who has been associated with a number of good shortstops, among them the late Ray Chapman, and Joe Sewell, now playing the position for Cleveland.

Lee, by the way, is a protege of Manager Fohl of the Boston Red Sox. Fohl developed him as a kid, when he had charge of the St. Louis Browns. He jumped at the chance to purchase him for the Boston Club when he took over the reins there.

Prior to the opening of the season, Fohl predicted great things for Dudley Lee inside a year. Looks as if the youngster is going to cross up his manager by making good from the start.

Lee is the making of a great ball player because he loves the game and has the winning spirit. This little story will best illustrate what I mean:

Lee was sent to Chattanooga in the Southern Association. Then given a year with Tulsa in the Western League. Two years in the minors and he has made good his declaration that he is a big leaguer.

WILLS TO MEET DEMPSEY SEPT. 6

Negro Heavyweight Gets His Chance Against the Champion Under Rickard's Management — Articles Not Yet Signed.

NEW YORK, May 2—Jack Dempsey will defend his world's heavyweight crown against Harry Wills, giant negro contender, in a 12-round match at Boyle's Thirty Acres, Jersey City, on the afternoon of September 6.

This announcement, which paves the way for fulfillment of a goal Wills has sought for nearly three years, was made yesterday by Tex Rickard, after he called off all further negotiations with Luis Angel Firpo, temperamental Argentine who has announced his retirement from the ring and rejected the promoter's $5000.00 offer for battles with Wills and Dempsey.

Wills already has signed with Rickard for a series of matches leading up to a title bout with Dempsey, while the promotor declared he had an agreement assuring him of the champion's services, despite a statement credited in Los Angeles to Jack Kearns, the title-holder's manager, that he had not yet made such an arrangement.

Rickard admitted that articles with Kearns and Dempsey had not yet been signed, but asserted he would have no difficulty coming to a final understanding with them.

Before Wills steps into the ring with Dempsey, in what observers believe would be another "Battle of the Century," however, he must hurdle two obstacles now in his path. The Brown Panther of New Orleans" is matched for a 15-round contest with Bartley Madden, New York heavyweight, on May 12, at the Queensboro A. C., and also is scheduled, under Richard's auspices, to box either Quintin Romero, Chilean heavy-weight, or Erminio Spalla, the Italian, who holds European heavyweight title, at Boyle's Thirty Acres, probably on June 21.

Ring experts are confident Wills will emerge triumphant from these tests, but expect him to meet his stiffest opposition from Romero, who will be picked to meet the big negro if he survives successfully his first United States trial, May 9, at Madison Garden with Floyd Johnson. Iowa heavy-weight, as an opponent. Spalla, who was knocked out by Firpo in fourteen rounds at Buenos Aires, recently, has not yet arrived in this country.

The beauty about marathon running is that it keeps the insects out in the air, but not long enough.

Marathoning is a subtle science like the cultivation of dandruff and the development of triple chins.... It comes naturally, if at all.

Marathon runners are always on the go but unfortunately they never seem to go where we'd like to send them.

(Next week Straight Dope Benny will discuss the vice presidency and other non-essentials).

Marathon runners do not go in for any special diet. They can eat anything and do, if the directions are understandable.

Marathon runners are always accompanied by trainers riding bicycles. You can judge from this how much brains it takes to be a trainer and how little to be a marathon runner.

Marathon runners are hard eggs and usually live to be a ripe old age, which is another reason why the sport should be discouraged.

Old Hi Johnson, who has been running all year and getting nowhere, must know how it feels to run a marathon.

Marathon runners who lead the simple life always succeed, which serves them right.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

By BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS

1. If with runners on first and second, or the bases filled, the batter attempts a bunt that results in a fair fly to the infield, is it regarded as an infield fly?

2. Has a batsman who hits the ball the right to stop and retrace his steps toward the plate if he so desires?

3. If a fielder muff a foul fly ball and the batsman is later retired before reaching first is the muff scored as an error?

ANSWERS

1. It is not regarded as an infield fly under such conditions.

2. Batsman can stop between first and home just as between any other bases, if he so desires.

3. The fielder is credited for an error as a possible muff, regardless of what later happens.

SPEAKER SAYS THREE TIMES AS MANY DRIVES FALL IN FRONT OF FIELDERS

BY TRIS SPEAKER

Famous Outfielder, of the Cleveland Indians

To attain success as an outfielder, the player must first be a sure catch. It should be the unusual when a good outfielder muffs a fly ball.

Learning to get a quick start on the ball and acquiring the ability to catch a ball while running at full speed while coming in or going out or staking the ball to their side is most essential.

Handling ground ball is a feature of play that too many outfielders neglect. Make it sure when there is no possible way. With runners on and a play ahead, the fielder should be able to come in fast, handle the ball like an infielder and cut it loose with the same motion.

Learning to properly play ground balls is more difficult by far than the mere catching of fly balls. It requires much more practice.

Shift Field to Suit Batters

Throw the ball to the proper base. Many ball games are lost because a fielder makes a foolish throw to get a runner at the plate or third and thereby enables a runner to advance to second who should have been held at first. This puts the runner on second in a position to score on a hit, otherwise a couple of hits might be needed to drive him around.

Make a careful study of your batters. Try to find to what fields they are likely to hit and then shift accordingly.

Likewise it is well to know whether they are long distance hitters or hitters of the short fly or line drive variety, so as to know whether to play a short or deep field on them.

If a fielder can go out for a ball as easily as he can come in, I am in favor of that fielder playing a short field with the ordinary batter up, who has no particular reputation as a batsman.

The outfielder who plays short is in a position to grab many a fly ball and line drive that would go safe in front of a fielder than are driven over his head.

One bit of advice that I want to give on playing the outfield has to do with the throwing of the ball with the winning or tying run on the bases. Throwing the ball to the wrong base is a mistake that major leaguers constantly pull throughout the season.

To illustrate we will assume that it is the last half of the ninth inning, two out, the score 3 to 2 in favor of the home team and there is a runner on second, the tying run.

Proper baseball calls for that runner to get a big lead so as to be in a position to score if the batsman hits safely. In a majority of cases such a runner is able to score on a base hit.

The outfielder should always remember that fact, so that nine times out of ten the wise play is not to try to cut the runner down at home, but rather keep the batsman from reaching second, where he would be in a position to score the winning run on another hit.

Should the runner on second be an unusually slow man and the fielder is aware of it, that is sometimes a reason for making a play to the plate. Ordinarily it is a dangerous practice, however.

Study your batters, practice constantly to perfect your play on fly balls and grounders and keep your head up to every situation is the gist of my sermon on outfielding.

Timely Tips To Amateurs

SAYS TRIS SPEAKER
Manager, Cleveland Indians

Most outfielders have much more difficulty in going out after a ball than coming in on it.

That is, it is easier for them to catch fly balls in which the ball is constantly in advance of them, such balls being easier to judge.

That being the case, every outfielders should attepmt to perfect his play in going back after a ball. Coming in on the ball is a natural habit, going back after the ball an acquired art.

If a player is equally proficient it enables him to play a much shorter filed. There is a distinct advantage in such a style of play, since far more balls drop safe in front of the average fielders than are hit over his head.

I am strongly in favor of an outfielder playing a short field. This is impossible if he is weak on balls hit over his head.

For that reason alone, I say every outfielder should constantly seek to perfect his play on fly balls on which he is forced to go back to make a play.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 2.—Kingston fans will have a chance to get a line on their team in the Central Ontario Baseball League on Saturday afternoon when they will turn out for the first practice with all the hired help on hand. Manager Joe Daley has a bunch of likely talent and much interest is being taken in the League here this season.

The players will include the following: Canty, Teeple, Nicholson, Twigg, Bennett, Smith, Soden, Rice, Gallagher, Moore, Kelly, Maxwell, Hodgson, Ryckman, W. Evans, Compeau, Daley, Purvis and Batstone.

The number of prospective players is a healthy one, and such as will make even man step to catch a place.

President Archie Steacy guarantees baseball fans in Kingston the worth of their money when the Kingston C.O.B.L. nine trots out for its first game.

W. J. Arnold, director of the grounds, is busy with preparing the playing field for use. There will be a vast improvement in the outfield, which will be tiled from end to end.

There will be no danger of anyone getting stuck in the mud. Scraping and skinning the infield should put it in good shape, while the mound will be raised a little to give the twirlers a good toe hold. Work on the construction of the new grand stand has not yet begun, but activity in that direction will follow shortly.

An invitation has been received from the Kingston Driving Club for an exhibition game on June 3rd. If arrangements can be made the locals will meet an outside team on that date.

THE PETERBORO MALE VOICE CHOIR MADE A WORTH WHILE EFFORT

Added to Peterborough's List of Prizewinners at the Ontario Musical Festival -- Work of the Peterborough Artists.

(By Jeannette.)

Just as the Peterborough Symphony Orchestra came within an ace of capturing the coveted first prize in the symphony contests at the Second Annual Competitive Festival of Music being held in Toronto this week, so the Peterborough Male Voice Choir made an even closer run yesterday for first place in their full choral number, losing by exactly one point. Once again, the Mendelssohn Glee Club of St. Thomas, winners of last year's first award in this class, took home the Challenge Shield and the conductor's gold medal, with a total score on two performances, afternoon and evening, of 166 points, while Peterborough's total was 165. The Harmony Choir and Glee Club, A.F. and A.M., Toronto, received 163 points. A fourth choir, the Toronto Welsh Male Voice, competed in the afternoon, but did not appear in the preliminaries. The successful St. Thomas organization was once again conducted by Mr. George C. Carrie.

In the second contest, entered by a portion of the Peterborough Choir, the section for a male choir with maximum of twenty members, another second prize was awarded the local singers. The First Baptist Church Male Chorus of Brantford, came first with 172 points for afternoon and evening work, while Peterborough received 167 points, and the Harmony Choir and Glee Club, A.F. and A.M., of Toronto, received 161 points. Again, a fourth choir, competing in the afternoon preliminaries, the Harmony Male Chorus of Riverdale, Toronto, did not secure a place in the evening finals.

The local choir made a splendid impression and sang in a manner that brought them much applause. Their evening work was particularly good. In the afternoon, a sudden, unannounced change in the programme compelled them to appear nearly half an hour before the scheduled time. A hurried call brought them quickly together, but their singing seemed to lack confidence to a slight degree. In the evening, their work was splendid. As with the orchestra on Tuesday, the appearance of the Peterborough competitors was hailed with much enthusiasm from the audience, and Mr. Chenhall, receiving the silver medals, was accorded a perfect ovation of prolonged applause. The close contest, with only one point between the two high competitors, aroused the interest and sympathy of the spectators.

Once again, the contrast in the different types of conductors was noticeable, Mr. Chenhall, with his quiet, firm direction, his unassuming presence differing widely to the pretentious appearance of several of his competitors, one of whom appeared to be doing a constant dance step, while another wove a cabalistic design in the air with weaving fingers. Standing in military style, every eye fixed on their leader, the local men sang "as if they loved their music," as Mr. Lyon said of the Peterborough vocalists in his judgment. "The English say that they know something of choral singing," said the adjudicator, "but if only you Canadians would come over and compete in our festivals of choral singing, you wouldn't be last, by any means." Mr. Lyon also commented on the fair number of entries in the male voice events, and quoted Burt, who said, "There is no music comparable to the voice of man."

In the afternoon, in the small choral contest, Mr. Lyon spoke of the Peterborough effort as follows: "Round, good full tone at the opening. Good sense of climax. Refined, soft pianissimo work. Entered into the spirit of the song and sang as if they loved it. Basses particularly excellent." A slight criticism of too close adherence to the "moderato" was included in the evening. The judge commented very favorably on the memorization, without music, work of the winners, the Brantford choir. "A Lullaby of Love" by Percy E. Fletcher, and "In Harvest Time," by Oscar Merikanto, were test pieces in this section.

In the big choral event, for full choirs, Granville Bantock's "Through Eastern Gates" and T. Tertius Noble's "New Life, New Love" were sung. Anyone listening to these contests through the week would have no doubt about the technical difficulty and intricacies of these test pieces. They were apparently not chosen for anything particularly attractive in their settings. They were difficult numbers that required a high degree of skill and real music to make interesting or pleasing to the average ear.

In the evening, when three adjudicators were present, the two visiting Englishmen from London; James Lyon, Mus. Doc. and Herbert Fryer, also Dr. H. A. Fricker, of Toronto, the judgment of the afternoon, according to total of figures, for the big choral event, was entirely reversed, by a peculiar coincidence. In the afternoon, Peterborough's total points was 82, St. Thomas 85, and the Harmony Choir of Toronto 82. In the evening the figures stood: For Peterborough, 83, St. Thomas, 81, and the Harmony Choir, 81. In the grand total, however, the local singers lost out by one point. They climbed up a point in the interval, while their successful rivals dropped four points.

In the afternoon, for the big choral events, the judgment on the local choir follows: "Good balance. First tenors not always crisp in attack." Then some advice about holding of notes, and the failure to realize the difference between a pause and a "tenuto" rendering.

The judgment on the three choirs for the evening's performance was expressed in terms that gave little indication of the final award. For the Harmony choir, which came third the decision was: "Well balanced, showing good range and expression. The spirit of the second phrase not realized. A little raggedness." For the Peterboro choir: "Exaggeration of the tenuto side. Both afternoon and evening performances showed a wide range of expression and good artistry." For the winners, the St. Thomas choir: "Intonation of the middle section uncertain, and some raggedness in the finale. Rallentandos not always well protected."

There was much technical phrasing used yesterday by the judges who referred constantly to foreign musical terms in their criticisms, advising their hearers, if unacquainted with their meaning, to "look them up when you go home." Mr. Lyon also brought in a phrase, "faulty intonation," very often, when referring to different competitions, and repeatedly scored the "vibrato" quality of some of the vocal work.

Technical inaccuracies, such as wrong conception of time values, were also searched out and wrong interpretation of musical terms and signs criticized with minute detail. According to the secretary of the Festival, the chief adjudicator, Mr. Lyon, on his arrival, announced his intention of judging with careful attention to every detail. "Capable, but rather severe," was the general verdict on this adjudicator's methods. Mr. Lyon, who spends much of his time in judging at such festivals in the Old country, expressed himself also as desirous of raising to a high plane the standards of such contests. Referring to the poor attendance at the Festival, he remarked last evening: "If you people were in Blackpool, this place would be packed from floor to ceiling to hear you sing. There is something wrong here."

He spoke in very complimentary terms last evening of the amazingly high standard attained in Canada by young people whom he heard at this festival competing in piano and violin contests. "In England, we cannot compare with you here in this regard." This pronouncement followed on a test for senior violin work (open to all of Canada) when five youthful contestants took part, two young girls and two young men. The prizes in this contest were a first and second award of gold and bronze medals, but the final markings were so close that Mr. Lyons insisted that each of the three who came below the second award should receive a bronze medal, which was accordingly promised. With 172 points, Wm. H. Hardimand of Toronto, received first prize, with 169 points, Miss Esther Sure, of Toronto, received the second prize; and the three others, Mr. Harold Hunter of Toronto, 167 points; and Miss Edna Davies, Toronto, and Mr. Jake Madorsky, Toronto, with 166 each, will receive auxiliary bronze medals. This was an interesting competition, the test piece a technically severe selection competion, comprising much difficult bowing, in Variations on a theme by Corelli, arranged by Kreisler.

At the close of last evening's performance, the three competing choirs (over a hundred strong), massed together on the platform, sang the evening's test piece, "New Life, New Love," under Dr. Lyons direction, in a superb rendition, followed by the National Anthem.

A feature of the attendance of the local contestants in the several classes in which Peterboro musicians entered, in this year's festival, was the prominence of this city in the events. At each appearance, the orchestra and the choir received a warm greeting from the house. Whether the Peterboro people who now live in Toronto, were all attendant at the Festival, or whether the Toronto people liked the appearance of the local musicians, was not explained, but the generous support which Peterboro has given the Festival during its two years, may have something to do with their popularity. The secrgtary, Mr. J. S. Atkinson, spoke in glowing terms of the high standard of musicianship manifested by local contestants during both years, and his remarks were enlarged on by Dr. Lyon when speaking to Mr. Gliddon. A very serious suggestion made at this years' Festival, was the probability of removing the scene of the competitions to a smaller town next year, with Peterboro as a very probable location. Attendance in Toronto has been poor this year. Last evening saw a slight increase, there being five or six hundred people in the big auditorium of Massey Hall, where yesterday's choral event took place.

Yesterday afternoon, after the contest, a number of the members went over to the city hall, where Dr. H. A. Fricker's choir was singing, and witnessed the presentation to the choir and their leader by the City of Toronto, of some handsome silver plate.

A pleasant wind-up to the trip of the choir was their reception on their arrival in the small hours of this morning of a group of energetic Kiwanians, who had stayed up until such a late hour to meet at the station and convey home in motors the tired singers. Led by Alex. Dick, the genial Kiwanians welcomed the returning choir, who were serenaded by a large bell in the hands of Walter Byers.

A busy week for at least two of the members was recorded. Messrs. J. M. Greene and A. McKeown took part in the Tuesday and Thursday orchestral and choral events. Several local families were represented by different members taking part in both contests.

An occurrence remarked on by the secretary was the absence this year of Miss Agnes Logan, whose success last year was so remarkable. Miss Logan's runner-up in last year's contests, Miss Florence Craig, of Toronto, had the field to herself this season, and succeeded in carrying off several of the awards which came to Peterboro last year.

A summary of this year's triumphs by Peterboro in the Second Annual Competitive Festival of the Ontario Musical Association reveals a very successful year. Last season, the success of the Trinity Orchestra, of Miss Agnes Logan and Miss Mathilde Masson was a matter for much pride, but Peterboro has surpassed itself this year.

Two challenge shields, five certificates for proficiency, four gold medals, three silver medals and two bronze medals, representing the fruits of four first awards and five seconds, have come to Peterboro this years, and the standard in all instances was high, when it is remembered that 80 points are needed for a first award, 75 for a second and 70 for a third.

In the orchestral events there were 2 firsts and 2 seconds. The first prize of challenge shield, certificate and gold medal to Mr. Gliddon was received in the amateur orchestra section, with a rating of 86 points; the first prize of challenge shield, certificate and gold medal to Mr. Gliddon was received for the Sunday school orchestra section, with a standing of 86 points, and the second prize of certificate and silver medal to Mr. Gliddon was received in the symphony section, with a standing of 77 points. The Symphony orchestra first prize went to an organization with only 80 points, just three more than the local total. These contests included preliminary and final in one.

The Male Voice Choir received two second prizes, with two certificates and two silver medals to Mr. M. B. Chenhall. In the small choir events, with a maximum of 20 voices, their standing in the preliminaries was 85 points, with 82 in the finals, a total of 167 for the two. In the full choral competition, with some fifty-three voices included, the preliminary showed a total of 82 points, with 83 received in the evening, a total of 165. The first prize went to a competitor with only one more point received in the two tests.

In the vocal competitions, Mr. R. A. Browne received a first prize of a gold medal and a second of a bronze medal. Preliminary and final tests were taken together in both sections. In Grade A, bass solo, Mr. Browne received first award with 93 points, and in the bass solo (operatic) a second prize of bronze medal, with 90 points gained.

Mr. Maurice H. Park received one first and one second prize. He took a preliminary tenor test with five other competitors. In the finals of this section he gained second prize of a bronze medal, his standing in the two tests being 76 and 68, or 144 in all. In the tenor solo (operatic) Mr. Park received first prize of a gold medal, in a preliminary and final test, gaining 80 points.

A pleasing incident occurred on the train coming down from Toronto last night, when Mr. Jno. Hodson, of Downer's Corners, who lost his stock and barn by fire some days ago, and who is a member of the Peterboro Male Voice Choir, was presented with a purse of money totalling nearly fifty dollars. This amount was collected from the members on the trip, and the presentation was made by W. F. Skitch, Mr. Hodson replying with much gratitude to his general confreres.

Most Urgent Wants

There's a world of interest in the Want Ads. They reflect the urgent desires of various businesses, households and individuals.

The Wants tell what is most needed. If the cook has left, if a worker is needed in the office or factory, if an article of value is lost or found, if there is urgent necessity to sell a piece of property, secure tenants, roomers or boarders—all such conditions are expressed and met in the Want Columns.

The Wants are close to the heart interests of the people. It is interesting to watch them carefully.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL

"MEANEST MAN" IS A UNIQUE FEATURE AT THE ROYAL.

"The Meanest Man in the Wor'd" as presented at the Royal Theatre yesterday, proves that there is still available somewhere, sufficient material that goes toward making a highly successful photoplay.

The picture was adapted to the screen from that famous stage play in which appeared George M. Cohan. Augustin MacHugh is the author who obtained the idea of the story from the playlet of Everett S. Ruskay. Principal Pictures Corporation prodruced the screen version of the story and the re'easing is being made through First National Pictures.

Apparently an ideal combination was effected between the players, director, scenario editors and editing staff, for the finished production certainly has a spontaneity about it which would seem possible in no other way. The acting is excellent and all of the players are ideally suited to their roles. In addition, much humor is added by the titles, which are easy, natural and totally unrestraingd in their fun.

To be sure the story is old-fashioned, but that kind of which George M. Cohan, is a master of putting over, and the photoplay is certainly on equal terms insofar as the success of both is concerned.

The star role is played by Bert Lytell, who is so tender-hearted as an attorney that he has never made a success. Resolved to be the meanest man in the world, he proceeds to evict one J. Hudson from her farm. The "J." turns out to be Jane, however, and young and pretty. Then the lawyer learns that his employers want to foreclose the mortgage on the farm because they feel certain there is oil on the property. A race against time begins, to raise money to sink a well for Jane. With but five minutes to go, the well gushes in and saves Jane's land but not her heart, for our lawyer wins that.

Here is a picture that is going to please everybody that witnesses it. The cast is truly all-star and in addition to Lytell, boasts such names as Blanche Sweet, who enacts the role of Jane, Bryant Washburn, Marvon Aye, Helen Lynch, Forrest Robinson, Victor Potel, Warde Crane, William Conklin, Frances Raymond and a host of others equally popular.

"TEMPORARY MARRIAGE" INTRODUCES NOTABLE CAST

What is regarded as one of the best cast screen plays of the year is the forthcoming Principal Picture Special, "Temporary Marriage," which on Monday will begin a three day engagement at the Royal Theatre.

In addition to its notable cast, "Temporary Marriage," is said to tell an unusually strong dramatic story, written by Gilbert Patten, and the picture has had the advantage of the directorial genius of Lambert Hillyer, who personally supervised the filming of the play.

The cast for the production was selected from the entire Hollywood colony— and only those fortunate few were chosen as adaptable for the roles.

When the cast was completed it was found that there was a very desirable blend of both talent and "names" in the assemblage. Kenneth Harlan wh ohas come ahead rapidly the past season, Myrtle Stedman one of the most finished screen sars, Tully Marshall, than whom there are no better character actors, Maude George, Mildred Davis and Stuart Holmes — comprise this all-star cast. Mr. Harlan and Miss Davis take care of the love interest, while Maude George and Stuart Holmes play the "heavy" roles. Miss Stedman and Mr. Marshall enact the part of the wife and husband respectively. To miss this picture is to miss the acting of the season.

AT THE CAPITOL

There must be several dozen children of more or less prominence in the motion picture field but every once in a while public fancy becomes so centred around a particular child player that it is heralded as a star.

The producers quick to grasp this sentiment, immediately capitalize it, to the satisfaction of the motion picture public. For the public has undoubtedly its favorites among child-players as well as among grown-ups, and insists on seeing them in featured roles.

This demand on the part of the public, it would appear, has brought about the transfer of Baby Peggy, heroine of Century comedies, to the starring role in a Universal-Jewelproduction, "The Darling of New York," which opened last night at the Capitol Theatre.

The tiny star, whose age is around four years, is cast as the central figure in a dramatic crook play and although she is surrounded by a grown up cast of unusual merit the ability of the adult performers does not detract from the artistry of the child. As a matter of fact the very strength of the cast is an asset to the efforts of Peggy.

Besides Baby Peggy, other outstanding figures in the cast are Sheldon Lewis, Gladys Brockwell, Pat Hartigan and Carl Stockdale.

The picture is very dramatic and exceptionally entertaining. It was directed by King Baggot, who with Raymond Schrock, wrote the story.

The story concerns a child en route to New York from an Italian port with her governess, who forgets her purse, leaving the little girl in charge of a stranger. The stranger, a gem smuggler, takes advantage of the situation by carrying the child on board the ship. The vessel pulls out, leaving the nurse. The crook hides diamonds in the child's rag doll and at New York he is stopped by the police. During the controversy the child is taken by the crook's pals. The crooks become bond of the baby girl but her presence is resented by Big Mike. During the night he drops her in an ash can. The smuggler, freed by the police, shows up with the information about the jewels in the rag doll. A systematic search is made for the child, who, in the meantime has been taken in by a kindly old Jewish shoemaker with nine children. A police raid and a spectacular fire lead to her discovery.

Dale and Dale, a man and a woman, presenting songs, dances and comedy bits, were appreciated by the audience. A good comedy, "About Face,' rounded out a high class programmme.

AT THE REGENT

MIX IS AIR RANGER IN FILM AT REGENT

"Eyes of the Forest" is Thrilling Tale of Love and Daring.

Tom Mix's latest starring picture, "Eyes of the Forest," which opens a three day run at the Regent Theatre is a romantic story of that picturesque body of daring men, the Forest Air Patrol, of whom little is ever heard. Outside of the fact that it shows Mix in an entirely new role—an army aviator —the picture has the significance of portraying in fiction the actual colorful, thrilling lives of the rangers.

In "Eyes of the Forest" Mix, as Bruce Thornton, an army flier, is assigned to forest patrol service. On his first trip over the woodland, watching for fires and timber thieves, he spots an outlaw lumber plant. Landing in a clearance several miles form the spot, he crashes into a hut, disabling his machine by the accident, however, he meets Ruth Meiler, played by Pauline Stark, whom he recognizes as being wanted on the charge of killing her step-father.

Bruce is convinced the girl is innocent. He sets about to prove his contention and encounters Horgan, a member of the lumber stealing band, to whom Ruth was married against her will. Hogan comes after Ruth to take her away from her Uncle, with whom she was hiding from her husband and the law. There is an encounter and Horgan is beaten by Bruce. Horgan decides to take the girl by force and recruits his band to storm the cabin.

An attempt is made to kill Bruce by blowing up the roadway. He escapes unhurt and, racing for his life from the band of marauders, he leaps from his horse to an airplane. Thrill follows thrill until Horgan is caught and proven to be the real murderer and the leaders of the lumber thieves gang get their due.

ORANGE SLIPPERS.

Orange colored slippers with French heels worn with brown stockings were noticed recently on Fifth avenue on a woman with a brown coat and a lemon colored cloche. The effect was startling, but chic.

NIAGARA SYSTEM HAS BIG PROFIT

Sir Adam Beck Told Ontario Electric Association That They Were Operating at Half Capacity.

KITCHENER, May 2.— (Canadian Press.) — Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commissio, in his annual address to the Ontario Municipal Electric Association here last night stated that the Niagara system including the Chippawa development, about which so much doubt was cast, regarding its financial soundness, shows a net profit of $174,812.16 for six months ending April 30, 1924.

"We are operating at half capacity one year after starting the operation despite the foreboding of Mr. Drury at turning on of the power," said Sir Adam, "and I can't say that his remarks at that time were any too optimistic or encouraging. Personally, I felt blue. At that time I had temerity to say that within a year or two that electricity would be produced at $15 a horse power. I am able to say that the average cost of horse power last year was $15.03 and it is now below $15.

CONDUCTOR RETIRES AFTER FIFTY YEARS

John Buller Brought Last Train Into Peterboro and Went Out a Passenger.

TORONTO, May 2.— (Canadian Press).—Half a century ago, when Port Hope was one of the biggest ports on Lake Ontario, it was also the termination of the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway. Like most railroads, P. H. L. & B. R. had its crack train and no one could have been prouder than young John Buller when in 1873 he was appointed conductor. As the old wood burner with its inverted pyramid of a smokestack came puffing and snorting into the Port Hope station, young Buller swung himself down from the last coach and would not have traded places with the conductor of the empire state express.

Yesterday, when the Canadian National train from Peterboro slid smoothly into Toronto Union Station, among the other passengers was a grey-haired clear eyed man of perhaps 70 years who swung himself down in a manner which branded him beyond doubt as railroader. After hurrying "drummers and tourists had gone on this man lingered for a moment. One by one he shook the hands of the train crew. "Good Bye John," they said as he turned away.

Conductor John Buller had made his last run. In charge of his train he had travelled, night before to Peterboro, and returned, a passenger for the first time t, Toronto, where yesterday he went on pension.

Fifty five years of continuous service with not one mark against him was the record he left behind. Small wonder that voices were bit husky as they bade him good bye or that John Buller lingered a moment or two longer than necessary by the train he knew so well.

Alcohol insanity has not increased since prohibition, says a bulletin of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene.

MERE THOUGHTLESSNESS OFTEN CAUSES MISHAPS INVOLVING AUTOMOBILE

Motorist Must Always Be On the Alert—Pedestrian Too Is Often Negligent—Interesting Facts Revealed By Investigation.

CLEAR THINKING.

Investigation of accident causes is said to be revealing the great danger of thoughtlessness in present-day motoring, and emphasizing the growneed for clearer thinking on the part of all who drive motor vehicles.

Carelessness is receiving its usual condemnation, but a new phase of the subject has developed in the discovery that many acts of apparent carelessness are, in reality, the result of misjudgment due to failure to grasp the situation.

A recent investigation of a collision between two cars, for instance, is shown to have revealed particularly loose thinking on the part of each driver. To spectators who gave attention to but one car at the time of the collision, the trouble was diagnosed as the outcome of carelessness. But to those who observed the actions of both drivers, the carelessness diagnosis would have involved the longarm of coincidence, for one driver made as many errors as the other.

The investigation was ordered on the theory that the trouble was primarily defective reasoning on the part of both drivers.

Not Always Wise to Stop.

When each driver became aware of the presence of the other and the danger was evident to each, it was shown that each acted upon the theory that safety would be assured by stopping. Each car, therefore, came to a stop, but as car A was travelling on a slight downgrade, it slid straight ahead just far enough to cross the path of car B, which had accelerated upon noting car A in process of applying its brakes.

If the driver had been quick enough to have noted the difference in the grading, the driver of car A would simply have accelerated, permitting the driver of car B to apply his brakes, since the latter was in a position to stop with less sliding.

It was also found that as both drivers had sounded their horns at the same time upon approaching the intersection, neither had heard the other, and both had assumed that the way was clear.

With clearer thinking, it is contended, each driver would have given his horn two chances to warn the other, reasoning that the double coincidence of having the horn again conflict was virtually impossible.

It would seem, judging from this new attitude toward automobile accidents, that the first step to be taken by the average driver in safeguarding himself and others is to learn to think quickly and reason accurately. With regard to the pedestrian, this has particular significance, owing to the fact that the average person who walks is not "motor wise."

The motorist, for instance, knows pretty well what the other fellow is up against when the possibility of a collision hinges upon the events of a few seconds' time, and he acts accordingly. But when he is endeavouring to avoid running down a pedestrian he must consider the fact that the pedestrian is not likely to have any idea as to what he or she could do to make it easier for the driver to forestall trouble.

Must Think Clearly.

A large proportion of personal injuries are attributed to the fact that the automobile driver does not think quickly enough to compensate for the foibles of the confused pedestrian mind. The pedestrian, becoming confused, starts to rush ahead, and the motorist promptly fails to reason that the pedestrian will probably decide to run back the next instant.

There are certain types of people who will step off the curb into the path of traffic and give the automobile driver the impression that they are careless about crossing crossings. He will therefore count on having them yield to him the moment he sounds his horn, but is promptly caught off his guard when they reveal the fact that they are stubborn enough to dare him to run them down.

Then to reverse the situation the driver is likely to run into trouble in assuming that the man who steps in his way is stubborn. The pedestrian may be deaf.

Drivers of modern cars have far less to think about in the matter of controlling the mechanical units of the machine, and for this reason it is hoped that they will avail themselves of the opportunity to concentrate upon the matter of better reasoning on those problems of traffic and safety which now present themselves in far greater frequency.

When a driver is questioned following an accident, his excuse, provided he is at fault, invariably hinges upon the fact that he didn't use his head when the problem was presented to him.

Many drivers insist that they erred because they didn't know, but with the majority it is a question of not thinking. "I never thought of that," admits the driver when asked why he didn't proceed along different lines.

A favorite excuse with the automobile driver, and one which he invariably hands the "other fellow," is a plain confession of bad reasoning. "I thought you were going to turn this way," he says; thereby admitting that he failed to think of the possibility of the other fellow's failure to think properly.

Be Always Alert.

Accidents will be greatly minimized when, and only when, drivers come to think of the limitations of the other fellow's mind and ability, in addition to thinking out their own problems clearly.

A competent driver fails to be surprised at anything another driver does, and therefore avoids accidents, simply because he considers the possibility that the other driver cannot be expected to think of him. As matters stand there is entirely too strong a tendency to assume that the other driver is giving his responsibilities his best thought, when, in all probability, he is thinking only from a very narrow and dangerous angle.

Recklessness falls in the same category with unintentional carelessness, though it is far less frequent. When it occurs one analyses it as a clear case doesn't imagine for a minute that if something happens he might meet his doom. On the contrary, he believes that he will be able to think and act quick enough for any emergency.

Thoughtlessness is the greatest of motor driving habits, bdeause it is the most constant. Naturally its elimination would result in the greatest increase in safety.

The motorist won't lose anything by thinking so anway!

EYE IN THE CEILING.

LONDON (England), May 2.—"I have about as much privacy as a goldfish," an elderly woman complained to a magistrate. She said that the people in the flat above her bored holes in their floor and spied on her, while into another hole they inserted a tube and hurled insults through it. The magistrate declared there were no grounds for a summons, however.

MARRY AS A JOKE.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 2.—The Supreme Court has decided that the marriage of Jamison Meredith and Anna Victoria Shakespeare was "all in fun." An annulment was asked by young Meredith, who said the ceremony was gone through before a student minister in a spirit of banter. The annulment was granted. The two young people, students at different schools, separated after the "wedding."

NO BARS IN JAIL.

LOS ANGELES, May 2.—The Lincoln Heights jail, now under construction here, will be far removed from the old types of jails with heavy bars and dark, ill-ventilated cells. With few exceptions there will be no bars to mar the appearance of the new buildings.

Viennese

Zerline Balten is one of Vienna's most beautiful women. Her grace and charm have just won her the title role in Franz Lehar's new operetta, "Chansons D'Amour."

Billy Evans Says

Eighteen years ago the great Walter Johnson made his debut in the American League. Detroit beat him 2 to 1 after a hectic struggle.

It was my very good fortune to umpire the first game that Walter Johnson pitched in the American League.

Facing a club noted for its slugging ability feared by every pitcher in the American League, the unknown Johnson, with no professional experience, forced 'em to the limit to win.

ohnson pitched that game, as well as many others during the next few years, using only a fast ball, as his weapon of pitching deception.

Johnson pitched that game, as well ed a change of pace, but to used the words of Nick Altrock, he had plenty of swift.

Opposing teams were soon wise to the fact that the green rookie from Weiser, Idaho, used nothing but speed. Also he early established a reputation for control.

With this knowledge, rival batters hugged the plate, and whaled away at every pitch that looked good, knowing that it was a fast ball.

Despite this, almost overnight, Johnson became famous. Inside of a year he was heralded as the pitching sensation of the majors.

Eighteen years have passed and Walter Johnson is still the pitching sensation of the big leagues.

Perhaps some of the zip is missing on his fast one, yet American League batters still compliment his speed by saying you can't hit what you can't see.

Walter Johnson has mastered a curve, boasts a good change of pace, but after 18 campaigns, it is his great speed that still baffles the opposition.

Walter Johnson's performance in the opening day game of 1924, a four-hit shutout, is in many ways more extraordinary than his debut defeat.

It was again my good fortune to call balls and strikes, as Johnson, after years of strenuous campaigning, blanked the hard-hitting Philadelphia Athletics on April 15, 1924.

His gret record as a pitcher is a glowing tribute to proper living. Walter Johnson stands out as the great ideal for Young America.

Success has not changed him; he's the same lovable character he was as an unknown rookie.

Baseball will miss him when he passes out of the big league picture.

In 1922 St. Louis sent him to Columbus in the American Association, then managed by Clarence Rowland, now an American League umpire.

Lee being an optional player, Rowland gave the players owned by the club the preference, hoping to develop them so they might be sold to the majors at a fancy price.

Lee was merely a bench warmer, He didn't like the idea. Realizing why he wasn't being used, he went to Manager Rowland one day and said to him:

"I'm never going to make the big show sitting on the bench. I want to play regularly, and I don't care in what league. See if you can't get the St. Louis club to send me to some team what really needs a shortstop and will give me a chance. I am a big leaguer and the sooner I get a chance to play regularly the quicker I'll prove it."

LONG SEARCH ENDS.

CORNING, N. Y., May 2.—Earl Davis, a victim of amnesia, has found his mother and his full name here after a five-year search that took him throughout the country. His mind was affected by an injury received in Detroit nine years ago. Despite four years of hospital treatment, he was unable to establish his complete identity when he was dismissed.

SOOT FLIES 40 MILES.

WHITE SALMON, Wash., May 2.—White chickens turned black overnight, housewives' clothing was ruined, and the whole countryside was given a dark hue when soot from the smudge pots of Washington orchards drifted over into Oregon. The oil-filled pots were kept burning in the lowlands to offset the frost during a recent cold wave.

CAT THROWN TO DOGS.

NOTTINGHAM (England), May 2.—Four miners who threw a stray eat among three dogs to be torn to pieces, each have been sentenced to a month of hard labor. The court made an example of the cruel act and did not give the miners the option of a fine.

It's the "Hidden" Quality that Counts

WE could build another bicycle that would be almost a Twin to the C.C.M. in appearance, and yet be far inferior.

Without your knowing it, we could use cheaper tubing for the frames instead of our high-grade, English Seamless Tubing, reinforced at the joints.

We could use a cheaper hanger instead of the three-piece Triplex that makes the C.C.M. turn so smoothly and easily.

We could use cheaper bearings instead of our Flint-hard Steel bearings that a file cannot cut.

We needn't clean our frames so thoroughly, nor treat them with a coat of anti-rust before enameling. We needn't put on so many coats of our rich, lustrous special C.C.M. enamel, nor leave the frames in the enameling ovens so long

We needn't take so much care in cleaning our handle bars, crank hanger, hubs and other parts before they're nickeled. We take off every speck of dirt and grease, so as to have a thoroughly clean surface.

Next we coat the parts with copper to prevent rust.

Then, the C.C.M. parts are left in the nickel baths for about two hours, instead of the twenty-minute or so dip given cheaply nickeled parts.

Wouldn't you rather pay a little extra for C.C.M. rust-proof nickeling, than to get a bicycle that, before long, shows little marks of red rust peeping through the nickeling?

We could save expense by not making all of the 1,761 parts of C.C.M. Bicycles with such care and precision.

C·C·M·s are made so accurately, you could take two bicycles to pieces. Mix up the parts, then re-assemble the machines, and all parts would fit together perfectly.

We could omit many inspections and tests, instead of testing every part for quality, size and finish, and inspecting and "truing up" the bicycle at each stage of assembling, also before shipping the complete bicycl .

By saving here and skimping there, we could give you a cheaper bicycle that would look like a C.C.M., but wouldn't be one.

All the extra hidden quality you cannot see with your naked eye would be missing. The bicycle wouldn't give you all the Extra Years of Easy Riding that the C.C.M. gives.

So, when you go to choose your bicycle, remember that it is the hidden quality that counts most. If you have to pay a small amount more for a C.C.M. than for something that looks like a Twin to the C.C.M., just remember that under the surface it isn't a C.C.M.

The Most Profitable part of any investment is the small extra amount you pay for Quality. C.C.M. quality is worth all it costs and is obtainable only in bicycles bearing the C.C.M. trade mark. Look for it when you buy.

C·C·M·s are selling today at $15 to $20 less than the after-war "peak" prices. They are nearer pre-war prices and better value than almost any other high-quality article you can buy. A Big Dollar's Value for every dollar you invest in a C.C.M.

The C.C.M. dealer is waiting to show you the new 1924 models for men, women, boys and girls.

WEDDING BELLS

LAWLESS—COLNAN

At St. Mary's church, Grafton, on April 29, Miss Rosella Margaret Colnan, daughter of Mr. Dennis Colnan, was married to Mr. Henry Lawless. The bride who was given away by her father, wore a navy tailored suit with sand hat. She was attended by the groom's niece, Miss Annie Lawless, wearing a "Bobbie" suit of navy tricotine and sand hat. Mr. Dennis Colnan the bride's brother was groomsman. Mr. and Mrs. Lawless left after the ceremony to motor to Port Hope, where they took the train for western points. They will reside in Grafton.

GRAHAM—STEVENSON

The home of Mr. and Mrs. David Stevenson, Harwood, Ontario, was the scene of a quiet, but pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, April 30, at 4 p.m., when their eldest daughter, Martha Lillie was united in marriage to Mr. John Hilton Graham, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Graham, Baltimore. The ceremony which took place in the presence of the immediate members of the families of the contracting parties was conducted by Rev. T. McCord pastor of Bethseda Presbyterian Church.

The bride who entered the drawing to the strains of the "Wedding Bells" wedding march played by Mrs. McCord, looked lovely in her wedding gown of ivory brocaded silk crepe with silver lace and carried a large bouquet of ophelia roses and fern.

Miss Reta Stevenson, only sister of the bride was bridesmaid and wore a very becoming dress of coral satin and carried a bouquet of pink roses and sweet peas. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Victor Graham.

After the ceremony the guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner served in the dining room which was prettily decorated with house plants and carnations. The color scheme being in pink and white.

Later in the evening the bride and groom left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for a wedding trip to Toronto and other points, bride travelling in her suit of navy tricotine with small navy hat. The many beautiful gifts testify to the high esteem in which the young couple are held among them being a substantial cheque from the brides' parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham will reside in Harwood.

CHURCH UNION INVADES RELIGIOUS LIBERTY OF THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE

Wipes Out Church of Their Allegiance, Contended F. H. Chrysler In Opposing the Church Union Bill Which He Asserted Had No Precedent In Annals of Canadian and British Parliaments—Unionists Will Not Accept Bill Stripped of 'Central Object'

ADJOURNED UNTIL TUESDAY.

OTTAWA, May 3.—Canadian Press. — The opening gun for the opponents of the church union bill was fired Friday afternoon before the Private Bills Committee of the House of Commons adjourned its consideration of the measure until Tuesday.

The man behind the gun was F. H. Chrysler, K.C., of Ottawa, and his statement was in the nature of a careful legal argument, challenging the right of the church unionists to secure legislation merging the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational churches in the United Church of Canada.

Mr. Chrysler had completed only a part of his argument before the committee rose but in the hour at his disposal he laid down four main propositions:

"No bill containing such powers (as the union bill) has ever been passed by the Parliament of Canada, nor as we believe by any British Parliament.

"It invades and is intended to affect the religious freedom of tens of thousands of the people of Canada, and to put out of existence the church to which they owe allegiance.

"No provision was made in either the Presbyterian or Methodist Union Acts for terminating the existence of the constituting churches and such churches were not in fact extinguished by the legislation.

"Neither of these bills (just mentioned) contained any provision for merging the negotiating churches and their congregations and associated corporations in the United Church."

Reject Garbled Bill.

The greater part of the day was consumed by speakers for the bill. Rev. Dr. Leslie Pidgeon of Winnipeg was under cross-examination during most of the morning and in reply to a direct question by William Duff of Lunenburg, he stated that if the "central object" of the bill were destroyed by amendments it could not be accepted by the Unionists. Dr. Pidgeon was followed by Rev. John Pringle of Sydney, and formerly of the Yukon, who testified to the necessity of the map of union churches in the Halifax Presbytery, which had been challenged by Mr. Duff. During the afternoon, Dr. Pringle was placed under examination, and denied that the bill involved coercion of a minority. He said that if his own church did not go into the union, he would leave it.

The committe will meet again on Tuesday morning.

Petitions Unofficial.

Dr. Pringle maintained that ninety per cent of the petitions were not from the congregations as such. They were unofficial and in most cases the board had taken no part in the petitions.

Mr. Wilson asked what should be done by a congregation when the board declined to act.

Mr. Pringle pointed out that the sessions could not take a divided course on a subject.

Mr. Wilson asked how a congregation could place its opinion before parliament when the session was of opposite view and the minister was neutral.

Dr. Pringle referred to the case in his own church where neither he, nor the session had knowledge of a petition being circulated. If the petitioners had come to him, had consulted him, petitions on both sides might have been presented to the committee.

While Men Overseas.

Mr. Wilson then referred to the vote taken in 1915.

"Was it all right," he asked, "to take the vote while the soldiers were overseas?"

"It was all right for the opponents," was the reply.

"We would like to see that tested," said Mr. Wilson.

"I think I know the views of the men overseas," replied Dr. Pringle, could give my opinion of their views on sectarianism."

"Would it be advisable to take a vote on the O. T. A. on the lists of 1915," went on Mr. Wilson.

"No," agreed the doctor.

"Yet it would be fair to take a union vote in 1915,' 'pursued Mr. Wilson.

"Because thte assembly has taken action," was the reply.

"Would it be fair to compel the so-called minority to go into union," asked Mr. Wilson.

"There is no complusion," replied Dr. Pringle. "As loyal Presbyterians, they should accept the mind of the supreme court or withdraw."

No Compromise of Principle.

...."Is there any possibility of compromise,' 'went on Mr. Wilson

"The general assembly asked for a conference at its last session," was the reply, "but found that no compromise was possible without surrender of principle.'

"Is it not true the British flag flies because of 'compromise,'" queried Mr. Wilson.

"No compromise of principle," was the answer.

Creed Well Known.

Mr. Duff asked if it was not regretable that the creed was not well-known throughout the church. Were not the session and the ministers to blame perhaps?

Dr. Pringle believed that insofar as the creed was contained in the shorter catechism it was well-known He didn't believe any congregation between Lunenburg and Dawson would stay with him if he attempted to preach sermons on Westminster confession of faith.

Mr Duff questioned Dr. Pringle regarding the map of union churches in the Presbytery of Halifax. After some queries he admitted he had made a few mistakes in detail but expressed the view that both he and Dr. Pringle had been substantially right in what they had said.

Did Dr. Prinngle accept the questions asked to Presbyterian ministers before induction? He then asked.

"Without reservation," replied Dr. Pringle.

Did Dr. Pringle subscribe to certain changes in the Westminster confession of faith as shown in the bill?

Dr. Pringle approved because the rank and file could now read it.

Mr. Putman asked if Dr. Pringle would go so far as Dr. Pigeon in saying that even though there was today a majority opposed to union in the church, they should still go ahead.

Majority Increased.

Dr. Pringle was uncertain. He believed that if a vote was taken today the majority in favour of Union would be greater increased."

"Does the Presbyterian Church accept it in its entirity the shorter catechism?"

Dr. Pringle:—"I don't know."

Mr. Puntman:— "Do you accept it"

Dr. Pringle:—"I do."

Mr. Putman:— "Would it be acceptable to the Methodist Church?"

Dr. Pringle believed it would.

Mr. Woodsworth, (Labor Winnipeg Centre)—Asked if there would be objection to the non-concurring churches to take a name "indicating that the light of the church was being carried on."

Dr. Pringle was agreeable to 'any kind of arrangement not in conflict with the principle of the bill." The dissenting churches could not be prevented from using the term Presbyterian.

The last question put to Dr. Pringle came from J. S. Woodsworth of Winnipeg. He asked whether Dr. gle thought it possible to have in amendment to the bill to give local congregations a chance to settle the quesiton of division of property voluntarily among themselves.

"I thing it might be done," replied Dr. Pringle "but I am no lawyer."

Opponents Case.

This concluded the case for the bill and F. H. Chrysler, K. C., of Ottawa then took the stand for the opponents.

Mr. Chrysler began with the statement that the bill with without precedent This was proven he claimed by the statement of G. I. Mason, K. C., counsel for the Unionists, that the instructions given him were to draft a bill to carry out the appendix on laws in the basis of union.

One of the provisions called for by this appendix was the ratifica-

MARTIN MISSING FROM SQUADRON CIRCLING GLOBE

Commander of the United States Airmen Sought By Scores of Ships Searching Alaskan Waters — Three Other Planes May Assist Although Told to Continue Flight.

PLANE WAS DAMAGED

BREMERTON, Wn., May 3. — The search for Major Frederick L. Martin, commander of the United States' world flight squadron, and his mechanician, Sergeant Alva Harvey, missing since Wednesday, widened and intensified yesterday as despatches received here indicated that their plane had not been seen since they left Chignik for Dutch Harbor.

Scores of vessels are engaged in a systematic search of the waters of the Pacific Ocean south of the Alaska Peninsula between Chignik and False Pass, while shore parties are hunting in the Aleutian Mountains west of Chignik for the missing plane.

The three other planes of the squadron, now at Dutch Harbor, although instructed to continue their flight, were said to be in readiness to join in the search should it be deemed advisable, according to the latest advices received here.

EXPEDITION CONTINUES.

Search for the lost commander of round the world airplane flight will be continued in Alaskan waters, but the expedition with which the War Department is intent upon making history will continue.

The attitude at White House and the War Department yesterday was that the bold undertaking should not be discontinued because its leader is missing, much as it will be regretted if the intrepid aviator is not found.

Gen. Patrick, chief of the air service, communicated by telegraph with Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, at Dutch Harbor, directing him to move forward with the planes as soon as the weather permitted.

ARGENTINE IS SCENE OF A VIOLENT STRIKE

(By Byrant Powers, United Press Staff Correspondent)

BUENOS AIRES, May 3. — Argentine's general strike, effective throughout the country last midnight, was ushered in by violence. A bomb exploded in a coach of the southern passenger train leaving Buenos Aires causing serious injuries to a guard and lesser injuries to a number of passengers. The guard suffered a broken leg.

The strike was called by Socialists and labor unions as a protest against the new pensions law which would allow all workers to retire on pensions from a government fund after 25 years of service.

FIFTY WORKMEN SEIZED LITHUANIAN DISTILLERY

LONDON, May 3 — (United News).—Fifty workmen seized the Lithuanian State Distillery as part of a May Day celebration with tragic results, according to the Riga correspondent of the Daily Mail.

Assistant Superintendent Radlin fell into a vat of vodka and was drowned and twelve policeman and twenty workers were injured as the Lithuanian coppers fought desperately to recapture the distillery.

The workmen after making a huge den in the vodka reserve fought with all the vigor derivable from intoxicant and hurled empty bottles at the police for some time before being driven out.

MARQUIS CURZON GAVE HIS OPINION OF GOVT.

LONDON, May 2. — (Canadian Press).—In a speech to-day at the great gathering of the Primrose League, Marquis Curzon gave his first views of the Labor Government and predicted that the Conservative banner would before long be again flowing high.

"There is a Government in power which has only conformed to its title in so far as it is laboring in very deep water," he said. "The Socialist Government was going to give us the pure milk of Socialism, but so far the cow hasn't provided much beverage. In foreign affairs the only thing the Government has done has been to sit in friendly conference with representatives of the most cruel and bloody Government that Europe has known since the French Revolution.

Parents Protesting Vaccination Ukase

SARNIA, ONT., May 3. — A public meeting was held in the City Hall last night to protest against the vaccination order of the local Board of Health under which all school children must be vaccinated or be prohibited from attending school.

A fair number attended and heard a dissertation against vaccination in general and compulsory vaccination in particular by Dr. L. S. Lumley, local chiropractor, and others. The meeting protested the enforced vaccination and steps to oppose the order will be taken. City Solicitor John Cowan, K.C., has advised the Mayor that the City Council has no power to interfere with the Board of Health's order.

The opinion quotes a recent Toronto case in which it was held that a municipal body cannot question action of the Provincial or local health board.

BORDER FORCE IS INCREASED

Five Hundred Men With Motor Cycles Supplement the Patrol to Prevent Smuggling Into United States.

NORTH PORTAL, Sask., May 3. —In order to cope with a smuggling ring whose operations have caused serious trouble, the United States' immigration authorities are adding five hundred men to their staffs along the border to prevent further wholesale violation of regulations. Most of the men to be added to the force will be equipped with motor cycles and will patrol between entry ports along the international boundary line.

A smuggling ring with headquarters at Winnipeg, it is stated, has recently offered to carry aliens into the United States. The men demand a certain fee and smuggle the men across the boundary. Many arrests have been made recently, both of immigrants and "immigration bureau" officials. This condition was caused by the quota regulations restricting entry into the United States.

PEPALL ARRESTED IN SMITH CHARGE

Taken Into Custody as a Material Witness in the Charges Against Hon. Peter Smith.

TORONTO, May 3.—(Canadian Press).—Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney General, stated yesterday that Harry Pepall, manager of the Aemilius Jarvis bond firm, had been taken into custody as a material witness in the charges against Hon. Peter Smith. Mr. Pepall, he said had been admitted to bail of $9,000. He will appear in police court on Wednesday nxet when the crown will proceed with the preliminary hearing of its case against Hon. Mr Peter Smith.

No criminal charge is laid against Mr. Pepall but his arrest is the most drastic of several activities of the crown centering about the Jarvis firm. Recently government auditors were sent into the Jarvis offices to probe for details of the firm's transactions with the government. Certain books which have been looked upon as important for evidence in the Smith charges have since been transferred to the custody of the Provincial police at Queen's Park

Harry Pepall, the Jarvic company manager, is regarded by the crown as one of its key witnesses in its case against the late Provincial Treasurer. He faces no criminal charge personally but the crown felt that it should take no chances upon his evidence not being available and instructed that he be taken into custody and placed under heavy bond.

When the public accounts committee was sitting Harry Pepall testified to having arranged with the Jarvic company for a commission to his brother. And.. Pepall on all provincial business which he might influence to the firm. The latest charges against Hon. PeterSmith relate to this commission, alleging that the provincial treasurer benefited from it and naming him, and Pepall, Aemilius Jarvis sr., and Aemilius jr., as the partners in a conspiracy.

WOMAN HEADING GERMAN REDS IN ELECTION FIGHT

University Graduate Captured Communist Party Machinery — Has Campaigned Incognito After Indictment For Incitement to Riot.

SURE OF ELECTION.

BERLIN, May 3.—The firebrand of the election now coming to a close is Ruth Fischer, whose real name is Elfrieda Golke, alias Friedlaender. Only 29 years old, she is head of the German Communist Party, having unseated Clara Zetkin, Otto Brandler, and other party wheel horses. She became a Communist while studying economics at Vienna University.

Years ago she led the minority at the Leipsic Communist National Convention, pleading for direct action. After the failure of the Brandler wing to produce a revolution last November, she secured the support of Zinievoff, president of the Executive Committee of the Communist Intenationale and captured the German party machinery.

Election Assured.

Indicted for incitation to riot, she has campaigned incognito, appearing unannounced at meetings. As the candidate of the industrial Berlin district, her election seems assured.

The most romantic candidate in the election is Louis Haeusser, a former champaigne bartender in Paris, and now head of he Haeusser Party. He is called by some "Germany's Rasputin," because of his hypnotic eyes and flowing beard.

He considers himself a second Messiah and announces that "I guarantee that the present governmental system will fall one week after the assembly of the new Reichstag; the Rhine and Ruhr will be evacuated in three months, and the United States of Europe be erected under my leadership within six months."

Women Candidates.

Among the Haeusser candidates women predominate. Haeusser, after serving time for incitation to riot, has conducted his campaign from a sanitarium.

Prince Bismark, the German Nationalist candidate, was only a year old at the time of the death of his grandfather, the Iron Chancellor, but is played up as the holder of the Bismark tradition. Admiral von Tirpitz, on the German Nationalist ticket, has warned that he will play an independent game if elected.

SEX WAR IN POLITICS.

BERLIN, May 3.—The State is an institute of men and will remain a manly institution, despite the efforts of modern women to get the upper hand, Count von Revenlow, Pan-German leader, and candidate for the new Reichstag in Schleswig, where he is opposing Count von Bernstorff, declared in a campaign speech Friday.

"German women have had a taste of politics, and like it," he declared, "and now have dreams of becoming a dominating power. But we do not want to see them rule Germany, and have no idea of permitting them to oust the men as the governors."

Harking back to the war days and the German U-boat campaign, Martha Boje, in the Berlin Zeitung Am Mottag, answers the Count and reminds the women voters how a "manly" war brought nothing but misery to Germany. She urges the women to show their power with the ballot.

UNION WORKER DIED AS RESULT OF EXPLOSION

CLEVELAND, O., May 3.—(Canadian Press).—Joseph Nestor, 50, business agent here of the Sheet Metal Workers' Union, died late yesterday from injuries received on Wednesday night when nitro glycerine, planted in an automobile belonging to the organization, exploded.

William M. O'Brien, international vice-president of the organization, and prominent in Labor circles at Chicago and New York, was probably fatally injured and six others received less serious injuries.

Friends of O'Brien, who was active in the formation of a new building for the Trades Council here, believed the explosive was planted by out-of-town gangsters brought here by enemies of O'Brien. O'Brien lost an eye and leg but may recover.

WIFE ALLEGES BARING TRIED TO POISON HER FOR PRETTY TEACHER

The Other Woman In Germ - Poisoning Case Deceived — Had Loved Him and Understood He Was Separated From Wife and Was Getting a Divorce — "Love Nest" Found.

WIFE IS BITTER.

NEW YORK, May 3.—While the middle-aged Mrs. Clarence O. Baring poured tea to an assemblage of friends in her White Plains Park avenue home and while her young husband pased his cell in despair of bail, District Attorney Arthur Rowland in White Plains announced that he was confident of communication with Miss Mildred E. Beam, the cultured pretty school teacher of Elizabeth, N. J., now a central figure in the Baring poison case. He said he expected she would voluntarily submit to an interview with the Westchester authorities.

Tablets in Golf Bag

There was a flutter of excitement about the District Attorney's office when Deputy Sheriff Foley brought up from a check room in the Grand Central Station Baring's golf bag, left on his return last Friday from a trip to Norfolk, Va., said to have been "on business." It was given out that in this golf bag was found a box of bicloride of mercury tablets. They are being subjected to chemical analysis.

From all quarters yesterday came expressions of amazement that Miss Beam should, in any way, be involved in the Baring case. All who knew her found her charming cultured, a whole-hearted, spirited American girl—very stunning to look upon, for she is about five feet, eight inches tall, slender, with ash blonde hair and brown eyes. In Elizabeth she was occustomed to drive about in her own Ford coupe and dress with enviable smartness.

Girl Employs Counsel

Baring, it developed, was known to some of her friends. Also her deep love for him was known to them, though she talked little about her affairs. Everyone was aghast at the knowledge that this socially gifted young man was in reality married and a confessed manipulator of death-dealing germs and poison, confined in jail charged with the attempted murder of his wife.

From Miss Beam's brother-in-law, Daniel Seaman, of Irvington, N.J., it was learned yesterday that the young woman's family has insisted on her retaining special counsel. It is also reported she has resigned her position as school teacher in Elizabeth, N.J. The name of her attorney Mr. Seaman withheld, simply stating that "he is a New York lawyer of ample capability."

Mr. Seaman bitterly assailed Mrs. Baring for the position in which the forty-six-year-old wife has placed his sensitive, delicately reared sister-in-law. Nor did he spare the sparkling-eyed Baring, who, though thirty-nine might be mistaken for twenty-nine, with his deportment and dress of studied carelessness. Mr. Seaman delivered this speech:

"First of all, Baring told Mildred he was separated from his wife; that his wife was going to get a divorce.

Girl Told of Divorce

"Second ,when Baring went to Europe about a year ago, and his wife went too, he told my sister they were going over for at Paris divorce so that he would be free to marry Mildred. He didn't say at all that he was going to Europe with his wife.

"Mildred loved him. She didn't dream how he had double-crossed her until she read about his arrest in the newspapers last Saturday as she was coming back to Elizabeth from New York. She cried as if her heart would break.

"Now all we want to do is to shield her and protect her from any more of this."

Repeatedly since the sensational arrest of Baring last Friday—and since the discovery of the records of deadly disease germs consigned to him from the Willard Parker Hospital—and since his baffling confession "that he only meant to make his wife sick enough to get her away to California, so that there he might nurse her back and break from the other woman—"

"Love Nest" Discovered

Repeatedly since the unfolding of this fantastic story and Baring's indictment on an attempted murder

Hydro Utilities Absorb Surplus ?

(Special to the Examiner)

LINDSAY, May 3.—Hydro matters engaged the attention of the members of the Lindsay Board of Trade at its last meeting. The feeling has prevailed for some time that the Hydro Commission has not been treating the municipality fairly in the matter of rates for power; also that the municipalities in the Central Ontario area, which comprises the Trent district, do not enjoy as favorable rates as the municipalities in the western portion of the province.

Every year there is a subsantial surplus from the operation of the Lindsay plant, and it was charged by several members of the Board of Trade that this surplus was used by the Hydro to wipe out the deficit following the operation of certain Hydro utilities, such as the Peterborough street railway and gas plant. "We are virtually running that street railway in Peterborough," said one member "and we are doing so at the expense of the local power users."

COUNTRY NEEDS GREATER POWER OF PURCHASING

Farm Products Sell At Low Prices, Says Progressive Member In Budget Speech—Hamilton's Factories Have Decreased In Number Since 1920.

AFTERNOON'S TALK.

OTTAWA, May 3.—Not the lowering of the tariff, but the lowering of purchasing power was the diagnosis of the present ills of farming and manufacturing submitted by Preston Elliott (Progressive, Dundas) continuing the budget debate in the House of Commons Friday afternoon.

Ninety-five per cent. of the farmers of Dundas county were engaged in dairying. The price of cheese at present was thirteen and a quarter cents a pound. One hundred pounds of milk would make eight pounds of cheese, and at this rate the farmer would get $1.08 for a hundred pounds of milk. The charge for manufacture was two cents a pound ,leaving the farmer 90 cents for one hundred pounds of milk.

Bankers Could Help

J. F. Fafard (Liberal, L'Islet) said the Conservatives had argued that the Government's tariff proposals sacrificed the East to the West. This was not true. The reductions made in taxation on the implements of production would benefit both east and west. They were for all Canada.

"Hear, hear," interjected Mr. McMaster.

Mr. Fafard said that Liberals desired the prosperity of both manufacturers and agriculture. He urged that the banks should assume a more generous attitude when dealing with loans to the farmers and the more cautious when consideration the applications for loans from speculators. Canada at the present time had manufacturing plants for thirty million people. Rather than this over-industrialization he preferred the present policy of the Government which looked to development from the bottom up. He urged the importance of the geological geodetic and topographical surveys with a view to the development of the natural resources of the Dominion.

Hamilton's Protest

T. J. Stewart (Conservative, Hamilton West) said that, representing the third largest city in Canada, he would not be doing his duty unless he protested against the Budget. If the tariff measures mentioned in it were carried into effect, Canada would suffer one of the most severe blows the country had ever received, and some industries would be forced out of existence. He estimated that the farmers would not save more than ten dollars a year through the tariff cuts. It would be no credit to them if they were prepared to ruin the rest of the country for ten dollars a year.

In the City of Hamilton, factories were growing fewer, and many had disappeared. In 1920 there had been 790 manufacturing establishments in that city while in 1922 there were only 636. The number of employees

HASTINGS GETS FACTORY NIBBLE

Council Meeting Last Night Failed to Materialize — Population Lower.

(By a Staff Reporter).

HASTINGS, May 3.—The regular meeting of the Council was postponed last night owing to the absence of Reeve Fowlds, who is Warden of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, and who being in Baltimore on county business, was unable to reach home in time for the monthly session here. The adjourned meeting will likely be held on Monday evening.

There was important business matters on the official slate for last evening, chief of which was the proposition to grant concessions to a brass manufacturing concern that is looking for a new location. This firm was recently burned out in Toronto, and is now anxious to re-establish itself in some place where the cost of land is less and operating expenses lower.

A deputation consisting of Reeve Fowlds, Clerk Wilson and Councillor Coughlan, recently went to Toronto to interview the firm. The latter made a proposition which the visitors took under consideration. The other day the promoter, a Mr. Clarke, the same man who talked up the spark plug manufacturing proposition in Hastings some time ago, a proposition that was finally rejected, with the auditor and two members of the brass company, came to Hastings and had a conference with all the members of the company when the matter was fully discussed.

Public Meeting Held.

The upshot of this conference was that a public meeting was called to give the ratepayers a chance to hear the proposition. The terms offered by the firm was an agreement to put up a building at an estimated cost of $7,500, and to equip it. In return they asked the town to give them financial backing to the extent of $15,000, taking a mortagage on the plant as security. The firm agreed to pay 20 per cent. on the cost of erecting the building, the town to put up the balance. The cost of moving the plant from Toronto was explained, and it was also pointed out that the value of the building would be considerably increased when the equipment was put in. In addition to these concessions the usual fixed assessment is asked for.

To Submit By-Law.

The people will be given a chance to vote on this question. The company has secured an option on a site in the village, a tract of land now vacant, and yielding the place practically no revenue in the way of taxes. Reeve Fowlds, Councillor Coughlan and probably Clerk Wilson will go to Peterboro on Monday to meet members of the company and to have G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., who is solicitor for the village, draw up an agreement as a preparatory step to submitting the question to the taxpayers.

The firm manufacture all kinds of brass articles, including the fixtures made of that metal, and which are used on electric lights. They agree to give employment to at least 12 men. The building, if put up, will be a large one, probably 150 x 50 feet in extent.

Shoe Factory Prospect.

Hastings has recently had another industrial prospect. A firm in Toronto, engaged in the manufacture of shoes, looking for a new location, where they can enlarge their plant and operate it at less expense, submitted a proposition to Hastings. It is now announced that Lakefield has offered them inducements worth $20,000, so that this prospect is now given up as lost.

Hastings' Assessment.

Assessor Chapman has completed his official labors and had the roll ready to submit to the council last night, if the meeting had been held.

The total assessed value of the village according to Assessor Chapman's figures, is $317,960, and the total exemption amounts to $52,000.

Last year the total assessment was $318,215, a drop of $1255.

The difference is easily accounted for. Last year the assessment on Fowlds' elevator was $5000, including the business levy. This plant was destroyed by fire during the winter so that all the town gets out of it this year is an assessment of $300 on the land.

Assessor Chapman found that about twenty young men in town were paying an income taxe on $100 This meant a tax of $3.30 for Separate and $3.80 for Public school supporters, the rate last year being 33 and 38 respectively. The young men so assessed escaped the payment of the $5 poll tax. Disputing the claim that the income of these young men were large enough to be taxed and seeing a little source of revenue to the town Assessor Chapmen dropped about twenty of them from the roll. This means a reduction in the total assessment of $2000 but the payment of a $5 poll tax in these cases will mean greater civic receipts in the future.

Drop in Population.

The population of Hastings, according to Assessor Chapmans figures is 712 as compared to 735 last year. The tax rate for 1924 is not likely to show any decrease as the village has for some years been run on the principle of rock bottom economy.

It is plain after allowing for the loss on the Fowlds elevator and the cutting off of $2000 in various assessments that Assessor Chapman must in other cases have made substantial increases. The percentage as assessed value is about 40 per cent. this year of the actual worth of the property, a raise from 33 1-3 per cent. The low assessment accounts for the comparatively high tax rate. If a private individual could purchase the village at the value put upon it by the assessor, it would yield him an income of about 50 per cent. a year on his investment.

Mr. Chapman is an old-time resident of the village, and knows every piece of property within the corporation limits. He has served over 20 years at different times in the council so that official duties are by no means new to him.

COUNTRY NEEDS

was reduced from 30,454 to 25,464, during the same period. Mr. Stewart ready letters from manufacturers who were affected by the tariff reductions.

The reading of these letters took up considerable time, and finally Mr. Stewart obtained permission to place them on Hansard unread. He concluded with a request that the Government consided the grave possibilities of its Budget proposals before it finally made them law.

Maritimes Decline

D. A. MacKinnon (Liberal, Queens) stated that protection had not solved the problem of the United States farmer. He was in favor of reduced tariffs and also the cut in the sales tax. He warned Canadian manufacturers that it was in their interest to have a prosperous agricultural community.

The depopulation of the Maritime Provinces, he said, was inevitable so long as there was no industry there to keep them. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association ought to decentralize capital and establish factories all over the Dominion. The centralizing of capital in Ontario and Quebec was having a bad effect on the rest of Canada.

Mr. MacKinnon paid high tribute to the late Sir Louis Davies, Chief Justice. Prince Edward Island, he said had given Canada many of its best citizens. That province had actually less people now than when it joined the Dominion, but that was for lack of industries there.

The Middle Course

T. H. McConica (Progressive, Battleford) said the present Budget indicated a new departure in Canada. In the next few years it would be established whether Canada was to have a tariff for revenue or a tariff for protection. He was in favor of the former .Protection was taking money from one private individual and giving it to another. That was not the function of Government. He did not believe any member to-day favored the adoption of free trade forthwith. But there was a middle course betwen that and high protection.

The advocates of protection had talked much about this home market and then added some more advice to farmers about going in for other lines of productions. With cows on dry feed eight months in the year, the West could not compete with the East on dairy products. Cattle-raising was unprofitable because it took ten acres to feed a steer one summer and then there was winter feeding.

Preferred "Square Fight"

The farmer, he said, knew it was false economy to use old implements But the farmers had not the money to buy new ones.

A vote for the amendment would be a vote of want of confidence in the Government said Mr. McConica. He would have preferred to see a "square fight" between the amendment moved by A. J. Doucet (Canservative ,Kent) which was ruled out of order and the Government resolution. "I think the fight is on," said Mr. McConica addressing the Conservatives, "and we'll meet you at the next election on that issue, and we'll grim you—."

This declaration was interrupted by a roar of laughter.

"Can we tax ourselves rich, or can't we?' 'Mr. McConica asked, and again there was a burst of laughter.

He concluded by saying that he was in favor of tariff reduction which would be firm and consistent.

HOME SONGS ARE HEART BREAKERS.

A Tourist Hearing "Home Sweet Home," May Be Inclined to Feel Sad and Hit the Trail For Home At Once.

One of the largest cities in Florida has "tipped off" its local bands and orchestra never to play "Home, Sweet oHme." The idea is to avoid anything that might make a tourist homesick and start him and his pocketbook back over the road by which they arrived.

The whole town has fallen in line behind the city boomers, and anything glorifying "home,' sweet home" or "old home town" is frowned upon. Everything possible is done to make tourists stay as long as possible, spending their money. Every effort is put forth to make new residents feel that home is where they are now.

On the surface, this soft-pedal on home stuff may seem like keen pscychology. But it isn't, and for the very simple reason that most of the sentiment about the home town and the homestead of long ago is hokum.

People talk by the hour, reminiscing about the old home town. They paint it in bright colors, giving it glories that never existed.

They will do anything except GO BACK THERE TO LIVE. And, after all, this is the real test.

When a man or woman effervesces about the old home town, they have in mind the place as it was years ago, not as it is now.

In memory it is bright, surrounded by recollections of loyal friends, loved ones, happy experiences, tender associations. But all those are gone. You realize it when you return to the old home town wander about a few hours, and find nobody is able to "place you."

So it is also with the home of long ago. No price would be too great, to turn back the clock and live over the old days with father, mother, brother, sister, old-time sweetheart and pals.

But as for the actual house—would you trade your present home for the inconveniences of that place in memory? All very fine to talk about and worship. But the home back yonder didn't have electric lights, washing machines, gas stoves, a flivver and the thousand and one other semi-luxuries of today.

The Florida city is needlessly alarmed. We will fight for the old home town and for the home that housed us long ago. But as for moving back there—well, that's another matter.

The people who never left the scene of our childhood are happy. They have escaped the tragedy that befalls the ex-resident who returns after long absence and has his illusions tumbled in ruins about him.

PAINTING THE LILY.

Motorists entering a neighboring lake shore town in the last year or two have doubtless noticed a sign reading "Port Hope, the Prettiest Town in Canada."

To many who saw that boastful announcement there was something about the sign that aroused suspicion—a sort of the-lady-doth-protest-too-much feeling.

There was in some minds an idea that the sign had been erected by somebody who had never been out of Port Hope, and therefore was firmly convicted in the truthfulness of the claim.

Cobourg people laughed every time they saw it, and even Lindsay folk had trouble in diguising their merriment.

And now it seems the suspicion was well founded.

The Port Hope Guide is offering $100 for the citizen who does his most to beautify the town.

Surely to attempt to improve "The Prettiest Town in Canada" is to seek to paint the lily.

However, the Guide is to be commended for its public spirit in inaugurating such a competition.

In every town and city in the land there are conditions that are far from beautiful, districts that are an eye-sore and a reproach to the community, weed-covered vacant lots, unkempt boulevards, unsightly backyards, dirty lanes.

A little energy, a little vision and a little pride would banish such things not only in Port Hope but in every other centre.

A COMMON COMPLAINT.

Here is a letter received by the Examiner that will cause a responsive echo in the hearts of many of our city gardeners:

Dear Mr. Editor,—

Will you please give a small space in your evening paper to warn neighbors who keep hens to please shut them up as people are putting very small things in their gardens. They let their hens out the first thing in the morning and they come into our gardens and spoil what we have already planted.

A READER OF THE EXAMINER.

It is a nice thing to keep hens, but it is a much nicer thing to keep them at home, and unfortunately the complaint voiced by our correspondent is not an isolated one.

In every neighborhood there are bands of feathered bandits with unparalleled audacity and prodigious appetites whose chief delight is to show how much harm they can do to a garden.

Many an amateur tiller of the soil has been moved to dangerous wrath and unorthodox language by the discovery that a few motherly-looking hens have chosen his prized green things as a parade ground and banquet hall.

The influence of two appearances in church on Sunday has been often completely wiped out on Monday by such a visitation.

The moral to poultry owners should be plain: Keep your birds at home.

CONGRATULATIONS.

To the members of the Peterborough Symphony Orchestra and the Peterborough Male Voice Choir and to Messrs. R. A. Browne and M. H. Parker, vocalists, hearty congratulations are due upon the fine showing made by them in the Ontario Musical Festival in Toronto this week.

They succeeded in giving their home city a very prominent place in the proceedings, the Symphony Orchestras, under Mr. Gliddon's baton, winning two first prizes and a second, the Male Voice Choir, under Mr. Chenhall's direction, capturing two second prizes in the face of keen competition and Messrs. Browne and Park each winning a first and a second prize, the former in the bass solo contest and the latter in the tenor competition.

The feat of Peterborough's representatives in bringing home four first prizes and four second awards is a splendid advertisement for this city, coming as it does after the splendid success in the Ontario Festival last year of Trinity Orchestra, Miss Agnes Logan, pianist, and Miss Mathilde Masson, vocalist.

The showing in the two years against competition from all over the Province has been conclusive proof that Peterborough not only possesses splendid musical material but the teachers and conductors to develop it to the best possible advantage.

Their fellow-citizens should be very proud of the two oganizations and the individuals who so worthily carried the banner of Peterborough against the best that Ontario can produce.

The encouragement and experience gained as a result of this year's effort may be expected to produce even better results when the next festival is held.

HE SHOULD BE SAFE.

A resolution has been presented before the Toronto District Trades and Labour Council calling for the resignaion of Hon. James Murdock, Federal Minister of Labour, because of a recent amendment to the fair wage order-in-Council which give to contractors and workmen the right of individual contract.

The amendment enacts: "The power of the Minister hereunder shall not be exercised as to any employee or employees where it is established to his satisfaction that an agreement in writing exists and is in effect between a contractor and the class of employees to which such employee belongs, or the authorized representatives of such classes of employees, fixing rates of wages, overtime conditions and hours of labour."

It will be difficult for a good many people to discover anything objectionable to the amendment.

If a body of workmen employed by a contractor are satisfied with wage and working conditions differing from the fair wage scale, why should there be any interference with them?

The conditions may be such that the contractor cannot afford to go ahead with the work at the rate called for in the order-in-Council.

Then men on the job can see the conditions for themselves and know that to proceed would be impossible unless lower wages are paid or longer hours worked.

They are reasonable; they want to go on working and are willing to accept the new conditions.

Yet some Labour leaders would rather see them thrown into unemployment than compromise.

If the Minister of Labour never does anything worse than approve of that amendment his seat should be safe.

A WARNING TO SPEEDERS.

"You not only placed the lives of other drivers and pedestrians in jeopardy, but you ran the risk of being injured yourself."

Following the above remarks, Judge Perrault inflicted heavy fines on two men whom he found guilty of driving automobiles at excessive speed, and announced that in future he would deal in the most summary manner with furious drivers, says the Montreal Star.

How necessary it is that the speed laws should be observed is demonstrated by the fact that an average of two thousand persons are killed every year in the United States by automobiles, and that something like a million persons are injured. While it certainly devolves upon pedestrians to take precautions before crossing streets, their lives should not be in almost certain peril if they happen to be off their guard for a moment. The man at the wheel controls a powerful force—and it brings responsibilities.

It is of moment to recall that frequently juries in this city have delored the number of fatal accidents in our thoroughfares and have adopted recommendations asking the courts to pass more severe sentences on reckless drivers.

It is to the credit of local automobile associations that more than once they have declared against reckless drivers; it would appear, however, that very little good has come of it. Much stricter measures are evidently necessary than the mere passing of "resolutions."

HATS OFF TO BRITAIN!

Britain's financing stands as a continuing marvel. Before the war there were those who said (some said it gleefully) that her people were decadent, that her financial, moral and physical foundations were crumbling, that she was going the way of the great Empires of the past. Britain's answer was to fight the most colossal war in history, to pour out blood and treasure unstintedly, to buttress and finance most of her Allies, to write deeds of heroism fortitude and courage that will live while men remember.

And since the war, what has been her record? While other nations bowed before the aftermath of the storm, she has marched from triumph to triumph. Her word her bond as of yore, this "Perfidious Albion" has fulfilled her every obligation. Reeling under a world-wide catastrophe, beset by troubles at home and abroad, dragged down by creditors who either would not or could not pay, she has paid her debts, paid to the last farthing, asked for no favors other than her due, and is emerging from the tempest with honor unsullied and her credit and name unimpaired.

As early as last year Mr. Baldwin, the then Prime Mirniser, was able to say:

"Those in charge of the public purse since the first year of peace have reduced the expendiures of the country from over £2,000,000,000 a year to but ittle over £800,000,000. The staff in the Government offices have been so greaty reduced that there are now only ten per cent. more officials at work than before the war. And here it must be remembered that the work of the public administration has been enormously increased owing to the pensions and other services introduced during and caused by the war. Though nearly half our income goes to the payment of interest on debt, we have in three years out of income reduced our debt by £450,000,000. Since the Armistice we have nearly halved the floating debt. It was £1,500,000,000. It is now only £800,000,000. We have paid off, in addition, all our forign debt, except to America. We have balanced our budget and we have established a sinking fund. These things have been hard to do, but we have maintained the credit of the country."

And that credit is being maintained under the leadership of Ramsay MacDonald. During the past year Britain faced prodigious problems at home and abroad. She encountered unemployment, underemployment, strikes and industrial depression. She paid out millions and tens of millions for pensions and doles. She had to maintain a mighty army and navy. And she had to face all the expenditure incidental to the administration of an Empire which embraces one-fourth of the world's territory and one-third of its population.

Yet this week she produced a surplus. Produced a surplus of $240,000,000; and in consquence, reduced her floating debt by $175,000,000; abolished her corporation tax; and lightened the food taxes of her people.

Yes, hats off to Britain! In peace as in war she stands as the spearhead of progress. While other peoples have let strife visit them with chaos, she has toiled for peace and reconstruction. In a world of turbulence and hatred she has not been afraid to disarm. And while racial suspicions and greeds and jealousies have been turning the world into a Witches' night, while parliamentary government has been going down all over the world, she has been giving a magnificent example of the robustness of her democracy, extending the boundaries of freedom in her Empire, and to-day, after 1,000 years, the greatness of her dominion knows no westering sun. Today, indeed, we can say of her, in the words of a celebrated poet:

"Set in this stormy Northern sea,
Queen of these restless fields of tide,
Britain! what shall men say of thee,
Before whose feet the worlds divide?"

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, May 2.—There were a thousand more cattle on the market at the Union Stock Yards this week more than there were the two previous weeks, and this accounted for the slight decline in prices. The drop did not exceed 25c a cwt. in any class, and was scarcely perceptible in the best handyweight butchers and butchers cows. The packers bought practically no heavy steers this week, and this accounted for the easier prices in the exporters. A few loads of these made $9 a cwt. last week, but the best load this week was priced at $8.75. The market was well cleaned up at the week-end without any special inducement in prices.

The exporters were heavy buyers, and took all told about 1,300 head. Their top steers cost $8.50, and the low-priced $7.50 a cwt. For heifers, 1,100 lbs. and over, the prices were generally $7.25 and $7.50 a cwt. For cows the cost was 5½ to 6¼c a lb. and bulls were bought fro 4 to 5¾c. They will need fully as many next week if the runs permit them to get them, but the Old Country markets, they say, do not warrant any higher prices at this end. Choice steers in the States are off from the high prices at this end. Choice steers in the States are off from the high prices of a couple of weeks ago, and this has crowded out Canadian dressed beef for a time.

Choice handyweight butchers were wanted all week, and held from $7.50 to $8 a cwt. Good butchers went from $6.75 to $7.25 and good mediums sold at $6.25 and $6.50 a cwt. A few of the very common butchers changed hands at $5, but the majority with some killing quality, brought $5.75 a cwt. With the exporters in the market for cows, these had a strong demand, and prices were firm throughout the week. Extra choice ones sold from 6¼ to 6½c, and good cows 5¾ to 5¾c. or medium cows as high as $4.85 a cwt. was paid, and common cows on occasions brought $4 a cwt.

Choice butchers bulls went from 5 to 5¼ cents and the best of those for export were priced at 4½ to 5¼ cents. Boloyna bulls in good shape are around $3.50 a cwt.

One extra good load of feeders was taken at $7.35 cwt., but other bunches did not sell above $6.60. Light feeders were around $6.00. For the 700 and 800 lb. stocker the market was close to $5.25 a cwt., and common yearlings were around $4.00 a cwt. With seeding in full swing commission men do not look for too heavy a cattle run next week and this will serve to keeping a steady market.

The run of calves was the heaviest this season and common and medium calves are down a dollar to a dollar and a half a cwt. Tops were not much better than 10 cents a pound at the week end. Good mediums 8 cents or a little better. The prices for common calves was from 4 to 6 cents a pound.

Sheep and yearlings are holding firm. Choice sheep are up to 10 cents and yearlings one cent higher. The few 1923 lambs coming in are selling if woolled from 15 to 16 cents Spring lambs are about $15 each for top from 50 to 60 lbs. each. Light lambs are selling from $8.00 to $10 each.

The big runs of hogs have brought the price back to the low of the year, $7.25 a cwt. f.o.b. The 25 cent drop was effected on Wednesday and this carries over the week end. The fed and wateerd bid is $7.75 and off cars after a long haul $8.15 a cwt.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 2.—With scre buying orders in the hands of commission houses than for some time, wheat prices to-day took a decided upward swing. Rapidity with which deliveries on May contracts were absorbed and higher quotations at Liverpool had much to do with sending values here. Wheat closed firm at 1c. to 1 5-8c. net gain, May $1.05 1-4 to $1.05 3-8, and July $1.07 3-8 to $1.07 1-2. Other advances were: Corn 3-4 and 7-8c. to 1 5-8c.; oats 3-8 to 1-2c. and provisions 2c. to 10c. New deliveries on May wheat contracts to-day totalled 1,501,000 bushels, but from the outset the market showed a tendency to soar. Bulls had things virtually their own way, and there was an evdent broadening of the general trade.

COBOURG MAN SERIOUSLY HURT WHEN HORSE KICKED

COBOURG, May 2 (Special). — Alfred Deviney, a Haudimand Township farmer of about 55 years, is in the Cobourg Hospital in a serious condition as the result of being kicked by horse. Mr. Deviney lives near the village of Vernonville in Haldimand Township. He was preparing to go to church on Sunday afternoon and had taken out his car. Afterwards, he went to the barn to let some horses out in the yard for exercise. One of these kicked at a colt and struck Mr. Deviney a hard blow in the stomach. Mr. Deviney did not think at the time that his accident was so serious. He walked to the house, and a little later a physician was summoned. The next day his condition was worse and Monday night he was brought to the hospital here. On Tuesday, a Toronto specialist performed a critical operation, assisted by three local doctors. The blow perforated a bowel and Mr. Deviney's condition is very critical.

He had just purchased Mr. A. L. Skinner's two hundred acre farm on the Provincial Road between Port Hope and Cobourg and was preparing to move upon it. That deal has now been cancelled, owing to his much regretted accident.

PLANT SAYS GIRL CAUSED AUTO CRASH

Former Actress Now Suing "Flopped" Against Him When Driving, He Testifies.

Going 18 Miles An Hour.

NEW YORK, May 3.—The $500,000 damage suit brought by Helene Jesmer former Follies beauty against Philip Morgan Plant, wealthy step-son of Federal Attorney Hayward, for alleged injuries which ruined her beauty which she suffered in a motor car accident, today was settled out of court at a figure understood to be in the neighborhood of $1,000. Miss Jesmer maintained Plant was responsible for the accident, which, she said, ruined her beauty, destroyed the sight of one eye and left her in a state of emotional instability.

Cross-examination brought a reiteration of Miss Jesmer's story of the day before that Plant was going more than fifty miles an hour a fw minutes before the accident.

Plant testified as the first witness in his defense. He said that at no time during the ride from New Haven to New York did he drive faster than twenty-five miles an hour and that just preceding the accident he was not going more than eighteen miles per hour. The accident was caused, he said, by the fear produced in the mind of Miss Jesmer, who, at the approach of the dazzling headlights of another car, screamed, "flopped" over on him, and "grabbed" the steering wheel.

During the drive, Plant testified, Miss Jesmer was trying to teach a popular song to three of his friends who were seated in the back of the car. He said she was facing to the rear of the car and resting elbows upon the back of the front seat. Several times, Plant said, Miss Jesmer brushed against his arm, interfering with the driving of the car until he said, "Helen, please cut it out."

A few minutes later, Plant said, he came to a turn in the New Rochelle road near Pelham Parkway. Suddenly the glaring lights of an approaching car were thrown upon them, somebody called from the back "Look out, Phil." Miss Jesmer fell over on him, he felt her hand on the steering wheel, and then "oblivion" as he described it.

William J. Flynn, a policeman, said he hurried to he scene of the accident immediately after the crash.

"Plant was hopping about on one foot," said Flynn. "I found that the other one was broken. But I asked him first what was the matter with him, and he said, 'Never mind me, take care of Helene, she is my intended wife'."

Flynn testified that the speedometer in Plant's car had jammed at the time of the accident and recorded fifty-five miles an hour.

Miss Jesmer testified earlier in the day that after the accident Plant had called upon her and that she had gone to the theatre and had dined with him, and on one occasion tried to dance with him. The dancing took place the night before his departure for a six months' stay in Europe. T. J. O'Neill, her attorney, asked her if Plant had treated her differently after his return from Europe, and she replied that he had not declared any love for her or shown any affection for her after returning from abroad.

After the change in their relations became apparent, Miss Jesmer said, she consulted her attorney, and he advised her that she might either sue for a breach of promise of marriage or for "accident damages," and she decided to base her suit upon the accident only.

TEACHER IS WILLING TO TALK ON BARING

Mildred Beam Sends Word That She Doesn't Fear Questions, But Dislikes Publicity.

Prisoner Is Without Bail.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Mildred E. Beam, physical training instructor in the Junior High School at Elizabeth, N. J., hinted yesterday that she might come out of her place of seclusion outside New York State and answer questions of District Attorney Arthur Rowland of Westchester County. Mr. Rowland is anxious to interview the young woman on the subject of her friendship with Clarence O. Baring, who is accused of trying to poison his wife, Mrs. Sally Griffiths Baring of Park Avenue, White Plains.

The District Attorney said yesterday that he was confident that it would not be necessary to serve the subpoena he had issued for Miss Beam and that within a day or two she would leave the place of concealment to which she fled last Monday after suddenly leaving a class on receipt of a telephone call from another woman, thought to have been her mother.

Mr. Rowland made it clear that Miss Beam was not in any way involved in the crime charged against Baring; but because her name had been frequently associated with Baring's, the prosecutor said he needed whatever information Miss Beam could give him about Baring.

Fears Publicity, Not Questions.

Until yesterday afternoon, Mr. Rowland feared he might have to resort to drastic measures to compel the young woman's appearance. But late in the day he expressed confidence that she would visit him. Relatives and friends of Miss Beam had conveyed to Mr. Rowland her word that she was not afraid of any questions. Her only fear, they said, was of publicity.

A woman giving her name as Laura Beam, a sister of Mildred, telephoned yesterday to Principal Joseph P. O'Brien of the Elizabeth school, informing him that her sister's resignation from the school faculty had been mailed and asking that her salary check be mailed to room 704 at 111 Fifth Avenue, New York. The sister is employed there by the Association of American Colleges.

The array of poisons in the case was augmented yesterday by the discovery of a box of bichloride of mercury tablets in a golf bag in a baggage room of the Grand Central Terminal, left there last Friday by Baring on his return from Norfolk, where he had spent several days with a young woman. Mr. Rowland said there was no evidence that Baring had attmpted to administer bichloride of mercury to his wife. He is accused in three indictments of placing arsenic, and germs of diphtheria, pneumonia, scarlet fever and typhoid in Mrs. Baring's food.

Baring in Ward's Cell.

Baring occupies the cell in the White Plains jail that had been tenanted by Walter S. Ward. He was highly nervous again yesterday, though by no means on the point of collapse, as reported. He was said to be considerably disappointed at the refusal of many of his friends to agree to put up bail. No effort was made by his attorney to apply for bail yesterday, though it had been expected he would make such a motion. It seems probable that Baring will remain in his cell until his trial, scheduled for May 12.

Westchester County officials took cognizance of a rumor that Mrs. Baring might relent and withdraw from her assistance to the State in the prosecution of her husband on indictments which, with conviction, might result in penalties aggregating forty years in prison. Mr. Rowland said that, while Mrs. Baring's testimony at the trial would be of large value to the prosecution, he was confident that the other evidnce in his possession would suffice to bring about a conviction, even if Mrs. Baring withdrew her aid.

Newspaper men who sought Mrs. Baring yesterday found her entertaining a party of friends at her Park Avenue home. In declaring she would not be intervi.wed she displayed a decisiveness of tone and manner which belied the reports that she was on the verge of collapse.

Defense Plea is Unsettled.

Counsel for Baring said yesterday that no decision had been arrived at with regard to the defense to be offered by Baring. Friends of the prisoner, however, continued to assert that they expected him to plead insanity. Baring himself would not discuss the case with anybody other than his lawyer, his mother, Mrs. Walter E. Stroud and William Swett, president of the Minneapolis Heat Regulator Company, for which Baring was Eastern director with offices in the Grand Central Terminal Building.

District Attorney Rowland said yesterday he had received an anonymous letter from a New York furniture dealer who wrote that a year ago Baring ordered a set of furiture to be sent to an address in Elisabeth. The writer said that when the furniture was delivered a woman at the door refused to accept it.

The District Attorney said that Baring had told him he met Miss Beam in the Grand Central Terminal three and a half years ago. Afterward they went to dancing parties and on automobile rides. Miss Beam was then living in Hartsdale, two miles from Scarsdale, where the Barings then were living. Mrs. Baring says that her husband met Miss Beam at the Gedney Farm Hotel in White Plains seven years ago, when the Barings were guests there.

Mrs. Baring's assertion that when she was married to Baring a little more than twelve years ago, he was in poor financial circumstances, was corroborated yesterday by Miss Katherine Gardner, superintendent of an apartment house at 1,344 Pacific Street, Brooklyn. Miss Gardner said the Barings lived at that address in 1913, when Baring was soliciting subscriptions for magazines. Mrs. Baring says she sank $50,000 in backing her husband before he obtained the position which now pays him $10,000 a year. Mrs. Baring has an estate of $200,000.

WIFE ALLEGES

charge. White Plains has been deluged with accounts of the young visionarys' romantic activities. From this mesh if uncertainties emerged as a certainty that an apartment in West Fifty-eight street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, is tenated by one "C. Barnes." This is the name Baring confessed to having used at the Willard Parker Hospital where he got seven consignments of germs.

Baring's "love nest," this apartment is called.

Statement from Wife

At the office of Mrs. Baring's attorneys, Otterbourg, Steindler & Houston, No. 200 Fifth avenue, the following statement was given out in contradiction to the expressed opinion of acquaintances that Mrs. Baring was a "jealousy driven woman," who preferred this sensational prosecution to a quiet divorce:

"Because certain remarks attributed to the defendant's attorney have appeared in the newspapers to the effect that our client is a hysterical woman with jealousy hallucinations, we wish to state that there is no more truth in her being obsessed with jealousy than there is in the statement recently appearing, that the defendant is insane.

"The facts indicate that under the cloak of being an attentive and solicitous husband he deliberately tried to poison his wife for the very common place and ordinary motive of getting her money and marrying the other woman.

Wife worth $200,000.

Mrs. Baring's estate was appraised by her counsel as amounting to "about $200,000." Inherited, it was explained, from her father, and not settled on her as has been reported by her second husband, John Williams, the wealthy furniture manufacturer of Grand Rapids, Baring is the third husband.

While all officials were uncommunicative, it was generally reported that a "Jane Doe" indictment was agreed upon. It was not hinted what woman the "Jane Doe" could be.

Yesterday it became known that not only had Mrs. Baring failed twice in marriage, finding herself in a third experience facing a future shorn of the mellow peace promised most women of her age—her husband charged at her instance with a houlish crime—but also, that Baring himself had been married before, and at various periods in his life used three separate surnames, due, it was explained, to the several marriages of his mother, now Mrs. Walter E. Stroud.

Childhood Playmates

The story is told by one representing a long-back acquaintance with the young man's family, that Mildred Beam was a childhood acquaintance in the days when Baring a prep school student, spent long Summers at his parents' camp near Sebago Lake, Me.; the days when Mildred, a girl in her teens, also loved the woods that surrounded her own family's camp near the same lake shore.

A knowledge of the early acquaintance, the informant volunteered, fired the distrust and jealousy of Mrs. Baring, already passed the turn of youth, when the visionary Baring married when he was twenty-eight.

Sandwiched between these experiences and so much is asserted as fact Baring married when in his early twenties, a Miss Estelle Spiegal. They were divorced in 1912 shortly before Barings' marriage to his present wife. The name used by him in this marriage contract was "Clarence O. Burgess." This first wife is living in Germantown, Pa. The divorce was obtained in Philadelphia.

The story goes that some years after his marriage to the present Mrs. Baring, and after he had obtained a supreme court order to take the name of Baring, he met the eyes of a tall, slim, blonde girl, on a commuters' train pulling into the Grand Central Station. He returned this gaze. She sent him a quizzical smile of half recognition. They spoke and renewed their long inert friendship.

Baring, it was learned, has long been associated with White Plains. When a child his family lived on South Broadway. His father, it is said, was named Oakley, and this is offered as explanation of the middle initial of his name.

In 1911 or 1912 Baring applied to the courts to have his name changed to Baring out of respect to his stepfather who bore that name and who had made many sacrifices to keep the boy in good schools and a more ambitious social environment than the parents enjoyed.

Baring explained that before coming to New York in 1905 from Maryland, his father, Frank F. M. Burgess, had changed his name to Baring which had been in the family one hundred years.

GUELPH IS THE SCENE OF MYSTERIOUS DEATH

GUELPH, May 2. Canadian Press. —Early this morning the dead body of Angelo Belletti, three year old son of Angelo Belletti, was found on Alice street, near his home.

There is considerable mystery as to how the lad came to his death. No person saw the boy on the street nor heard any cry from him. Medical examination disclosed the fact that his neck was broken. A complete mystery envelopes the circumstances of the death. The police are busy on the case but have not the slightest clue upon which to work, though the street a well travelled throughfare all the day long.

CHURCH UNION

tion of the basis of union. It was not the province of parliament to ratify the basis of union, he argued. It was true that this had been done in the case of th Methodist Union in 1884, but that date was early in the history of Confederation and probably that bill passed without much consider tion. However, the approval of the articles of faith, said Mr. Chryles, was only a stepping stone to greater things.

It was beyond the power of Parliament, contended Mr. Chrysler to incorporate a church and compel people to surrender property to that church.

Precedents Out Of Line.

Mr. Chrysler reviewed the acts used as precedents by supporters of the bills, the Ontario Act of 1874 giving power to the uion of Presbyterian churches and Dominion Act for the union of Methodist churches in 1884, also the Congregational union of 1910. The proposed bill was however, "quite out of line with anything heretofore."

Provincial acts were passed in 1874 in Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and New Brunswitc.

The Acts were not all alike. The Ontario Act of 1874 was kept in view in the drafting of the present bill.

There was nothing in the old act vesting all the property of the church in the union and leaving it for the congregations to vote themselves out—"Being allowed to escape with their property like those who fled from Sodom and Gamorrah."

The union of 1874 was the result of the break in the church of Scotland in 1843 when 743 ministers and elders left the assembly, having differed on the subject of patronage, and accordingly the united free church was born. They left their property behind. "That was an example now being followed in this case," said Mr. Chrysler.

United By Convenant.

In Canada these two groups came together in 1874 by acts in the Provinciail Legislatures. "They never asked for an Act of Parliament but united by a convenant of union being the same kind o fchurches," said Mr. Chrysler. In those old bills there was no coercion, no merging, no legislation taking all the members into one church. "It was a case of each congregation being willing to vote itself in and not having to vote itself out after being placed in by an Act of Parliament. Congregations not entering into the 1874 union had their property left intact.

A quicker job - A better job

WHETHER you employ the paperhanger or whether you do the job yourself, you can now redecorate your rooms quicker, better and at less cost than formerly.

Staunton Semi-Trimmed Wallpaper simplifies the job throughout. Its advantages over the old-fashioned papers are obvious at a glance.

Semi-trimming eliminates all the old, troublesome and uncertain methods of trimming. No scissors, knife, or straightedge are required. You simply give the ends of the roll a rap on table or floor, and the selvage falls off, leaving the paper perfectly trimmed to a thousandth part of an inch. Think of the time and trouble saved—of the litter and muss you avoid—of how semi-trimmed wallpaper reduces the paperhanger's time and cost.

And above all, think of the perfect job that results. No white edges, no imperfect seams — just a beautiful design which looks like one piece on the wall.

TOURISTS LOOK TOWARD PETERBOROUGH DISTRICT

There have been enquiries in surprising numbers regarding the Trent Waterway and Kawartha Lakes this year, and as a result it is expected that the influx of tourists, never small, will this season be larger than ever. Charts and maps have been supplied to many owners of yatchs and automobiles in different states of the Union, and literature is being spread over the continent pointing out the advantages this district enjoys.

United States magazines will carry more advertising than before, especially those catering to the lover of the out-of-doors and others advertising motor boats and supplies.

The Hoosier motor club of Indiana has made enquiries for full particulars of Peterborough and the Kawartha Lakes with the object of arranging a tour for its members. Central Ontario seems assured of a good tourist traffic this season, and this beautiful section will receive its share.

There are at present 900,000 tons in the stock piles at the mines, the result of operating to give unemployment relief during past years, and with this supply to draw from no production increases will be necessary in order to meet requirements.

BRITISH LABOR WILL FACE NEW ELECTION

Definitely Refuse to Support Liberal Party Bill --Defeat in Sight.

LONDON, May 3. — (British United Press).—What is interpreted as a grave blow to the Labor party and a step which brings a general election nearer in Great Britain, has come as a result of Labor's definite refusal of a flat demand by the Liberal party to support their legislation. The House of Commons on Friday rejected the Proportional Representation Bill by a vote of 298 to 144, despite the fact that H. S. Asquith, Liberal leader, had written MacDonald asking the Laborites to support the bill.

Arthur Henderson, Labor's Home Secretary, announced that the Government would leave the bill to a free vote, namely, that it would not instruct the Laborites how to vote on the measure. The defeat followed.

It is generally considered that the Liberals and Laborites have parted company as a result of the vote, and after the passage of the budget the Liberals will obstruct Laborite legislation.

Then when they consider that the proper moment has come, they will join the Conservatives in defeating the Labor party and forcing a general election, according to the general belief.

During the discussion Friday a Liberal member interrupted Henderson with the cry, "All right, go on with it." Henderson defiantly answered, continuing, "It does not help in governing if, when a Government fails to take a certain course this threat is hung over it. We are governring under circumstances more difficult than those faced by any Government in history." Then in a more conciliatory manner, he explained the reasons why it was impossible for the Government to give the bill official support.

In reality the bill providing for proportional representation in elections was made a test case in order to feel out the Labor sentiment toward the Liberal party.

Nearly 100 Laborites, including some members of the Government, voted against it.

The Liberal party will hold a meeting next week to decide on its course of action.

The budget is so popular that they would not venture to try to defeat Labor until the budget is passed, but after that some definite action will probably be taken. The Liberals will also probably start an active propaganda against the Laborites throughout the country in preparation for a general election, which seems more imminent daily.

Marquis Curzon, speaking at a Conservative mass meeting Friday, said that his party was "preparing with all energy in our power for the struggle that cannot now be long delayed."

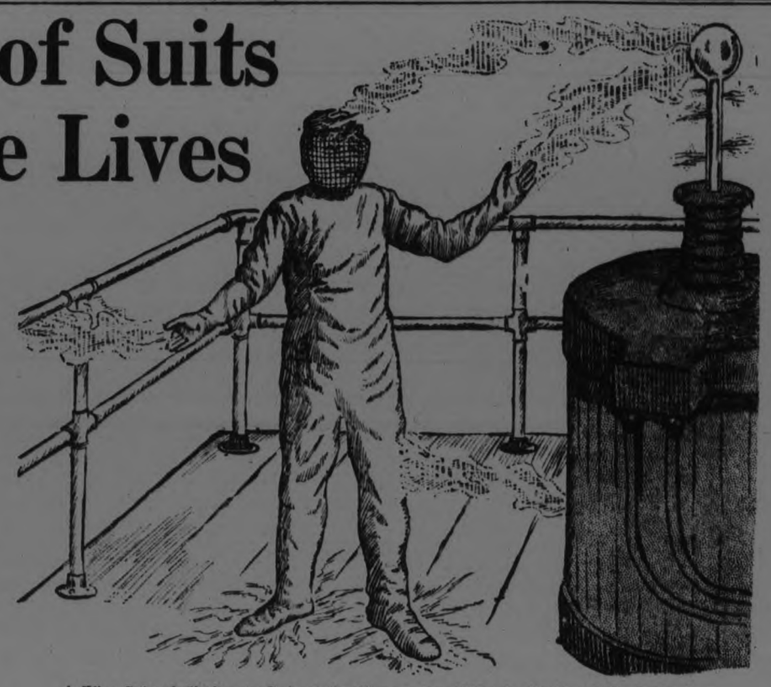
Shock-Proof Suits to Save Lives

HAVE you bought your shock-proof suit yet? Scarcely a day passes without the newspapers containing accounts of accidents among persons who come in contact with high power electric wires and are either killed or badly burned.

Although engineers have been appealed to constantly for some time to devise safeguards against such accidental electrocution, no real progress has been made until now to eradicate the danger, and with high tension on aerial circuits steadily mounting, the condition becomes more acute. When Edison first started his lighting system only 110 volts were used. At the present time 100,000 to 200,000 volt high tension transmission lines are not uncommon, while some of the largest companies announce that the million voltage transmission will be reached in the future.

It has remained for an Italian engineer to solve the difficult protection problem in an astonishingly simple manner. This engineer made experiments with a sort of electric armor shown in the accompanying illustration. As described in Practical Electrics by H. Gernsback, a member of the American Physical Society, it is based upon wire gauze woven into an ordinary cloth from which a suit is made as shown. To be sure the wire comes to the outside by weaving the material in a certain manner, it is made integral with the cloth itself. About 80 per cent of the wire comes to the surface, the remaining 20 per cent metal mesh is merely used to hold the wire fabric to the cloth. The wire mesh is woven to carry a substantial amount of current yet light enough so as not to prevent moving the fingers, etc. The electrician or lineman dons this suit, which covers the entire body, hands and fingers. The action is as follows:

The electric current always takes the path of least resistance. Consequently when the current passes through the electric armor it will pass through the wire mesh much more readily than through the human body, which latter is of considerably higher resistance. With this suit it was possible for the Italian engineer actually to demonstrate that several hundred thousand volts can pass right through this armor without the wearer thereof feeling any sensation whatsoever. It was safe for an operator to hold a pair of pliers in his hands and draw out a spark from a conductor running up to 100,000 volts without feeling anything unusual. When the current was increased over a certain amount the only effect was a slight heat felt below the arm pits, but this was later overcome by reinforcing certain parts of the suit with heavier wire to stand more current.



A Wire Suit of Clothes to Protect the Wearer from Electric Shocks. It Is Perfectly Flexible and Very Easy to Put On and Take Off.

The principle of the action can be demonstrated by placing an electroscope in the center of a bird cage. It is well known that high frequency currents travel only on the outside of conductors. Hence, it is not surprising that even a very sensitive electroscope will not be affected at all when placed in a cage because the high frequency current only travels on the outside. If the cage is taken away the leaves of the electroscope will diverge.

There is still another way to show what happens. An ordinary electric insulated wire is made of a center conductor with the insulation on the outside. If this is reversed and the insulation is put on the inside and the conductor on the outside, precisely the same effect is obtained as in the electric armor.

In order to protect the wearer's face he can wear a wire mesh helmet or veil, which is also made of wire mesh cloth and which does not obstruct vision or good ventilation. At the same time it proves to be a very effective protector. The suit worn by a workman in action is depicted in the accompanying drawing where a man is seen working on a high tension line which may be of 200,000 volts and more. If a flashover occurs the lineman will be none the worse for his experience, unless, of course, the spark is so hot that it would melt the suit. But in any event he would have time to get away without being shocked and thereby avoid losing the use of arms or legs.

The REVIVAL of the WOODCUT

WOODCUTS, after a long period of neglect and even contempt, are once more coming into their own. The art or craft of the wood engraver has been practised in Europe uninterruptedly for about five hundred years, with varying success and changing aims, but it is only recently that artists have recognized in it a means of aesthetic expression as free as etching.

Until the end of the last century, at all events until the beginning of the nineties, woodcuts represented the cheapest and most convenient form of book illustration, so that, when the photographic process block made its debut, professional wood engravers welcomed the new arrival, so little was the aesthetic value of the wood engraver's and wood cutter's craft recognized.

An Example of Modern Wood-Cutting: "Poplars in France." This Cut, from "Modern Wood-Cutters," Was Made by Gwendolen Raverat, Who Is a Granddaughter of Charles Darwin, the Author of "The Origin of Species."

What a woodcut and wood engraving are and what constitutes the difference between them is explained by Herbert Furst in an interesting contribution to the London Graphic.

"Purists object to the indiscriminate use of these two terms," says Mr. Hurst. "The distinction is, however, not always possible, and in any case not as important as the distinction between 'etching' and 'dry-point,' which latter is continually, though wrongly, included in the former category.

"The distinction between etching and metal engraving, on the one hand, and wood-cutting and engraving, on the other, is profound and must be understood by everyone who wishes to enjoy the aesthetic qualities of the wood engraver's craft.

"In metal engraving and etching, including dry-point, the design is engraved, bitten or scratched into the surface of the metal, and the resulting 'print' is the printer's ink, which, remaining in the 'grooves' of the metal, is transferred by pressure to paper. In wood cutting and engraving the surface of the wood is so cut away or hollowed out that only the design remains standing in relief, and the resulting print is the printer's ink transferred by rubbing or pressing to the paper.

"A woodcut is, strictly speaking, a design carved in relief out of a block of wood with a knife. In wood engraving proper, the relief is produced with a graver. Woodcuts are generally carved out of pear or other soft wood sawn plank-wise, that is to say, parallel with the grain, while a wood engraving is generally cut on box or other hard wood sawn across the grain. The principal differences in effect result from the pulling action of the knife and the pushing action of the graver. Occasionally an artist will use the knife on hard wood and the graver on soft wood.

"The wood engraver's craft, which Thomas Bewick developed about the turn of the eighteenth century, aimed at the 'interpretation' of paintings and the translation of drawings into black and white with careful rendering of 'tone' values, and by the end of the last century, the reproduction of the very brush-marks of the oil painter was successfully attempted. To-day the woodcutter and engraver seek to emphasize the character of the material and tools he uses, and has, in consequence, raised an interpretative and reproductive craft into a free and, for that reason, a 'fine' art."

When Your Teeth Get Out of Gear

PYORRHEA is the most talked about dental disease. The older people have it and the younger folks are afraid they will get it.

"Contrary to general opinion, pyorrhea is not inherited," says a writer in the Scientific American. "We inherit types and forms of teeth, and types and forms of jaws. We might also inherit the manner in which teeth are so set in the bones as to be conducive to the formation of a periodontal lesion. The cause is local to every affected region. About 90 per cent of the cases of pyorrhea result from traumatic injury. This injury results from the packing of food between the teeth, from the lack of proper mouth sanitation, from injury to the tissues by the use of tooth picks, and from injury because of traumatic occlusion of the teeth.

"Traumatic injury, which results from the packing of food between the teeth, is due partly to negligence on the part of the patient in not having proper dental operations made to preclude the food from leaking or packing between the teeth, and partly to oversight on the part of the dental operator in not making fillings which will prohibit such injury. This sort of injury, coupled with lack of dental cleanliness, argues well for a speedy loss of the teeth from pyorrheal invasion.

"When the patient's attention is directed to the injury received by the vicious tooth pick habit, that habit is generally corrected.

"Frequently a case of pyorrhea is observed in a patient who has no cavities and few or no fillings. An X-ray examination, however, discloses the fact that an absorption of bone has taken place to such an extent that treatment will be productive of no good or lasting result. The patient in most cases does not recognize that such a bad condition is present until the teeth are loose. It is almost too late then to begin treatment. This destruction of bone surrounding the teeth is caused by a traumatic occlusion.

"After the X-ray examination has disclosed the true condition of the mouth, the operator decides what teeth, if any, should be extracted. After extraction he proceeds skilfully to reshape all the remaining teeth."

SEEKING A "DRY" WATER

PROFESSOR H. BRERETON BAKER, a British chemist connected with the Royal College of Science for several years, has been conducting experiments to find a "dry" water, or to express it in terms of accuracy, a compound of oxygen and hydrogen, having the same formula as water—namely, one part of hydrogen and two parts of oxygen—but without its wetness.

If there is one property peculiar to water, on which all opinions agree, it is its wetness. The two ideas are inseparable. Yet there is at least one man who was prepared to believe in the possibility of making dry water.

Professor Baker thought it might be possible to effect a combination of oxygen and hydrogen which would be water, in that it consisted of one part of the former and two of the latter gas, but would not have the property of wetness.

After years of experiment, characterized by extremely skilful manipulation, however, Professor Baker found no evidence of the existence of dry water.

What he has succeeded in doing, however, as a writer in Conquest (London) explains, was to demonstrate the remarkable fact that oxygen and hydrogen will not combine at all unless a trace of water first be present. Sparking a mixture of the two gases absolutely dry, produced no explosion—and no water. In fact, a button of silver was fused by Professor Baker in an atmosphere of oxygen and hydrogen without the slightest sign of combination. Water cannot be formed except in the presence of water.

This is a bewildering thought. It recalls the ancient question: Which came first, the fowl or the egg? As to how the first water—the germ that was created before all the oceans—was formed we cannot conjecture; nor is the problem of practical import.

Professor Baker's investigations, however, have proved of great and practical interest to science, for they demonstrated conclusively other important facts about the influence of water on chemical change, which only the chemist perhaps appreciates.

Incidentally, the highly artificial degree of dryness obtained in these experiments must have been what is colloquially called "the greatest ever." In this remarkable dryness other strange phenomena occurred. Ammonia and hydrogen chlorid refuse to recognize the marked affinity, which, under normal conditions, makes them combine as ammonium chlorid. Moreover, this compound, which readily splits up again into ammonia and hydrogen chlorid when heated in the ordinary way, failed entirely to dissociate.

Truly, water is a necessary all-pervading wetness—and, at least to the chemist—something more.

How Fear Serves as a Protection

PSYCHOLOGISTS have found that practically every morbid fear can be traced to some childish terror, deeply imbedded, covered up and increased by thousands of associations throughout life. For instance, if a child has been stung by a bee while resting in the arms of a woman wearing a pink waist, it is very understandable that the sight of pink will bring back memories of terror when the bee has been forgotten. Every association with a terrifying experience becomes a separate cause for terror.

Fear always makes a mountain out of a molehill; especially when the fear in its original form is hidden by its associations of pain, and lurks in the recesses of the mind, painting one's life luridly.

Fear of someone following in the dark is very common. Many people trace this to an inherited fear from prehistoric days when it was really dangerous to venture out after dark in such a world of enemies.

Of course some fears are protective. The fear of falling from a height is a protective fear. The man who is afraid of falling from a height will take good care not to go too near the edge, whereas a fearless person may venture too far and fall over. And, in somewhat the same way, the person who is afraid of "falling from grace" is safer that the person who is not.

Explaining the CAUSE of DREAMS

WHAT is the cause of dreams? Why does the brain, which is under control while we are awake, work while we sleep in what seems a wild and irrational way? Scientists give this simple explanation:

If the blood did not continue to circulate while we slept, we should never dream fantastic dreams which puzzle us so much. It is because our blood still circulates through the brain that thoughts, vague and unconnected mostly, must continue to be thrown off and cause what we call dreams.

Our power of thinking, while we are awake, is governed by reflection, and is sound or unsound according to our mental capacity. When asleep, however, this no longer holds, though it is said that persons, who, in their waking hours, habitually keep their minds and fancies under strict control, have far more rational dreams than those whose mental self-control is weak.

The brain, the most sensitive portion of the body, is composed of atoms refined to the very highest degree. In all probability, when science possesses the delicate instruments necessary to explain all atomic nature, it will be found that what is commonly called "gray matter" is akin to the unknown force which produces light.

The ordinary light—which you distinguish from darkness—is, in reality, hardly less artificial than manufactured light. It is produced by a certain force acting upon the ether and transmuting it into light-waves. These light-waves, in their turn, act upon the retina of the eye and enable you to see.

What this force is science cannot exactly say. It is certain, however, that friction is the chief cause operating to produce light, and herein you get the analogy with the human brain. In order to move or "throw off" the atoms of the brain, friction is necessary. That friction is caused by the circulation of the blood, and the more sensitive the quality of the brain, the more easily it responds to the action of the blood circulating through its thousands of small blood-vessels. This is the point where thought is created.

So you dream while you sleep, for the reason that your brain, by virtue of the never-ceasing blood-circulation, continues to throw off its atoms and carries, by force of habit, a jumble of symbols which, not being under control, issue forth wildly, vaguely and unintelligibly, or at least without co-ordination.

Some Marvelous FEATS of MEMORY

THE most marvelous thing in all creation is the mind of man which is capable of performing prodigious feats. For example, Capablanca's feat of playing thirty-five games of chess at once, reveals an extraordinary mental grasp. Those who have seen his play say that he shows great swiftness of decision and his brain seems so constituted that this elaborate and complex game seems quite simple to him.

Taine, the French historian, tells of two American friends of his who used to play chess on an imaginary board while walking down the street.

Great men in other walks of life have also owed much to their exceptional powers of memory. Lord Macaulay could recite all the 7,758 lines of "Paradise Lost." Ben Jonson said he could repeat all that he had ever written and whole books that he had read. Sasaubon wrote of Scaliger, the celebrated French scholar, that he never read anything that he did not remember. In three months he committed to memory all the Greek poets.

Other memory feats of a more mechanical kind are recorded. Hippias, a Greek rhetorician, was able to repeat, in order, a series of 500 words after once hearing them. He was beaten by Seneca, who could retain 2,000 names in order, and repeat the list backwards at will. Themistocles, the Greek general, was able to call by their names the 20,000 citizens of Athens; Cyrus, the Persian Emperor, took pains to learn the name of every soldier in his army. Hortensius, a celebrated Roman orator, after sitting all day at a public sale in Rome, correctly enunciated from memory all the articles sold, their prices, and the names of the purchasers.

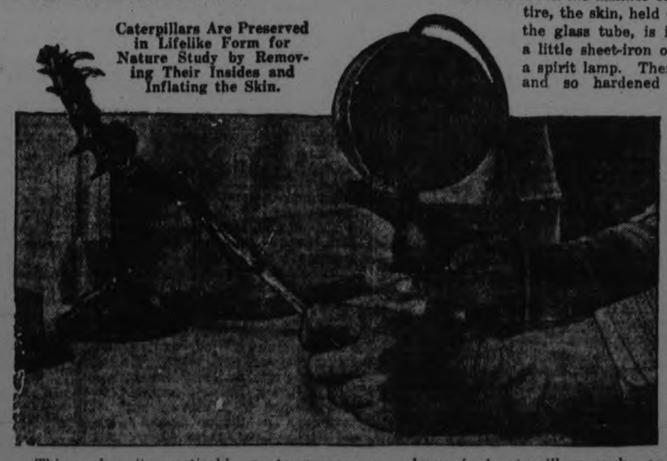
These men had been trained to exercise their memory from their earliest youth, to fit them for public debate in the national assemblies. All these performances, however, remarkable as they are, fall short of the achievements of the once world-renowned Corsican, Guilio Guidi. This young man was a student of law at Padua, where he visited Muretus, a distinguished philologer of the day. Muretus, who had heard stories of his wonderful memory, took the opportunity of putting it to the test. In presence of a large company he dictated words, classical, barbarous, connected and disconnected, until he wearied himself, the writer who took them down, and the listeners—all except the Corsican.

Alert and fresh when Muretus ceased dictating, he repeated every word in exact order.. Beginning with the last, he went over the whole list again; then he gave the first, third, fifth in any order that was asked.

Some painters, too, have had wonderful memories. Gustave Dore painted portraits from memory. Some of the great masterpieces have been copied so accurately from memory that it required careful examination to distinguish them from the originals.

Making the Caterpillar Pneumatic

ONE is accustomed to think of a caterpillar as a rather squashy and easily destructible creature. Perhaps so, in a way. Nevertheless, its skin is of a horny material called "chitine," which is just about the most indestructible substance in nature.



Caterpillars Are Preserved in Lifelike Form for Nature Study by Removing Their Insides and Inflating the Skin.

This makes it practicable so to prepare a caterpillar as to preserve it in a lifelike aspect as an object of nature study or what not. For this purpose its "inside works" are removed, by rolling the caterpillar beneath a lead pencil, squeezing them out so that only the tough and parchment-like skin remains.

A glass tube drawn to a fine point is then introduced into the empty skin. The butt end of the tube is connected with a rubber pipe which terminates in a rubber bulb. When the bulb is squeezed, the skin is inflated with air.

Thus inflated in the manner of an automobile tire, the skin, held on the point of the glass tube, is introduced into a little sheet-iron oven, heated by a spirit lamp. Thereby it is dried and so hardened as to retain its distended shape.

Five minutes in the oven will serve the purpose. It comes out looking like a brand-new caterpillar, permanent like a "perpetual" palm. Its natural coloration is perfectly preserved, and it is proof against decay. Fastened to a twig or artificial leaf, it is lifelike.

The process is best adopted for use with large-sized caterpillars, such as the "tobacco worm," bright green and beautiful, the larva of the allanthus moth, or the "hickory horned devil," six inches long, which feeds on the foliage of hickory trees. Most folks do not appreciate caterpillars, but some of them are really very handsome.

Y.W.C.A. PAGEANT BIG SUCCESS

The 1924 gymnasium pageant of the Young Women's Christian Association had its first appearance in the Grand Opera House last evening. The big building was packed from floor to gallery for the occasion, and there was plenty of applause for a performance that went through from start to finish with a snap and vim that obviated the usual lengthiness of amateur productions. With military precision, the various classes appeared and disappeared in a variety of exercises and dances that made a delightful programme. Under the capable direction of Miss Caroline F. Littlefield, the physical directress at the "Y," the classes (junior and senior) went through their drills and dances in a manner very creditable to themselves and their instructress, whose proficiency in training young girls and young women in physical work was amply demonstrated. Class leaders for the different events were Miss Phyllis Hall and Miss Gertrude Gimblett. Miss Margaret Widdess and Miss Gwen Donley provided splendid piano accompaniments for the drills and dances, with Joseph Nasimok playing the violin and Wilson Dunlop drums and traps.

The programme opened with a processional march, in which all the classes, numbering over five hundred members, from tiny tots to seniors, took part. A few remarks by Mayor J. J. Turner followed, after which the programme was in full swing. The intermediate class, of some fifty six young girls, went through a complicated series of wand exercises in good form. The costumes of these girls, as well as of the members of the various other classes, was the gymnasium suit of dark bloomers with middy blouses crossed by black bandoliers. Sixteen of the members of the advanced class gave a demonstration of Swedish gymnastics that received much applause. Their quick rendition of difficult muscular evolutions and acrobatic feats was a feature of the physical exercise portion of the programme. Miss Littlefield gave commands for this number in military fashion.

Sixty-four little girls of the junior class were in the dumbbell exercise number—a light, quick drill, done in excellent style by the little girls, ranged in eight parallel rows.

A "baby" number that elicited much laughter and applause from the spectators, was the "Peter Rabbit" pantomime by the babies class and junior boys, in which some thirty small things took part. From the orchestra pit entrance, up a run-way to the stage, came little "bunnies," in white flannelette suits, "sleeper" style, with white hoods and pointed ears and tiny black tails. They frolicked about the stage until the hunters appeared small boys in green shiny smocks and red-quill'd Robin Hood hats, carrying shot-guns to shoot the unsuspecting small rabbits, who scampered off finally to the echo of much appreciative enthusiasm.

A group of twenty-six members of the advanced class gave the club swinging exercises, a graceful execution, much enjoyed, and the intermediate class followed with a "rustic courtship" dance. "Tulip Time in Holland," a jolly little number, done in staccato fashion, with accented foot stampings and the advance and retreat of the maidens and their swains. Dutch costumes were worn, the girls in blue, with white caps and yellow 'kerchiefs, the "men" in dark-blue suits, patched with red, and red blouses. Some thirty young ladies took part in this dance.

The Senior School Girls and Senior Class had the reed exercises with 38 young ladies taking part in a series of rhythmic movements, in a skilful exhibition of lithe grace, the pliable reeds describing various circles and semi-circles to the music of the "Spring Song."

Some forty-eight of the Junior Class members did the Sailors Hornpipe in a "Jolly Jack Tar" dance put on by request. This was exceptionally good and was greeted with repeated applause. The light-footed little creatures, in their white sailor suits and caps, with dark ties and collars, gave a swift, lithe dance in effective style.

The second portion of the programme was taken up entirely by dance numbers, given under colored lights, and in costumes that were varied and beautiful, and eminently suited to the different national styles portrayed. Here again was demonstrated in splendid fashion the excellence of Miss Littlefields tuition, and the co-operation of her pupils. The dances were lovely exhibitions of easy, supple grace, and were received with much enthusiastic appreciation.

"Rose of Old Madrid," by about 30 of the members of the Advanced Class, was a pretty Spanish dance, the girls in striking costumes of scarlet flounced skirts, with white blouses, broad black sashes and huge black fans, the "men" in black suits with white blouses, scarlet head kerchiefs, and sashes, and carrying tambourines.

A classic dance, "Greek Maidens at Play," followed, an interpretive, dainty number, by 20 of the members of the Junior Classic dancing class. This was a particularly effective little dance, in which a "play-time" atmosphere was paramount, the prettily-garbed little dancers in pale grey and green draperies, with pink floral hair fillets, doing a skipping rope exercise with big silver balls. The Greek Dance atmosphere was accentuated by the watching chorus of six small girls.

"The Dance of the Leaves" was a very beautiful section of the dance programme, a symbolic, odd, autumnal rendition by 20 of the members of the Senior Interpretive Dancing Class, whose graceful, free movements and upflung white arms, in the pretty whirling mazes, were made especially attractive by their costumes, combinations in autumnal colors of russet, red and moss green gauzes.

The dance programme ended with a Russian suite of four dances. "La Petite Russee" was a little, tip-toe number by six small maidens, of the Special Junior Classic Dancing Section, gowned in miniature national costumes; the Senior School Girls and Senior Class, about 40 in number, had a quick, brilliant number in the Cossack dance, beginning and ending with shill cries, and the Russian Bridal Dance was an odd, well-executed presentation of a Russian wedding ceremony, the bride and bridegroom surrounded by attendants. The delineation of this dance was very good and the costumes were bizarre. Resplendent hues of vivid crimsons and purples, the skirts embroidered in gay, contrasting designs, the head-dresses studded with gems, and the loose fur bordered, were worn. In the other Russian dances, reds and yellows predominated the national types of apparel being faithfully reproduced in very odd and effective fashion.

A descriptive, beautiful close to the Russian suite, and the evenings programme, which terminated at the very satisfactory hour of ten-fifteen, was the unusual Russian Rhapsody, portraying the Spirit of Russia, with 8 members of the Senior Interpretive Dancing Class, taking part in filmy white draperies, crossed by the Russian flag in blue and red. This was a lovely number, executed in splendid style, portraying first the sadness of the old Russia, then changing to a delineation of the various types of the dances of the Russian provinces, including those of Tartary, Georgia and Caucasia. The massed Russian dancers appear on the stage in the finale.

During the evening, Miss Littlefield was presented with a bouquet of roses by the Senior Interpretive Class, the presentation being made by small Gladys Watson.

The pageant will be repeated this evening at the Opera House.

ASK US FOR AN INTERESTING BOOK ON INTERNAL BATHS

Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell always claimed his life was saved by Internal Baths—chronic constipation was his bane.

And after they made him well, they kept him one hundred per cent. well and efficient for many years.

This is not hard to believe when physicians agree that most human ills are caused by accumulated waste in the lower intestine and no medicine has ever been found to keep it free from these poisons.

Dr. Tyrrell's book tells why and how this has been the means of freeing many thousands of progressive Canadians from "that tired feeling," as well as the more serious illnesses which follow if the pernicious poisons are not cleaned out.

Simple warm water, scientifically administered, will take them out and keep them out.

MR. J. H. BURNHAM

Mr. J. H. Burnham sent this morning the following wire to the Chairman of Private Bills Committee, House of Commons, Ottawa:

"Large number here request immediate application of Prohibition to Church Union dispute."

"We feel," said Mr. Burnham to The Examiner, "that church disputes are doing vastly more harm than any direct agency of evil and whilst Prohibition is a denial of the rights of the people it is the only argument many of these fanatics can understand. Ontario is in grave danger of ruin."

Dark Teeth Bleached In Three Minutes

You have always longed for flashing white teeth. And now, at last you can have them — easily, quickly and safely. For scientists have discovered a remarkable new treatment which often in only three minutes bleaches dull dingy discolorations from the teeth, leaving them clear, sparkling white and lustrous. This new treatment called Bleachodont Combination, consists of a mild safe liquid and a new kind of paste. The liquid curdles and softens the stains, while the paste removes them, and if used daily prevents the formation of future stains. You simply brush teeth with a few drops of the liquid—then use the paste. Almost before you realize it, unsightly surface stains disappear and the teeth take on a dazzling new whiteness and lustre. First appliction usually leaves teeth whiter than with ten times the scouring by old-fashioned methods. Bleachodent Combination is harmless—does not affect enamel as its mild ingredients are intended to act only on surface stains—not on enamel itself. Especially beneficial for children's teeth which stain easily. Get Bleachodent Combination today for a few cents. Be sure you ask for Bleachodent Combination. At all good druggists.

Manitoba Farmer Suffered From Backache and Rheumatism, and Found Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Erickson, Man., May 3.—(Special)—"Dodd's Kidney Pills have done me a lot of good. I had suffered for about a year with rheumatism, backache and headaches. After taking two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I felt much better. I continued taking them and now I am quite well and strong again."

Mr. N. David, who lives here, makes the above statement. He feels he owes it to other sufferers to tell them how he got relief from his suffering. He is always ready to say a good word for Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Other sufferers from rheumatism tell of pains relieved and health restored through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

They act directly on the kidneys. They strengthen the kidneys and put them in shape to strain the uric acid out of the blood.

INTEREST CHILDREN IN FLOWER CULTURE

Seeds Supplied by Horticultural Society-Schools Actively Further Scheme

Action is now being taken to enlist the interest of the school children in the planting and cultivation of seeds of flowers and vegetables, by giving them an opportunity of securing membership in the sociey at ten cents, for which a package of seeds of flowers or vegetables will be supplied and a celluloid membership button.

The following choice of flowers and vegetables are given; Asters, marigolds, stocks and zinnias—beet roots, carrots, onions and parsnips.

So that the interest of the society does not cease in supplying the seeds and buttons, arrangements will be made for a flower and vegetable competition to be held at the end of August at which the children will exhibit the products of the seeds supplied by the society. The membership button to be shown entitling the child to exhibit.

This interest of the children horticulture has met with great success in other cities in Ontario and the society believes that it would be to the best interests of the parents to take a personal interest in the project which is taking a great deal of the time of the teachers and principals in the various schools.

Give the Children Their Milk

Time after time it has been shown that undernourished school children improve mentally as well as physically after receiving a suitable milk ration each day. Not only does it bring plumpness and strength to their little bodies, color to their cheeks and the sparkle to their eyes—it also revives their power of concentration to such an extent that they learn more and faster and bring home reports that are a source of pride and pleasure.

Surely health, strength and happiness are the birthright of all children. Who would knowingly deny them the blessings that good milk bestows and the safety that pasteurization throws around the liberal use of this greatest of foods?

Give the children plenty of PASTEURIZED MILK every day.

SOCIAL HYGIENE COUNCIL

(By F. H. DOBBIN)

On Tuesday evening last a general meeing of the association was eld in the board room of the Chamber of Commerce. There was a fair attendance of those interested in the work, and had those who became members, following the interest taken in the exhibit recently shown in the city and the instructive addresses delivered, came forward he room would have been more than crowded.

Dr. N. H. Sutton made verbal report as to the financial results from the attendance at the exhibit, and expressed gratification at being able to report to the central organization in Toronto and to the Provincial Board of Health, that the enterprise had amply repaid its cost and left a handsome balance in the treasury. Nearly 5,000 men and women had attended. The receipts amounted to $405.00, and the expenses to $220.00. The membership had grown to 315, a very tangible evidence of interest taken.

Election of officers for the ensuing year of service was proceeded with. Nominations were offered and from those suggested the following were approved: President, Dr. N. H. Sutton; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. Alex. Mowat; 2nd Vice-President, Dr. A. McNair; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. F. H. Dobbin.

An executive committee was struck, and included the officers and Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Touchburn, Mrs. McCarthy and Mr. Massey-Cook. Certain matters suggested will be considered by the committee, and further on a report will be given to the association.

The President called for suggestions as to what the local Council should undertake in the way of public health betterment. And an enquiry was made as to the effect the inspection of the exhibit and the information given in a public way. Various opinions were expressed, all in the line that a general awakening had resulted. And no doubt all for ultimate betterment.

The President had received from the departmental health authorities a list of undertakings which the local Council might consider and such as which came within the resources of the Council to put forward. One, that a speaker's committee be formed, that would contribute to the several home and school meetings addresses on health and sanitary subjects, such as would instigate interest in these vital propositions, both in the family and in a public way. This suggestion was passed over to the Executive to consider and to act if at all practicable.

To send to the head office for several films along the line of those shown at the exhibit, "The Gift of Life," and such as could be shown to children, to interest young minds in the wonder-things going on around us and contributing to our lives and happiness. These films could be had for the asking, and if some means of showing the same could be devised would lend interest to any address in keeping with the subject.

Also, that meetings be held to which the public would be invited, to be addressed by very clever and well-informed men and women who were giving service throughout the Province. Those who were available were mentioned, showing that such addresses must prove to be of general and wide interest. In this connection a course of popular lectures during the outumn could be arranged for, as a course, at a nominal admission, all highly informative. These would be given at intervals of two weeks. This was passed to the Executive to polish up, whip into shape and report to a general meeting of members.

That the Council should take interest and see as thoroughly as might be possible that legislative measures and local bylaws covering he uses of parks, public places, amusement resorts, movies, etc., were carried on as prescribed by the regulations. A proposed campaign was that against the circulation and disposal of objectionable literature. In the larger cities this menace to public morals was growing in extent, and having a detrimental influence that all in earnest as to its suppression should lend a hand to stamp out.

It having been stated that Lady Foster, wife of Sir George Foster, and who was active in social service work, and who had attended the sessions at the League of Nations, should be secured to address a meeting, further on, telling about social hygiene as defined at the sessions of the league.

Members were invited to inspect the Povincial laboratories, in upper flat of the City Building, and view what was being done in the way of health activities for the prevention and elimination of contagious diseases, and treatment as suggested as result of much investigation. Dr. McNair is in charge of this institution, and Dr. Sutton, as Provincial Officer of Health for the district, and who is located in the same premises, will be glad to meet visitors.

The Executive will consider the purchase of a film lantern, or other means of displaying slides and films on public health subjects. Much of this variety of information is now available at most moderate expense once the means for display is at hand. Such an instrument could be made a means of much interest and instruction at the home and school meetings and other public gatherings.

The meeting adjourned, to meet at the call of the Executive.

TRAINING OF HOMERS.

It Must Be Thorough if Pigeons Are to Fly Well, Experts Say.

Thorough training is an essential as breeding in the successful management of homing pigeons, according to a United States Department of Agriculture bulletin. Only a little training should be given at a time and this thoroughly learned before longer flights are attempted. It is very important that pigeons have complete confidence in their trainer. Their future performance depends greatly on the care and attention they receive when reaching home. Home to the racing pigeon must mean the place where it gets good attention and plenty of food.

To make a success of the flying of homing pigons it is important to procure stock that has performed well in competitive flights. It does not pay to breed from stray birds of unknown parentage, as it takes about three years to determine the qualifications of a good homing pigeon for a 500-mile flight. Select a pigeon which has a good, broad skull, a long face and a V-shaped beak, says the bulletin. There is no standard color for homing pigeons, and this feature is not considered in selection or breeding except that white birds are undesirable because they can be readily seen by hawks. The body conformation of the bird greatly influences the distance it can fly, the long-keeled birds being better adapted for long flights and the short-keeled one for short flights.

Close breeding is not advisable. A strong constitution and plenty of vigor are absolutely essential in the selection of flying pigeons, and all matings should be with these characteristics in mind, experts assert.

MASS OF DETAIL GIVEN TO JUDGE

Argument Concluded In Red Arrow Tires Case and 68 Exhibits and 63 Precedents Left in the Hands of Mr. Justice Wright.

Argument in the case of Hayes versus J. J. Turner, G. A. Gillespie, J. R. McDonald and P. P. Westbye concluded at 5.30 yesterday evening after argument by four counsel. Mr. Justice Wright said he could not promise an early judgment, in view of the mass of evidence and authorities.

In this action, which opened at 1 o'clock on Monday, there were twenty-one witnesses, some of whom were recalled a second or third time, exhibits numbered sixty-eigh, and the evidence ran into about eight hundred pages. In their argument the counsel cited for His Lordship's consideration sixty-three decisions, all more or less lenghy. Mr. Hall named thirty-four; Mr. Parmenter, twenty; Mr. F. D. Kerr, eight, and Mr. W. F. Kerr, one.

Mr. Hall presented his argument yesterday forenoon, and Mr. Parmenter succeeded him. Late in the afternoon Mr. Kerr opened his address.

Commenting on the transactions between the parties, Mr. Kerr said that if there was anything illusory it was the method of Hayes in saying he all this time depended on the company when as a matter of fact he shrewdly recognized the merits of the case and tied up to the banker. He tendered, apparently in good faith, and the company, in good faith, accepted the tender, and it is revealed in this action that Stockdale, the wealthy magnate, had covenanted with him to give Hayes the difference between $120,500 and $127,000 if Hayes could not get it from the company. Later when Stockdale had been going through criminal courts Hayes decided he had tied to wrong string and entered this action on a technical breach of a statute against four upright directors.

Hayes' contract was entirely with Stockdale. The intent of the directors' liability, if any, was only up to the time when Hayes in the ordinary course of business should have signed a contract with them.

Mr. W. F. Kerr pointed out that payment in cash was not required for stock, citing cases. He also alluded to the practical evidence given by the defence expert compared with the theoretical evidence of the two plaintiff experts.

Mr. Hall contended in reply that up until 10 per cent. of the authorized capital had been subscribed and paid the company could not legally take money's worth for stock shares.

Walters only submitted to examination, Mr. Hall said, after he had realized that the aid of the United States authorities could be invoked, and had given his evidence in a hostile attitude throughout.

A NOVEL CONTEST FOR THE CAPITOL

Eleven Prizes For Best Free Hand Sketches of Film Star.

In connection with the forthcoming showing of Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, "Girl Shy," at the Capitol Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Manager J. C. Kennedy of the Capitol announces a big new and novel contest for children under the age of fifteen.

The face and the famous goggles of the popular star are well known to every lover of clean comedy and real laughter, and the Capitol offers eleven prizes to the children who can make the best free-hand sketches of the head and shoulders of Harold Lloyd.

The first prize is $2.50, second prize $1.50 and the third prize $1; ten consolation prizes, consisting of a pass to see Lloyd in his latest comedy, "Girl Shy," will also be offered. The contest is now open and sketches should be mailed or handed in at the Capitol Theatre, addressed to "Harold Lloyd Contest Editor." The last day for receiving is next Tuesday. Contestants must mark their name and address and age clearly on the lower right hand corner of the drawing they submit.

The Capitol has arranged with Miss McRae, art teacher in the Public and Normal Schools, to act as judge and select the winners. It is expected that hundreds of children will send in drawings of the comedian, and all the Harold Lloyd pictures will be exhibited in a window in a leading downtown store during the showing of "Girl Shy," next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Fund Proposed For Old Sam Langford.

NEW YORK, May 2. — Johnny Dundee, the world's featherweight king, has agreed to place his throne within the reach of any contender the State Athletic Commission selects.

This agreement was reached this afternoon after a conference between Charles Johnston, Dundee's manager, and the State Commission.

James J. Johnston, representing the National Sportsmen's Alliance sought permission to stage a benefit bout for Sam Langrod, the veteran colored light heavyweight, who is almost blind. The commission countered with a plan to establish a permanent fund for such purposes and agreed to aid any such movement started by the Association.

ROSENEATH W.M.S. ELECTED OFFICERS

Arrangements Made For Convention in Roseneath This Month—A Farewell Dance.

ROSENEATH, May 3.—The regular April meeting, which was also the annual meeting of the W.M.S. of the Methodist Church which had been postponed for a week on account of the yearly thank offering not being held Easter Sunday, was held recently. This had been unavoidable as there had been union services in the Presbyterian Church. There were over 20 members present and the meeting was held in the Fenella Sunday School room. It was quite lengthy as there were several important matters for discussion, as well as the election of officers for the next year.

There were several questions in regard to the district convention to be held in May. Mrs. G. Ingham was appointed as delegate with Mrs. C. W. Varcoe as alternative, to represent this auxiliary at the branch meeting to be held in Port Hope in June.

It was moved by Mrs. Davey, seconded by Mrs. Knox, that Mrs. D. Brishin, the corresponding secretary, give the report of this auxiliary at the convention. Mrs. Walsh said that Mrs. Roberts (the district president) had asked her to take charge of the devotional exercises in the morning and she, Mrs. Walsh, thought it would be wise to have an assistant, and on motion of Mrs. Knox and Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Jibb, of Fenella, was appointed to assist Mrs. Walsh. It was then moved by Mrs. Turner, seconded by Mrs. (Rev.) Dodson, that Mrs. Nill, of Bethany Church, give the address of welcome.

Much discussion followed about the tables, and the menu for the dinner. It was finally decided to set tables in the Orange Hall.

Mrs. D. Brisbin, Mrs. Davey and Mrs. Turner were appointed a committee to arrange for the cooking by the members. Mrs. G. Ingham, Mrs. C. W. Varcoe, Mrs. Davey and Mrs. Turner were appointed to supervise arrangement of the tables.

The different officers gave their reports, including the president and recording secretary. Mrs. D. Brisbin, the corresponding secretary, gave her report, and also that of the treasurer whose work she had finished since Mrs. Harper's removal a short time ago. The reports were all very satisfactory and showed a general increase of unds and members. During the year, Mrs. G. Ingham had been made a life member and a bale of clothing and six quilts were sent to the missionary in the west. Mrs. Walsh, the leader of the Mission Band, presented her report, which showed 44 members on the roll. They had sent $36 to the branch and had made a quilt which was sent along with the W.M.S. bale.

The following are the new officers elected: President, Mrs. Geo. Ingham; 1st vice-president, Mrs. J. Knox; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. T. Arthur; 3rd vice president, Mrs. A. Nill. Strangers' Committee—Mrs. W. Smith, Mrs. O. E. Varcoe, Mrs. H. Macklin, Mrs. F. Talling. Treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Varcoe; Christian stew., Mrs. (Rev.) Walsh; superintendent, 'Outlook', Mrs. Fred Sherwin; superintendent Mission Band, Mrs. N. Sherwin; assistant superintendent Mission Band, Miss B. A. Clarke; superintendent mite boxes, Mrs. Montgomery, and Mrs. Chas. Macklin, Mrs. Turner, Miss Verna Timlin; superintendent Good Cheer Fund, Mrs. Hugh Sherwin.

ONTARIO MINING COURT IS DOOMED

TORONTO, May 3.—The mining court of Ontario, established by legislation of the Ontario House at its past session, faces disallowance at the hands of the Federal government. Advice which the Provincial government has received from Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minster of Justice in the Mackenzie King Cabinet is to the effect that because of feature which was itself inserted at the instance of Federal Government, Ontario legislation cannot be concurred in, nor can enabling legislation needed from Ottawa to make it effective be granted. Point upon which Mackenzie King Government is insisting in order that its approval may be obtained is that the Ontario bill should specify the salary for mining court judge and concede the right of appointing him to Federal cabinet.

Impasse to which this stand of the Federal government brings the province with one of its most important legislation projects is serious. Even should the province be willing to concede to Ottawa the right of mining judges appointment, the project for mining court would be held up for over a week, as the Act creating the court cannot now be amended until another session of the Ontario House. It is exceedingly doubtful, however, if the province would be willing to have mining judge appointed by Ottawa.

THE DELICATE GIRL

If growing girls are to become well-developed, health women, their health must be carefully guarded. Mothers should not ignore their unsettled moods or the various troubles that tell of approaching womanhood. It is an important time of life. Where pallor, headache, backache or other signs of anaemia are evident you must provide the sufferer with the surest means of making new blood.

Remember, pale bloodless girls need plenty of nourishment, plenty of sleep, and regular open-air exercise. But to save the bloodless sufferer she must have new blood—and nothing meets the case so well as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills increase the supply of new, red blood; they stimulate the appetite and relieve the weary back and limbs; thus they restore health and charm, and bring to anaemic girls the rosy cheeks and bright eyes of strong, happy girlhood.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SOCIAL WRONGS AND BOBBED HAIR

By ALICE ROHE

NEW YORK (United Press) May 3.—Taking the wrong sort of person to a play is worse than taking ice cream with cucumbers or combining majenta and pink. It upsets you.

That's why, when the Theatre Guild's "Man in the Masses" (Mass Mensch), which I had been breathlessly anticipating, was produced, I was a bit "choosy" as to my companion. A tragedy of the social revolution, written in prison by Ernst Toller, one of the three leaders of the Spartacide revolution in Munich, would be the real stuff! The projected protests of an imprisoned man in dramatic form would be a psychological event.

Judged from that point of view it was. Psychological effects were as rampant as symbolism and expressionism. One of the most striking was the silent, purposeful, wave-like exodus of the audience at the fall of the final curtain, before even the lights were up. Never have I seen a theatre emptied so hurriedly—and in darkness! Of course, Theatre Guild premiere audiences are to the manner born. Aside from the "intellectuals," the boxes were dotted with millionaire patrons of the arts. They must have been strangely impressed by "Th

Women'e grotesque disforted dream scene of the stock exchange, with its bankers fattening on human flesh!

Triumph of Lighting

The production, designed and directed by Lee Simonson, was a triumph of lighting. There were scenes like that of the stock exchange, the workers' stockade, macabre dance, the meeting hall of the revolutionists, with its colorful grouping, the unforgetable cracked voice of the woman raised in the Marseilles that were powerful and compelling. But there is nothing new in the visualization of arguments over the conflict between individual and masses. And certainly it isn't good theatre.

The only fault I have ever found with my super-intelligent theatre companion is that she is stone-deaf to the voice of social conscience. Her only comment about the factory wrongs was that those things weren't true of America. Then, to my great embarrassment, her crude sense of nationalism burst out with: "Aren't there enough good Americans to play those parts without having Ben-Ami and Ulrich Haupt's inarticulate pronunciation make the play still more difficult to understand?"

When The Woman (Blanche Yurka) began to accuse God, I had to hang on to my horrified friend and assure her that it would all come out right in the end. For, even though I have decided ideas on capital and labor, I am sufficiently reactionary to believe God should not be assailed.

Toward the latter part of the tragedy I became hopeful of my companion. She seemed thrilled. Her eager and intelligent face was aglow with a great light. Her blue eyes were dark with the intensity of concentrated attention.

No! It Isn't

She held the opera glasses riveted on the stage. She caught her breath ecstatically and leaned toward me, trembling with emotion.

"Oh, it isn't!" she said, in a shaking voice.

"What?" I whispered, astir with having moved her to a realization of the great cosmic struggle.

"It isn't bobbed," she trembled.

For two weeks she had been soliloquizing over Life's great problem: "To bob or not to bob."

"See," she insisted, "it's done in a little, tight knot and gives the same effect. Now I won't. So that's that."

And so, speaking of the social revolution—that's that!

TOWERS OF FAME

This story was acclaimed the best work of less than 3000 words by judges of the O. Henry Memorial of the Society of Arts and Sciences for 1923. It was originally published by McClure's.

BY ELIZABETH IRONS FOLSOM.

He raised his voice to bar interruption.

"You cann tell anything about any one. Romance survives where you least expect it. Would you look for it in Eric Hall, for instance? Would you suspect him of Romance?"

"Well, hardly," said one of the listeners. "Not that calculating, cold man—all indifference. Just to make your point, don't try to prove that he has known sentiment."

"More than most men," replied Kent. "I have a notion to tell you about him. I will tell you. Come closer, Janet—all of you—to hear the unbelievable."

"About Judge Eric Hall who knows only power—fame!" They laughed.

"Yes, about him."

"How do you happen to know?"

"He told me."

"Did he expect you to tell?"

"Heaven knows what a man expects when he babbles."

Dinner was over; coffee was being served in the big, candle-lit drawing room. The guests had made little intimate groups; some one at the piano at the far end of the room touched half strains between talk and laughter. The group in the deep window drew closer to Kent, and made themselves comfortable.

"'Babbles' is what I said," went on the speaker, rolling a cigarette with deliberation, "but that is the wrong word. We were old friends: in fact, I was responsible for the whole thing, for I had talked about the queer town in one of the Middle Western states. Eric is the kind who always wants to know, so when he happened to be in that part of the state, he hired a car and drove out to see for himself."

"I've heard of that town," declared Janet eagerly. "There is no other like it, is there?"

Kent passed over the question.

"I'll tell it exactly as he told me. I'm sure I can. I could not forget it. He had driven ten miles through dust and wind with a thunderstorm rolling up ahead of him—purple storm with green fringe on it—the kind they have out there. He was whacking along when he caught sight of a sign by the roadside. He stopped and backed his car to read it. It said—I remember it exactly—it said:

Smoking, Drinking, Profanity, Forbidden As You Pass Through This Town.
You Have No Right To Pollute The Air.
Most People Are Bad. Most People Lie, Steal and Drink.

"Oh! Truly!" gasped Janet.

"It was what Eric was looking for—the entrance to the town of fanatics. There was a blank-looking group of houses marked at intervals by tall, white board signs—black letters on a white ground. He drove slowly. It was Sunday and the stillness was absolute. There was a building that might be a hotel—on the veranda were vacant chairs tilted against the rail; a few shops, gray with closed doors; houses gray, too, all with doors shut tight, curtains madeto screen. The main street, three or four blocks long, was deserted. At a far corner a man appeared, took a look at the coming car, and stepped out of sight. A woman who came out on her porch, slipped back, and shut the door sharply. She was gray, too—clothes and hair; the distant man had seemed gray—a brown-gray, like the dust that whirled.

"He stopped the car again to read another sign, this one as large as a house front, full of preachments, repeating the words that he had first read:

Most People Are Bad. They Lie, Steal, and Drink.
No Outside People or Institutions Wanted Here.
The Dance Is Of The Devil. The Theatres Are Devil-Begotten.

"And again:

Most People Are Bad. They Lie, Steal, and Drink.

"As he stood reading, he was conscious that men had appeared in the streets ahead and behind him. They fitted the houses—brown-gray, closed shut tight. They walked slowly, eyes on the ground, but, as they passed him, he had a look from each. The looks were alike: ominous—hate snapped out at him from under briefly raised lids. Each face had a set mouth, with slashes down from its corners. Each head that turned slightly had—menace—hostile promises.

"The storm was breaking: a flash of lightning swept down the street; thunder crashed; for a moment the wind ceased—it hung aloof and the calm was thick with the brown-gray of the town—with deep silence. A desert plain, a skiff alone on the ocean, would have been more friendly, he said."

"Where is the Romance?" some one asked, as Kent stopped.

"It's at hand. It crossed the street in front of his car just as the wind came tearing like a railroad train. He saw her face for an instant before it caught her. Well, folks—I can't tell you how Eric spoke of her face. He forgot that he had ever seen a court room or a law office, or had known indifference or ambition. He said to me—I can see him as he rapped the table and forgot he was speaking—'The face of that girl, Kent!' And—can you believe it of Eric?—he went on: 'Do you remember Raphael's peasant girl? The one with parted lips and queer, asking eyes? She was exactly like her. The wind took her sunbonnet away. She had two long braids of hair. She stopped and stared at me, her long, brown-gray skirt twisting about her little flat shoes. Then she ran on, clutching her braids, and a near door slammed after her.'

"The wind was on then; the few trees bent before it.

"The rain was close. There was no protection and, acting on impulse, he drove the car back of the huge sign. It was a shield from the wind and a slight protection against the slanting rain.

"Eric said it had been years since he had seen a Western storm, where it lets loose and whoops 'er up. He was half blinded with the lightning; he could hear the smash of small buildings; the rattling scurry of debris blown by the wind. His own shelter shivered, creaked. It was braced strongly from the back, but he thought it more than likely that it would go. Across the street he heard one go down with a splitting thud.

"But as he waited, he was conscious, he said, only of the girl who was somewhere in that strange town. I'd like to have had you—you people who think you know Eric—watch him as he told me this. There was not a drop of blood in his body, to judge from the color of his face; his fingers twitched. He talked because he had to talk to some one, I guess. He was not self-sufficient just then."

"Hm-m," said some one. "I don't get him in that role, and still I do, too, in a way: the force in him could be applied as well to an—er—infatuation as to anything else. I suppose it was an infatuation, eh, Kent? They are strange things, but they wear off."

"Go on," said Janet.

"He said that he sat there in the car while the wind bent his board protection and the rain came in sheets. He was wet through from the spray where it struck the outer edge of the car. He sat and watched pictures of that girl's face: they came through the rain; came into the lightning; came everywhere. He was half conscious, he said, aborbed in the new thing.

"Out of that state of mind—he told a lot about that; it seemed to puzzle him as it does us now—he was startled by a new gale of wind, a close splitting of boards, the shriek of wood parting from wood at his elbow; and then the whole great shield tottered, swayed, resisted, swayed again, and came down over him. He ducked his head. A moment later he discovered that, in falling, the sign had gone into some trees standing close and was held there, in half-tent fashion, so that it protected him from the rain. Then he saw, too, some one clinging to the slanting edge of the shield. He leaped from the car and caught her as she fell.

"Her clothes were dripping with water; there was a trickle of blood down one cheek. But she was not unconscious and she struggled in his arms. He made her sit down on the running board of the car. Then he asked her how she happened to be there back of the sign and she shook her head again. He sat down beside her and watched her. He spoke to me about 'filling his eyes with her for the rest of his life'—and other things that Eric would not have said normally—or if he had not been—er—infatuated. That was the word, wasn't it?

"They sat there a long time without speaking, and she kept her eyes closed. The wind died away, but the rain persisted—a steady downpour; the green-gray of the storm daylight changed into the black-gray of steady rain. He waited.

"When she opened her eyes, he asked again how she happened to be there. After much urging she answered him.

"'They turned me out of the house,' she said.

"'Turned you out!' he repeated, incredulously. 'In this storm! From your home! Why? What had you done?'

"'I had stopped and looked at you,' she answered simply.

"'What?' Eric put force into the word when he spoke it.

"'I had looked at you. Stopped and looked. It was a sin. After that, I could not be allowed to live with those who were not sinners,' she explained.

"'I never heard of such a thing!' he told her. 'Are they crazy?'

"'The signs tell you. It is their belief. It was a sin to have looked at you—and remembered.'

"Eric's blood was racing: she had remembered! Looked at him, and remembered.

"'Don't worry. Just tell me,' he urged.

"She told him. He did not tell me just what she said, but I could guess as I watched the light back in his eyes. Her father had opened the door and put her out in the rain as a wanton. He was very strict—father. As soon as the rain was over she would go to the other end of town where she had a friend who would take her in. No, she did not believe as her father and the people of the town believed; her mother had taken her away and she had been brought up differently, but when the mother had died, he had brought her back.

"'My mother could not bear it here,' she said. 'I am not so brave as she, or I would go.'"

"Go on," said Janet again.

"It's a good story, isn't it? Especially since we have our own opinions concerning him. No king of lovers, no Romeo, no schoolboy, could have told such a tale of first love as Eric told me. Spilled it out. Words tumbling over each other.

"In one look, in one half hour, it seemed, he had turned over all the principles upon which we live here in New York. The primal had taken him—and her, too. She was not afraid; not frightened at what she must have seen in him.

"'And why, when he turned you out, did you come in here?' he asked finally.

"He had never before listened for an answer as he listened for that one.

"'I came because you were here,' she said.

"Well, people—I began to see then what he was up against in the way of intoxication. He had not touched her; it had been all very aloof, but when she told him why she had come, he said he would have been wooden if he had not gathered her close and held her tight.

"Then, through the slackening rainfall, he heard footsteps outside their shelter, heard them on the soft ground close by, saw a stooped figure straighten under their tipped roof. It was one of the all-alike brown-gray men with jammed-shut mouth and slashes down from it; with hate-filled eyes.

"This man levelled his finger at Eric. 'Now ye kin have her,' he sail harshly. 'Ye kin take her along o' ye. There's no door open in this town for such as her. They're shut against her for ever. This is no place for her ever again. We're done. All o' us.'

"She sprang forward. 'Father!' she cried.

"He struck her with his open hand straight across the mouth.

"'Harlot! Plaything o' strange men!' he accused, scornfully.

"Eric said that he reached for the man, but that she spread her arms between them.

"'No!' she exclaimed. 'He believes it! He cannot help it. No, no!'

"The man did not speak again. He stopped under the slanting boards and went away.

"And now comes what Eric says was the strangest part of it—the way he took it. Back of the glamor of the girl's lovely face; back of the pull of her, standing there in the slackening rain holding her wet skirts about her, her neck bare; back of the wonder of her, there rose a bank of his sane self—that self indifferent to all else. There towered a steeple of his future as he had planned it; of his ambitiouns; of his wealth and fame which were just beginning and for which he had worked hard. They grew—these steeples—and pushed closer. The girl watched him.

"She had not spoken to him since her father had gone away; she had stood aside aside while Eric got the car out upon the road; she had followed him to it and stood there clasping her bare elbows—lips parted like the Raphael girl-child, he said. She was oblivious to watchers ehind drawn curtains.

"'Now what shall you do?' he asked her. 'Does he mean it?'

"'Yes, he means it. I shall walk to the next town. There will be something for me to do there.'

"'I'm sorry——' he began, all the steeples crowding around him.

"'Don't be. I'm glad. It gives me a chance to be brave as she was.'

"She put up one hand to her mouth and pressed her lips tight with it.

"'It's odd, isn't it?' she asked.

"He says he did not need to ask what was odd. He knew. It was the sudden new thing which was his—and hers. But the steeples were nearer. And a free life was what he had planned; it alone could bring him what he wanted. But he asked:

"'Will you come with me, as he said?'

"She shook her head.

"'Oh, no. I am not your kind.'

"'But I love you,' he told her then. You should have heard him speak those three words, the day he told me the story. Another man, surely—not the Eric we know. He said it twice: 'I love you.'

"'And I you,' the girl replied.

"'Then come with me,' he pleaded.

"'No. It will pass. It cannot be the real thing. It was too quick for that.'

"She smiled, and [illegible] and say, without too much earnestness:

"'Shall I come back some day?'

"She shook her head again.

"'Please don't.'

"He climbed slowly into the car, legs weighted, he said. He looked back as he gathered speed on the hard road. She was walking too slowly it seemed to him—her head too low——

"But everywhere were the steeples of fame and fortune to come if he were unhampered; if he could be always indifferent. The west had red streaks—He drove away."

"Oh, I hate the man!" cried Janet, indignantly. "It's just like him! What became of her?"

"There she is now, at the end of the room," said Kent, smiling at the evident astonishment of the group around him.

Eric Hall's wife was lifting her coffee cup and laughing. Her filmy sleeves fell away from perfect arms; a jewel flashed from a tiny silver band in her hair. She was clearly the loveliest, the most distinguished woman there.

They stared at her.

"But you just said that he drove away!" some one exclaimed in amazement. "That was the drama of your story!"

"He drove back and got her," finished Kent sententiously.

(THE END)

THAW IS RELEASED UNDER KEEPER'S CARE.

Decree Permits Him to Visit His Mother Until "Further Orders of the Court."

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—Harry K. Thaw received Judge Monaghan's permission to leave the Pennsylvania Hospital for Mental and Nervous Diseases until "further orders of the court."

The Judge, in the formal decree, gave Thaw permission to visit his 82-year-old mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, at her home in Pittsburgh, in the cusody of the keeper, Joseph Connelly, who has been attending him at the hospital.

Soon after Judge Monaghan issued the decree releasing him word was flashed to Thaw at the hospital, and he made plans to leave the institution immediately. He ordered his luggage packed quickly and left the hospital with Connelly a little before 3 o'clock and appeared at the Garrick Theatre just before the close of the matinee this afternoon.

The ticket man did not wish to sell him tickets, telling him that the performance was two-thirds over.

"I know that," Thaw said. "Give me the tickets."

He and his companion then took their seats.

Thaw, who was recently declared sane by a jury before Judge Monaghan, is under the court's jurisdiction pending decision on an appeal for a retrial of the case, presented by William A. Gray, counsel for Evelyn Nesbit, Thaw's divorced wife, who opposed his fight for freedom.

"This man is not being released to wander at liberty, but will be in the custody of his keepers at all times," Judge Monaghan declared in granting the decree.

The decree came as a resul of a petition filed with Judge Monaghan in Common Pleas Court 5 yesterday by ex-Judge John M. Patterson, Thaw's counsel.

Judge Patterson, in filing the petition, explained that Thaw wished to familiarize himself with the details of his estate business which he will conduct if the motion for a retrial is denied.

FABLES ON HEALTH

BABY NEEDS FRESH AIR.

When the Mann Baby let loose its first wail, Mr. Mann of Anytown looked nervously about.

But the doctor quickly assured him.

"The first cry of a child is for air," explained the physician, "and after that it's up to you to satisfy the baby's air hunger.

"Immediately after birth a child is in need of air to meet the demand of expanding lungs. That first lusty cry is one of the most important it ever will make."

A copious supply of fresh air in the baby's room is extremely necessary at all times. In winter months the window can be raised but a window board should be used, allowing the fresh aid to trickle in between should be secured, the temperature should be about 65 during the first months and not lower than 55 during the later months of the first year.

Few people realize that an open fireplace is a good medium for air circulation.

During summer months window should be open from both top and bottom. In the hot seasons it is particularly necessary that the baby be exposed to air currents, particularly as a means of preventing heat stroke.

Finally, fresh air helps prevent colds.

BE SURE THE BABY GETS PLENTY OF IT.

Brings Strength and Vigor When Mother Most Needs It

WHAT joy there is in the home when baby arrives.

What a relief after months of anxiety.

Now the mother looks forward to returning strength and vigor.

But oftentimes this is slow in coming and the weeks drag on until the strain brings depression and discouragement.

So many mothers have written to us about the great benefit they have obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food under these conditions that we cannot refrain from passing along the good words.

Since prevention is always the better way it is wise to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food during the expectant period as well as after baby comes.

By so doing the blood is kept rich, the nerves steady and the general health is kept at high water mark all through this trying time.

Then after baby's advent you quickly pick up strength and know the joy of healthful motherhood.

Mrs. H. McClure, Norwood, Ont. writes:

"After my baby was born I was terribly weak and run down, with a weak, painful feeling across my back. I had heard so much of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that I decided to try it, and before very long I began to feel stronger. Three boxes proved enough to make me quite strong and well again. I also used Dr. Chase's Ointment, for a rash which broke out on the baby and it worked wonderfully—the rash disappearing completely in a short time."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 60 cents a box of 60 pills, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

Before You Invest, Investigate

In an effort to become wealthy, men and women lose millions of dollars each year in "get rich quick" schemes. They do not sufficiently investigate.

Out of each hundred dollars "invested," the portion that is put into life insurance does good work, because 87% of estates have only life insurance to show in the end. Most people find it impossible to create an estate in any other way.

If all were to learn this lesson early in life, the comfort and success of many families would be vastly improved. Why not secure all you can of Life Insurance,--the safe, scientific method of building an estate?

HEARTS AFIRE

by May Christie

The Brilliant Novelist of Modern Society

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY:

Prudence Page—a pretty country girl has awakened from a brief and unhappy love affair with unreliable

Bert Traymore—a fascinating philanderer, guest at the home of

Mrs. Vansittart—wealthy woman, who owns Winston Towers, a charming country home. Another of her guests is

Virginia Dale—a blase beauty, who sees a rival in Prudence, and who has set her mind on capturing

Peter Armstrong—a clever young inventor, much attracted to Prudence. The latter goes to New York, is caught in a fire and taken to hospital. Peter comes to see her, but the arrival of Bert Traymore leads Peter to think that Prudence cares for Traymore, and not for him.

Virginia, meantime, thrown herself on Peter's chivalry, saying he must marry her, as he has involved her in a scandal by having her in his cottage on the night of the thunderstorm.

Prudence, returning to her home in the country, and knowing nothing of this, awaits the coming of Peter.

She hears that he is engaged to Virginia.

Peter tells her he hopes she will be happy with Traymore!

CHAPTER IX

A Spray of Honeysuckle

A hot contradiction rose to Prudence's lips, but pride held it back.

Happy with Bert Traymore?

Peter thought he could dispose of her as easily as that!

A recollection of the long, enchanted kiss . . . a kiss of love . . . love on her side, but not on his! . . . rose up to goard her pride to silence.

He thought her that sort of a girl, did he? To go straight from his kiss to a lover's arms?

Well, let him think it!

Let him go to Virginia Dale, shallow and vain and insincere, and try and find this elusive happiness he craved! Virginia was the will-o'-the-wisp he wanted . . . how stupid not to have understood his metaphor!

So prudence, her heart hot with outraged pride and indignation, held her peace when Peter wished her happiness with Traymore.

"I must be going in. It's late." With an effort, she held her hand out towards him.

Either he didn't see it, or deliberately he ignored it.

"What a night for . . . lovers!"

Did he mean to torture her?

Her dry lips uttered:

"Then you ought to be away from here."

He took no notice of the innuendo. He had lifted the spray of honeysuckle to his lips, and was drawing it gently across them, as though he loved the feel of it.

"Such a fitful fever life is!" He looked down at the tinkling stream that babbled by the roadside. "Seeking . . . questing passionately . . . and never finding! . . . Oh, to be at peace!"

In the woods the nightingale was singing madly. That song of love was like a knife in Prudence's heart.

"What's the good of it all?" he went on, as though talking to himself alone. "What's the good of all its striving, and the work, and fret? Where does it lead us? To the green, Elysian fields where we shall find that mystic happiness we crave? . . . Ah no! never in this disappointing world! . . . never until we get the long, long rest . . under the wide and starry sky."

Prudence felt the hot tears welling in her eyes, and turned her head aside for there was something strangely disquieting in hearing these intimate things from a man's lips.

"Beauty . . . born to trouble the hearts of men!" he was muttering now, as though unaware of her presence. Then, lifting his face that was like fine ivory in the clear, pale light, and gazing into the deep blue heavens: "Oh, moon of my desire that knows no wane!"

Prudence found her voice. It came, soft and low, like a woodland breeze.

"Why are you so unhappy, when you . . . love?" Despite her own pain, she could pity him, who loved—and so evidently was tortured by—a girl like Virginia Dale.

He turned on her almost harshly.

"Don't you realise that women smash every temple that a man sets up?"

Her breath caught in her throat, but she contrived to murmur:

"Not all women. There are many fine ones, true ones, who would reverence . . . a man's shrine . . instead of trying to throw it down . . ."

Peter gave a low, bitter laugh.

"I haven't met one yet." His eyes, moody, despondent, rested for a moment on her, and the bitterness in them cut her like a knife. "Boys' dreams are the best dreams . . the unattainable princess, the lovely lady one will one day meet . . . and then one grows to man's estate, and finds romance is just a bubble . . . So one wakes!"

Silence between them, broken only by the nightingale's ecstatic song.

Then Peter gruffly added:

"Ever read oli Omar Khayyam? He's a 'temple-smasher', if you like! When I was a boy, I hated him and his philosophy! Crazy idealist I was! But now—"—he flung a hand out with a comprehensive gesture of abandon—"now I'm not sure old Omar isn't right! Live in the present with every fibre of your being . . . take what the gods offer you . . . and to blazes with ideals! As some old blighter wisely wrote: 'Carpe diem quam minimum credula postero.' My Latin's rocky, but it means that one should 'seize today and think not of the morrow.'"

Prudence drew back, startled. Was her hero stepping from his pedestal? What was this new, disturbing creed of which he spoke? What could she say, what do, to take that bitterness away?

But all at once his mood changed. He smiled rather wistfully at Prudence in the pale moonlight.

"Even old Omar had his bitter moments. I recollect a verse that breaks one's heart with its yearning for lost ideals. . . .

"'Ah, Love! could you and I with Fate conspire
To mould this sorry Scheme of Things entire;
Would we not shatter it to bits, and then
Re-mould it nearer to the Heart's Desire?'"

The speaker's voice caught on a sharp intake of breath as, suddenly, to took Prudence's hand in his, raised it as though to kiss it, and then, as suddenly, almost flung it from him, turning abruptly and swinging away at a rapid pace down the long, moonlit road until a bend hid him from the girl's blurred gaze.

She stopped and fumbled in the dust for something. At last she found it, pressing it, dust and all, against her lips. It was only a crushed spray of honeysuckle, filling the air with heavy sweetness—but his lips had rested there!

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

TRUE RELIGION

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir:—As we hear different ones talk, we cannot help but think that there is a famine in the land—not of bread nor of water, but something more vital than that, (we cannot live by bread alone) we want to hear God speak to our soul and to have fellowship with those who know and love Him. A man said to my husband not long since—I am hungry for true religion, but I can't find it, and said he, I know of many others who are hungry for the same things that I am.

Thank God for such a declaration as this, for the promise is that if we hunger and thirst after righteousness we shall be filled.

It would seem that the heart of the everyday man has advanced and got beyond the mere husk of religion—the outward form of worship, while our ministers are still in bondage and do not realize how dissatisfied and hungry many folk are.

People are asking in dumb language for the heart of religion, something within cries out for the pure companionship of souls who love God in sincerity and truth and care for their fellow man, who are heavenly minded, kind and peace loving. They want the inspiration and help that flows from such lives and they are weary to death of worldly minded church folk with their interfering self righteousness, and they prefer nothing as Ralph Waldo Grine says to this: What they want to find is the God who gives beauty to the flowers who sends the sunshine and the rain and all the bountiful gifts of nature, the God who revealed His great love on Calvary.

There seems to be a growing weariness of the church as it exists to day, folk say to me sometimes, and I am glad they do, that they are tired of bun feeds and all the rest of it. They have a dim consciousness that they have a soul that cries out for bread and that it is the church's place to supply that heavenly manna, and if they don't, the sheep wander away in search for the same, but the Good Shepherd knows all about your need, my brother, sister, of the invisible church of Christ. He knows your loneliness, and has said, I will search them out and feed them. We are slow to accept or put into practice the truth which Jesus taught when He said to the woman of Samaria that the time cometh and now is when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in Spirit and in truth for the Father desireth such to worship Him.

Yes, I know that a non churchgoer is a target for the Pharasees, no matter how exemplary their life, but if we have the Christ within we have no particular need to run here and there to worship or to pray, and if we go for spiritual fellowship, we shall come away hungry, after all, the church is the scaffolding to help us erect our spiritual house, it is not the abiding essential thing, but the inner temple we erect is what matters—it was Dr. Alexander MacLaren himself who said: We need outward forms of worship. It is a sign of our weakness that we do but, said he, they are so full of danger that one sometimes wishes that they could be broken up and made fluent and that at least for a time something else could be substituted for them. It was he also who saw through the thin veneer of many so called Christians and who said that "Christendom" was largely a mass of (Pagans) masquerading as Christians.

It seems sad to think that he and many another gifted man should have been and still are content to minister to such, and to be ruled over by the different societies of the church who take it upon themselves by all kinds of means to raise money for the church, when God has said, The silver and the gold is mine and the cattle upon a thousand hills—why not venture on Him and venture out of the church for Him and preach in such a way as to draw unto Him His own hand. I could and I do weep sometimes to think what the church has come to, yet, I am looked on by church workers as a do nothing, and perhaps as an enemy, because I no longer attend church services.

Pardon me, dear sir, for this long letter, yet trusting I may receive your favour, I am yours very truly. M.B.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

SNOW WHITE AND THE DWARFS

A little fairy ferryman took them across seven lakes.

The next place in Once Upon-a-Time Land that Mister Mutts took the Twins in his magic automobile was to see Snow White.

The prince had built her a glass castle, and there they had lived happily ever after—just as the story said.

The crossed seven islands and a little fairy ferryman took them across seven lakes, and there stood Snow White's castle.

Glad to see them! Why, she nearly fell out of her window with joy when she saw them coming, for ever since her wicked stepmother had died the prince had been very, very particular about strangers coming to the castle, and Snow White was getting lonely, as the prince was out hunting so much.

She ran downstairs and let them in herself before the servant could say that nobody was at home to callers that day.

"How do you do?" she said in a silvery voice, kissing everybody, even ugly little Mister Muggs, who had to hold onto a chair he was so surprised.

"We're all very well, thank you," said Nick, "and we came to see if there is anything you need to make you happy."

"Oh, thank you!" cried Snow White. "There is just one thing! I would like to know if my seven dwarfs are well. They live in yonder mountains and they work hard all day. I am so afraid they won't have anybody to cook for them when they come home tired at night—or make their beds—or mend their clothes."

"Would you like to see them?" asked Mister Muggs. "Because my magic automobile will take you there in a jiffy, if you do."

"I don't know what a jiffy is," laughed Snow White. "But if it isn't too long, I'll go. The prince won't be home for three days, and I'm sure he will think it's all right for me to go when I'm in such safe company."

So all four of them got into the tiny car and away it started for the blue mountains in the distance.

By and by they came to the house where the dwarfs lived.

They knocked on the door, but as nobody came they pushed it open and stepped inside.

"Why, it looks exactly the same!" cried Snow White. Then she stopped suddenly, for there, on the table, were the unwashed breakfast dishes, the bedroom was all in disorder, and the seven little beds were completely topsy-turvy. The clothes that hung on the pegs needed mending, and all the floors needed a good scrubbing.

"Let's get to work and fix it up for them," cried Nancy.

"A fine idea!" declared Mister Muggs. "It is only 10 o'clock and we have all day."

And when the dwarfs came back the little house looked as though fairies had been at it—as indeed they had. But the visitors had gone, for the dwarfs were shy and afraid of company.

"I'm coming every week and look after them," said Snow White. "I'm sure the prince won't mind."

PUPILS PILE SCHOOL WOOD

Marmora Students Will Be Paid By Board of Education and Buy Athletic Supplies With Funds.

MARMORA, May 2. — A rather novel idea is being carried out in the Public School this spring. Instead of the board hiring a man to pile the year's supply of wood the pupils have taken the job. Superintended by their principal, Mr. E. C. Prentice, they are carrying the wood into the school and piling it in the basement during their recesses.

Most of the boys of the school and a number of the girls of the fourth class are giving a helping hand. The board would pay the pupils the wages they would otherwise have paid a man. The pupils plan spending the money in buying some athletic equipment. At present the choice seems to be a football for the boys and a ball for the older girls.

Mission Band Meets

On Wednesday afternoon the annual meeting of the Junior League Mission Band was held in the Methodist Church. Mrs. Clare read a letter from a missionary in China and then showed a number of Japanese and Chinese curios.

The main part of the meeting was purely business.

The officers for the coming year are: President, Miss Hilda Thomson; vice-president, Miss Dorothy Marett; recording secretary, Miss Florence Clare; corresponding secretary, Miss Jean Thompson; treasurer, Miss Ida Clare; organist, Miss Margaret Clare; leader, Mrs. D. R. Clare.

This is the first year's work for the Mission Band. It was organized a year ago in the spring, but was dropped for the summer months. In the fall the work began again with Mrs. Howes as leader.

At Christmas time the boys and girls sold the Scripture calendars to make a little money for the band. Then, with the help of Mrs. C. Gordineer, Mrs. Clare trained the small workers for an evening's programme.

This was given on league night about two weeks ago. A silver collection was taken for the Mission Band.

The treasurer reports that she has sent away $21 this year and almost another dollar is left to begin the year on.

If the band increases next year the way it has this year, a large, thriving band will be the result. The older girls of the church are planning to join and help in the work for the coming year.

Mrs. T. E. Neal, of Marmora, entertained the Sprinkbrook Ladies' Aid on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Neal was for many years a member of the Springbrook Ladies' Aid and although she has recently moved to Marmora, she still keeps up her affiliation.

There was a splendid attendance. Owing to illness, Mrs. Bailey, the president, was not present. The chair was ably filled by Mrs. A. P. Williams. After the usual routine of business the ladies took part in a contest.

A dainty lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Neal and her daughter, Miss Thelma. The meeting was dismissed by the Rev. D. R. Clare.

IT is easy to tell genuine Linoleum—the high grade modern floor covering. But if you do not protect yourself by following these simple tests you may easily be fooled.

Always turn over a piece of linoleum or a linoleum rug and make sure that it has genuine burlap backing—all real linoleum has. Then look at the edge—it should have a natural brown tint, much like an ordinary, unused cork.

Nowadays it is well to be careful in buying linoleum, for there are many products on the market that look like it, but which have neither burlap nor cork in their make-up. And if you buy, and do not get real linoleum you will probably be disappointed.

Linoleum is made of cork, oxidized linseed oil, kauri gum and other materials pressed firmly into a backing of strong, tough burlap. The processes used combine to make a floor covering that is very smooth, durable, clean and highly sanitary. For every type of floor it is ideal.

STANDS BY HUSBAND WHO, TIRED AT LAW'S DELAYS, AVENGED SON'S MURDER

It is the Ancient Justice, An Eye for an Eye and One Life for Another Life,

By GEORGE BRITT.

CHICAGO, May 3.—"Ten months' waiting, ten continuances, and no justice in sight."

So reasons Mrs. Anna Sexton, contemplating the law's slow progress which her husband, Patrick, just accelerated by two pistol bullets into the body of Jack Rose.

Such is the logic and the justice o the mother weeping for her son, whether in to-day's modern city or back in the cave of yesterday's ten thousand years. It is the ancient justice of an eye for an eye, a life for a life.

The Sextons had waited since last summer, brooding at home with their widowed daughter-in-law, Marie. They wanted Rose punished for the murder of Frank Sexton. Marie's baby arrived, but no trial for Rose.

For the tenth time they went to court. And again they witnessed a continuance.

As they emerged, the father became the avenger, and primitive justice was appeased.

"Surely we've had trouble enough," says Mrs. Sexton.

"They won't punish Pat for this. They won't take him away from us at hime, when Rose already had taken away our boy.

"Frank was our pride, and he would have been so happy with the baby. He died, though, and the law was always compliant when Rose wanted to delay. And now they're holding Pat because he executed a judgment of his own.

"You see these things differently, maybe, when it's your own boy who was taken from you."

There's no overlooking the bitter sorrow of the woman who lost her son and whose husband may be facing a gallows in the dim future. But likewise there's no escaping a sense of pride, or of satisfied wrath, that the slayer of the boy has been compelled to pay.

In this joins the pretty Marie, comfort and reliance in all the family's heartache. She's just like a daughter, She sees things from the same viewpoint.

Not so the law. Justice has been outraged in her own temple, declares State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe.

"Continuances, even as many as ten, are not unusual in criminal cases under present crowded conditions on our docket," he says.

"Sexton now is saying he shot in self-defense. But every fact shows it was a disregard of all law and a black, unreasoning revenge. It was the spirit of barbarism, not of civilization.

"In this case, as in the other, the law must act with cold, regular justice, and resist the temptation to sentimentalize."

WOMEN WILL BE GIRLS IT SEEMS

By HORTENSE SAUNDERS.

The "Aenemic 32" has succeeded the "Flapper 34" that recently snatched the honors from the "Perfect 36."

Women will be girls, it seems. The well developed figure with its generous curves and Venus proportions that our fathers worshipped is quite out of the running, according to New Wayburn, who selects and grooms the girls for the Ziegfeld Follies.

He was called in as counsellor extraordinary to select half-a-dozen eligibles from several hundred girls who applied for positions as models for a fashion show to be held in New York in May.

And let me assure you, the boyish forms have the preference with him.

"The Americans adore slenderness," he explained. He himself is a perfectly husky looking individual who doesn't count his own calories, unless I'm mightily mistaken.

"The Follies girls of next season will all be 32's. It's the ideal size for the modern costumes and the tendency in costumes reflects the taste in femininity.

Roberta Haynes of Brooklyn was selected by him as one of the most possible 32's—although she not not acnemic looking, in the least. Her chest measure is a gift of the gods and not the result of dieting or banting.

From the beauty contest, I went to consult Marta Ferra, the Italian girl, who is amazing New York with her feats of strength, and who, in spite of the fact that she can lift elephants and tie knots out of iron bars, is a most attractive looking woman, with no bulging muscles or over-developed areas.

She is five feet five inches tall, weighs 120 pounds and has a bust measure of 38 inches—exactly the measurement of her hips. When I asked her what she thought of the acnemic 32, she laughed.

"A 32 isn't a woman—it's a child," she said. "If a fully matured girl is not more than 32 inches through her shoulders she is either sick or carries herself badly. She can have no strength, vitality, endurance, and to me, beauty, unless she has a normal development.

"The 32 would be very unpopular in Europe, because there they expect a woman to be a woman—not an underdeveloped girl. You can't produce healthy, splendid children from a race of 32's," she assured me.

Be that as it may, for the time, at least, avoirdupois has gone out of style—you must be avoirdupuny.

ACCOUNTS REFERRED TO THE COMMISSION

Finance Committee Thinks Accounts for Services in Connection With Court Should Be Paid by Police.

At a meeting of the Finance Committee last night, three accounts that the committee thought were wrongly referred to it for payment were sent to the Police Commission for a report. They were for W. F. Johnston, for taking evidence in the Alcombrack case and the Standard Medical and Surgical Clinic and Dr. McNair for professional services in police work.

To have or not to have their photographs mounted on a card bearing the legend "1924," was another problem before the committee. It was remarked that the cost would be about $15. Alderman Crowe did not approve the project, saying most of the members had their pictures hung around "as thick as flies." On motion of Alderman Fife and Morrison a group photograph was decided on if the Mayor thought advisable.

M

MONTREAL, May 3.—(Canadian Press).—"A town of 300,000 without a hospital would be hard to visualize but that is what Montreal really is to-day."

This was the statement here last night of Dr. A. K. Haywood, superintendent Montreal General Hospital, who said that for the past three days the institution had been unable to send ambulances for emergency accident cases because no beds have been available for patients. The hospital is, he said, filled to capacity and has a daily waiting list of approximately 300 cases.

"The whole trouble is" said Dr. Haywood "that in the last ten years Montreal has grown by about 300,000 in population and in that time not a single hospital bed has been added, outside some fifty or sixty beds for children at St. Justin hospital.

The Motor-Wise and Money-Wise are turning to the Knight

Men who have driven different makes of cars and who have learned what to look for, are turning to the Willys-Knight. They have tired of annually trading in their old cars for new ones—and have made up their minds finally to own a car they can keep and enjoy for years.

Years only season the Willys-Knight. The longer you drive it the more you are proud of it. The wonderful Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine is quiet as a whisper—and it actually improves with use!

Willys-Knight owners report 50,000 miles and more without ever a mechanic touching the engine. You may never want to drive all over the map, as many Willys-Knight owners do—but it is a mighty big satisfaction to own a car with an engine that has never been known to wear out. Certainly a wonderful investment!

There are seven beautiful Willys-Knight models, ranging from the roadster with its long, graceful, sweeping lines to the sedans, distinctive and luxurious, each priced within reach of the man of moderate means.

WEALTHY INDIANS WHITE GUARDIANS

By ROY J. GIBBONS

SAPULPA, Okla., May 3.—Munnie Bear, a Creek Indian woman, was placed under a guardian because she saved all her money.

Susanna Butler Dacon, another weal thy Creek Indian, was placed under a guardian because she spent all her money.

These are cases revealed by Federal Indian Service officials who object to the law of 1908 which placed Oklahoma Indians under control of state court appointed protectors.

Indian service employes also charge:

That the guardian for Allie Daney filed a suit against himself to set aside a lease deal on his ward's property on the ground that he had conspired to defraud Allie and that the guardian charged expense of this suit against Allie's estate.

That guardians anxious to secure Indian estates keep "birthday books" to apprise them of the date minors become of age and subject to state court over their property.

That it cost $1,600 to administer the $5,000 estate of another Indian.

That a guardian charged a bill against an estate of $2,700 for gaso line consumed during three months' time and when questioned about it charged the bill off to a loan.

That administrators charged 59.82 per cent. of the total income from an estate for their services.

That guardians took $24,620, or 30.55 per cent. of the total income of another estate for their employment.

Hundreds of such specific cases are alleged by the Indian Service of Oklahoma as reason why the guardian system should be abolished and the Indians restored to federal control over their property as well as their persons.

Results of a probe conducted by the federal government in Creek County, Oklahoma, showed that in 1895 cases either no reports had been filed by the guardians for Indians or else the reports required by law, showing how the estate is managed, were missing from the files.

The prove is also declared to have disclosed:

That in 543 cases representing Indian guardianships in the same county, out of 2,770 investigated, the total receipts amounted to $3,832,094.90, and that the expense of administering these 543 estates (the only ones for which complete reports were available) amounted to $490,434.33. This made the cost average 12.79 per cent. of the receipts.

That the cost of administering white estates as judged from typical cases in the same court averaged 4.89 per cent. of the receipts.

On the other hand, white guardians for the Indians vigorously deny all charges made against them by govern ment officials and say they earn every penny paid for services rendered in looking after the property interests of their wards.

One guardian put it this way:

"A white man having an Indian under his care is bothered almost to death by the Indian who really prefers a guard ian because through a guardian he can get more money out of his estate from the government.

"Indians having guardians come into the guardian's office and complain about toothaches and all sorts of things. Some of them even demand that the guardian act as escort for the Indian's family and accompany them to the theater."

SMALL TAXPAYERS WERE FROZEN OUT

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Out of every $100 the treasury collects in income taxes, it refunds $4.

Annual collections are about 2,500 millions; refunds 100 millions.

Probably the small taxpayers would n't object to this if the treasury, after collecting each $100, "pro rated" $4 back. But it isn't "pro rated." Small taxpayers get none of it. It goes only to the very, very big ones, and in large chunks.

* * *

The figures are Thomas Adams'. Adams is a Yale professor and tax expert. The Couzens committee got him to help investigate the treasury. He resigned, declaring the investigation, the way the committee was conducting it, just "child's play," and a "demoral izing" kind at that.

* * *

Senators who want the investigation pushed say the fact remains that 4 per cent. of mistakes in income tax collections is too high—even if they're errors. However, Adams doesn't contend they 're all honest. If the inquiry goes on, he agrees there'll be "no difficulty in finding instances of * * * * favoritism and sporadic cases of actual graft."

* * *

Nevertheless Adams doesn't approve the investigation. Neither does President Coolidge. It was when Francis J. Heney was hired by Senator Couzens to prosecute this particular inquiry that the president went to the Senate the "call down," on account of investigations in general, that promises to bulk so largely in the coming national campaign.

* * *

There's been a letup in the oil and Daugherty inquiries while the Senate and the president settle the question how far the investigators are entitled to go with their work.

* * *

Though it doesn't class as a regular investigation, that's what the House committee on the Agriculture Department's expenditures really is carrying on.

The committee is looking into the working of the Packers and Stockyards act. This law was intended to help live stock raisers. J. W. Burns of the department's own legal staff told the committee that it has been used to help the big packers and livestock commission men. Commissions, he said, would have been cut nearly in two, but the packers and stockyards division of the department stopped it.

"It was a crime and an outrage," he added.

However, it wasn't Secretary Wallace's fault, observed Burns; the secretary was "hogtied" by Chester Morrill, chief of the packers and stockyards administration, before he knew what was going on.

BEGS FATHER TO HANG MAN WHO KILLED BROTHER

MIAMI, Ariz., May 3.—"He killed my boy. Now I'm going to kill him."

W. H. Grosh is going to make good his boast—and with the laws' consent.

He will spring the trap at the hanging of William B. Ward, negro slayer of his son, Theodore Wilbur (Ted) Grosh.

The execution is scheduled to be held at the Arizona state penitentiary in Florence, June 26.

But Grosh will not get to see Ward die. The hangman's lever is hidden from view of the gallows.

"I am satisfied, though," he insists. "I'll see him a few seconds later, and then I will know he is dead. I'll know I killed him!

"Everything I have done in my life has been prompted by my love for my six children. For years I worked in the mines to send them to school.

"I have been both father and mother to them since their mother died when Musa May (his youngest child) was only 5. That was 15 years ago.

"Now I have a little garage and this cabin—a place they could always call home. But Ted never will come home again.

"I am going to hang this man through love for my dead boy and Musa May. She wants me to kill him, too. Every night before she goes to sleep she makes me promise we'll get even. And we will!"

"Ted' 'Grosh, a sophomore at the University of Arizona, was murdered while returning home from a dance during the Christmas holidays. The girl he was with was assaulted and left for dead after he assailant had fired two bullets into her head.

Ward was arrested late the next day. A jury in an adjoining county convicted him in just 16 minutes.

35 CANDIDATES OUT AT LEAF'S PRACTICE

Charlie Curtis Swamped By Host of Youngsters At King Edward Park — Millbrook Apply For Membership in the Local Juvenile League.

The Lakeview Junior team held a practice last evening at Riverside Park, and although it was rather cool there was a good turn-out. Johnny Marchen who played with the Maple Leafs last year was present at the practice and he will likely hold down the hot corner for Lou LeBarr this year. Lou is still searching the town for a second baseman, which is the only type of player that he needs, but he will likely find one in the near future as there are at lot of players who played junior last year who are not with any teams and a lot of them are still eligble to play in junior company.

All hopes of the a Junior Central Ontario League have faded out and the Crescents and Lakeviews, the only two teams in the Junior City League, have decided to play seven games to decide the winner. They are depending on playing their games at Riverside on Wednesday nights but nothing definite is known yet.

The Mercantile League this season should be one of the best leagues in town. Six teams have entered and some great ball is expected. The two new teams who have entered are the Quaker Oats and the C.G.E., the latter not being the Intermediate champions, but another team from that firm. The others teams are: Western Clock, Bankers, Lock Works and Examiner. The schedule for this league will be drawn up as soon as arrangements can be made with the grounds committee of Riverside Park. This league should provide the fans with a snappy brand of ball.

Thirty-five promising looking ball players were present at King Edward School grounds last night for the Maple Leafs opening practice. With this number to pick from the Leafs will trot out at team composed of the cream of the city that will make Alex Kay and his Curlers realize they are in faster company.

The Quaker Oats will trot out a snappy team in the Mercantile League this season. They have a good bunch of players to pick from, including Howard Kirn, who will do most of the mound work for them.

Carl Woods who will do the heaving for the Curlers this season was noted for the number of strike outs he had last year will find it a much harder proposition to make the boys wilt at the bat as he will be pitching in the regulation distance pitching box against much stronger batters than the ones he had face him last year.

Toronto lost the opening game of the season in the Queen City but yesterday there came through a win.

Most of the rookies in the major leagues are showing up well and the managers are hoping that it is not just a flash in the pan.

Alex Kay boasts a new fielder from Coe Hill but he is not the only one who has a dark horse as the Leafs have a promising young left hander who will most likely make his appearance on the diamond this season.

The cold spell now one has held up the practices of the different teams a little. The fielders are not cutting in like they would if it were warm and very few of the pitchers are throwing any at all.

Millbrook have applied for inclusion in the Juvenile League. They boast of a strong team in this class but state that they have nobody to play with. If they are entered it will make up four teams in the Juvenile series.

SHOCKER JUST UP AND LEFT.

URBAN SHOCKER

CLEVELAND, May 3. — Urban Shocker, star pitcher of the St. Louis Browns, whose mysterious disappearance from the club a short time ago created the impression that he had deserted, has recovered from a severe atack of tonsilitis.

Shocker denied that he had any differences with Manager George Sisler or any of the club executives.

Mr. Shocker, it might be added, is a star, and a tmperamental star and he does just about as he pleases, whether it pleases anyone else or not.

Stan Hensley, last year shorstop with Adanacs, will this year not only be found wearing a Western Clock uniform, but will also be found with the Raybestos. He will hold down shortstop for both the Raybestos and the Western Clock.

The annual meeting of the East Peterborough Baseball League will be held at the Chamber of Commerce tonight at 7:30 o'clock. All

The Maple Leafs will hold a practice at King Edward School grounds on Monday afternoon at 5.45 o'clock. All boys wishing for a try-out are asked to be present as a game will be played.

Chuck Bradley will again play for the Maple Leafs and the rumor that he was with the Crescents is entirely unfounded

Luque, who was the leading pitcher in the National League last year and who is on the Cincinnati staff does not seem to be able to get going this year.

EBER AND MAYBERRY IN TEN ROUND DRAW FIGHT

HAMILTON, May 3. — (Canadian Press).—Bobby Eber and Mayberry battled ten rounds to a draw last night before a crowd which taxed every inch of accommodation in the Grand Opera House. Mayberry kept the bantam champion stepping during the greater part of the grind but at times he had a weakness to hang onto Eber. Eber would have probably been acclaimed the winner but the decision was fair to both. Mayberry was fast and had Eber missing his left jabb. Eber weighed 117¼ pounds and Mayberry 117¾.

ENGLAND'S OWN IVAN PARKE.

CHARLEY SMIRKE.

LONDON, May 3.—England has its own Ivan Park. His name happens to be Charley Smirke. He is a 17-year-old stripling and weighs only 84 pounds. In three years he he has ridden more than 100 winner, and local turf critics predict he will ultimately outshine Steve Donoghue, current idol of the bettors.

Smirke, like Parke, the American youngster, started riding as a tiny lad and, again like the Idaho star, was a sensation right off the reel, or or stirrup, if you will.

His dad wanted him to be a fighter, but Smirke's love for the saddle won out.

Billy Evans Says

Why the dearth of southpaws in the major leagues?

Every spring there are three times as many right-handed rookie pitcres as portsiders in the training camps.

The average more than holds good on the regular pitching staffs. The club that boasts one high class paw is fortunate.

Perhaps this feature is best explained by the mere fact that the right hander seems to be the rule in baseball, the left hander the exception.

If one would carefully go over the lineups of the various major clubs he would discover that the right handers are greatly in the majority at every position, with the possible exception of first base.

The initial sack offers great possibilities for the left hander and for that reason it gets a strong play.

Despite the soundness of the above explanation, it cannot be denied that 15 years ago the rosters of the major league clubs contained more high-class southpaws than today.

In all probability there are not more than a dozen great southpaws in the major leagues. Only a few of them might be rated outstanding figures.

Take the New York Americans for instance. That club is figured to have the best pitching staff in the majors, with the possible exception of Cincinnati. Herbie Pennock is the lone southpaw of class. Shields, a college recruit, has promise.

And Pennock, by the way, was acquired by the Yankees after having played engageemnts with Philadelphia and Boston. From a pitching standpoint he is no youngster.

The major league scout, as a rule, is nothing if not original. Recently one of the leading ivory hunters offered a rather unusual explanation for the general falling off in pitching talent.

"The lively ball, which made for free hitting, has temporarily caused a slump in the pitching market," says the scout.

"Years ago, the desire of every youngster was to be a star pitcher, Times have changed. The lively ball has made pitching a far more difficult task.

"The young player doesn't relish being knocked out of the box time after time. Such a thing is always possible with the lively ball. It has dimmed much of the glory that usually went with pitching."

Roumanian Rugby Team Opens Olympic Games.

PARIS, May 2.—With the rugby match between France and Rumania Sunday the 1924 Olympic games will enter the active stage. The Rumanian team reached Paris this morning and the three teams entered for the rugby competition, France, Rumania and the United States, are making use of all the time at their disposal for practice.

INTERNATIONAL HOCKEY MEETING WAS POSTPONED

MONTREAL, May 2— (Canadian Press)—A meeting of National Hockey League in Toronto this week-end which was to have decided whether or not the United States teams would be admitted to the league next season has been postponed for a week, it was announced here to-day. New developments in international hockey situation and in connection with proposed second team in Monday are said to have caused postponement.

LINDSAY TEAM LACKS LEAGUE

Tri-County's Major Section Has Apparently Collapsed, Leaving Lindsay Alone In Their Group.

(Lindsay Post.)

Lindsay is to-day apparently the winner of Group B of the Tri-County League for the season 1924, that is unless a different or a more satisfactory grouping is arranged. Lindsay's unique position of being winner without playing a game is due to Newmarket and Orillia refusing to play under the grouping arranged at a general meeting of the league held in Sunderland last night, whereby the seven teams of the league were grouped as follows: Group A—Sutton, Uxbridge, Cannington and Woodville; Group B—Lindsay, Orillia and Newmarket.

The ruling of the annual meeting calling for a single schedule was thrown out as certain towns refused to play, claiming that they were unable to stand the expense of long trips. Beaverton and Sunderland have dropped out, being unable to get a team and Stouffville refused to enter if January 1st residence rule was adhered to. This left the difficult problem of grouping the seven teams—Woodville, Orillia, Lindsay, Cannington, Sutton, Uxbridge and Newmarket. There was, unfortunately, a feeling among some of the delegates that larger towns were coming in the league at the expense of the smaller ones, and a motion carried making Lindsay, Newmarket and Orillia a group. Newmarket representatives protested, refused to play in any such grouping and left the meeting. Unfortunately, Orillia representatives met with a car accident on the way to the meeting and were not able to voice their feelings, but the Lindsay club, in long distance conversation this morning, were advised that Orillia would not enter the league with such a grouping and intimated their intention of entering the league composed of Collingwood, Penetang, Barrie and Midland. Newmarket is able to enter a York County League and will probably do so. This leaves Lindsay alone in the second group, and it is probable that with Orillia and Newmarket out, a five team group will be found in preference to merely allowing Lindsay to play off the winner of the other group. A five team league, with double schedule, would work out to the satisfaction of all as none of the trips would be long enough to be burdensome.

President Burns and Secretary Thompson of the League tendered their resignation as officials, but Mr. Burns was persuaded to reconsider the decision and he will remain in office. "Jimmy" Thompson was prevailed upon to retain the position of Sec.-Treas., which he has filled with satisfaction to all, but he insisted that his new business affiliation made it impossible to carry on in office, and his resignation was accepted.

At present the League is in a very unsatisfactory state, and Lindsay especially is placed in a very difficult position. It is hoped the president will call another meeting at an early date, when the prevailing unsatisfactory conditions can be amicably settled.

STRIBLING WON A BOUT IN TORONTO

TORONTO, May 3. —(Canadian Press).— W. L. "Young" Stribling the Georgia school boy, who has occupied a prominent position in the fistic limelight since last October, made his initial appearance in Toron to last night in a head line bout at the International Club's show at the Coliseum when he was awarded the judge's decision over Tommy Burns, of Detroit, former Winnipeg lad, after ten rounds.

There was no doubt as to the winner after the final gong had sounded but Stribling was unable to put Burns off his feet although he handed him severe punishment.

The bout was good one of its nature.

Stribling had, perhaps the weaker punch of the two. He hit Burns often enough in spots where they counted to send him down, but while he staggered him several times he never knocked him down. Stribling was much faster on his feet and with his hands but at that Burns beat him to the punch a number of times and on other occasions, when the Georgian appeared set to put over a telling punch, the Detroiter managed to escape without damage.

3. What is the rule when a batsman steps from one batsman's box to the other while the pitcher is in the act of delivering the ball?

ANSWERS

1. The dropping of the ball constitutes a failure to deliver the ball to the batsman, and must be regarded as a balk, even though it was accidental.
2. The batsman in entitled to first base if the catche interferes with him when about to strike at a ball.
3. The batsman is out if he steps from one box to the other while the pitcher is in the act of delivering the ball.

Just a soon as the pitcher starts to get the upper hand again, we may look for an increase in the pitching crop, thinks the scout.

THE FOUR-HOUR WORKING DAYS.

This Working Day Could Go Into Effect To-Morrow If People Would Be Satisfied With a Lower Standard of Living.

Time's coming when nobody will work more than four hours a day. Arthur B. Jones predicts at a "human engineering conference." Pause before calling him a visionary dreamer.

A four-hour day could go into effect tomorrow, if people would be satisfied with a lower standard of living—not poverty, but living more simply and using fewer articles, especially luxuries.

Invention has made it possible for our generation to create in four hours a day as high a standard of living and comfort as several times as many hours of toil half a century ago.

We do in four hours what they did in 12. The only reason we have to work an average of eight hours a day is because we insist on additional conveniences, luxuries and entertainment that were not considered necessary back yonder.

This is the answer to the claim, frequently advanced, that machinery has not freed man from drudgery. Machinery, taking the place of human labor and time, releases people for other work. As we get more and more machinery, better and more efficient system and methods, the population progressively produces and uses more and more articles. In this way the standard of living advances.

There is even a way by which we could have a universal four-hour day without lowering our standard of living. How? By solving the problem of distribution as we have already solved the problem of production.

Between producer and consumer stands millions of go-betweens or middlemen, each taking a slice of the pie as it is passed along. They occasionally are outright parasites. But in the main they are absolutely necessary under the present system. These "handlers" work about as hard as producers, selling and keeping records. And they are as surely victims of the wasteful system of roundabout distribution as the producers.

For, after all, every one is consumer.

The "best brains" used to go into the professions and arts. Now most of them go into business. They have demonstrated a high type of genius in making production efficient and less wasteful, both as regards time and money.

But this mania for economy ends when a commodity is produced. As soon as it starts to market, economy is ignored and profits are piled on priits to the absolute limit that the consumer can pay.

The situation will continue as long as man insists on the system of profit. Possibly a really civilized future will do away with profits and revert to fair and even barter, with everybody producing and the products of their labor being exchanged 50-50.

MAKE START AT FAIR GROUNDS

Playing Fields For Baseball and Other Sports at Exhibition Park.

Plans for the taking over of Exhibition Park for baseball and other sports were advanced at a meeting held last night, when provision was made for the engaging of a caretaker to start work at once.

The removal of power line poles, on the east and west sections of the grounds, and the laying out of diamonds will be proceeded with.

Plans mapped out by the several organizations interested in the Exhibition grounds project, include a big athletic programme at an early date to raise funds to be used in meeting the expenses of operating the grounds.

Right now, hundreds of baseball players and participants in other sports are without playing fields. The Exhibition grounds are available under a fair agreement with the Board of Directors.

Wm. Kay, of the Raybestos Club, was appointed secretary-treasurer of the executive in charge of the grounds and their control.

PAT MORAN DEFEATED IN TEN ROUND FIGHT

NEW YORK, May 3.—(Canadian Press).—Luis Vicentini, Chilean lightweight, won the unpopular judges' verdict over Pat Moran, of New Orleans, in a rather tame 12-round bout at Madison Square Garden last night. Chilean forced the fighting during the early rounds but took a heavy body beating from his opponent after the fifth round. The fans hooted the decision for minutes after Vicentini was declared the winner.

ABYSSINIAN TO THANK FRANCE

Prince Regent of Ethopia Expected In Paris May 15 As Official Guest — Claim to the League of Nations Supported.

PARIS, May 3. — Ras Tarfari, Prince Regent of Ethiopia, (Abyssinia), will be the official guest of France for a week beginning May 15 on the occasion of his visit, the principal object of which is to thank France in person for the support given by the French delegation to Ethiopia's successful plan for a mission to the League of Nations.

The Prince, while here, will have the opportunity of seeing 300 Ethiopian manuscripts, which are said to be among the oldest christian manuscripts, in existence, comprising one of the most valued treasures of the French National Library.

The question of giving Ethiopia a freer outlet for her products through the French colony of Djibouti, (French Somaliland), has been raised in connection with the Prince's visit. It is officially stated however, that France has no intention of alienating any part of her African possessions ,and that discussion of the subject is not on the programme.

TATTOOED GIRL AND THEN DESERTED HER.

FORT EDWARD, N. Y., May 3. —Deserted by Floyd Pellitier, after he had tattooed her to show that "she was his for life," Mrs. Hazel Miner Harris, eighteen years old, was arrested recently by the police who sought Pellitier for the burglary of a local store. Mrs. Harris told the police that one day, when he had professed his deep love for her, Pellitier lashed her to a tree, tatooed his initials upon her cheek tatooed arrows on her fore-head and nose. She said there was no need to tie her, for she would have submitted to the tatooing to prove she "intended to be his for life." She was arrested in Pellitier's tent on the bank of the barge canal.

A Severe Attack Of Heart Trouble Was Relieved By MILBURN'S Heart and Nerve Pills

Mr. S. E. Barnes, Athens, Ont., writes:—"Four years ago I had a very severe attack of heart trouble. I consulted my doctor; he treated me for some time, but I only seemed to be getting worse. I finally went to our druggist and purchased three boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and derived immediate relief from their use, and I can truthfully say they are a wonderful medicine. I always keep a box on hand, and if I feel out of sorts I take a few pills and feel all right again."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL

BARTHELMESS INTRODUCES NEW HERO TO SCREEN

Is Supported by Dorothy Gish.

Ever hear of a motion picture hero who engages in a duel and loses it? —who participates in a death grapple with another fellow, and does not "get" his man, though the latter drops dead from heart failure?—who makes love to a beautiful woman and at the same time remains true to his real sweetheart?—and who, despite all these things, still remains a hero?

We guess not. And yet this is the entirely different sort of hero that Richard Barthelmess is introducing, supported by Dorothy Gish, at the Capitol Theatre, in his delineation of Charles Abbott, in "The Bright Shawl," the John S. Robertson production, adapted from Joseph Hergesheimers gripping romance of Cuba, in the days before it overthrew the yoke of Spansih tyranny.

Barthelmess, if all reports are to be believed, is a mighty convincing and realistic hero at that. Also a very much beloved one.

And as the young American who has thrown himself in on the side of the Cuban rebels he is mightily admired for his tremendous courage and audacity even by the officers of the Spanish crown, despite the fact that he is a novice as a swordsman.

Romance? He falls in love with the fairest daughter of a fine Cuban family; but he also pretends to be infatuated with a beautiful Spanish dancer—to gain valuable information for the rebels.

Fight? He crosses swords with the most expert swordsman in Cuba, fights until he drops from utter exhaustion and is so greatly respected by his enemy that his life is saved.

As a photodrama, "The Bright Shawl," presented by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., through Associated First National Pictures, will eclipse even the popularity the story achieved in magazine and book.

DAILEY BROTHERS, DARING ACROBATS

Present Famous Death Leap at the Capitol Next Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

Dailey Brothers, widely known as daring acrobats, will offer their thrilling series of acrobatic stunts at the Capitol Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, concluding with their famous death leap—one of the most dangerous and breath-taking acts yet dared by man. This act, which alone required years of practice, is presented daily at terrific risk to the fearless performers. Capitol patrons are assured a real thrill when they see the Dailey Brothers next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

HAROLD LLOYD BACK AGAIN IN HIS LATEST PICTURE.

Acclaimed As Surpassing Even Safety Last In Laughs!

Harold Lloyd, master of a million laughs, comes back to the Capitol again next Thursday, Friday and Saturday in his latest mirthquake, "Girl Shy." From everywhere it has shown, "Girl Shy" has been pronounced Lloyd's best picture! It surpasses even "Safety Last," that terrific series of laughs and thrills that Lloyd offered last year. "Girl Shy" is the story of a young man who was very much afraid of girls and who was annoyed by their attentions to him! Just Lloyd as the girl shy young man does to dodge the ladies is going to bring the biggest laughs ever heard in Peterboro. Don't miss "Girl Shy." Remember it's at the Capitol next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

AT THE ROYAL

FINE DRAMA OF "THE DANGEROUS AGE." "TEMPORARY MARRIAGE" AT ROYAL, MONDAY

A photoplay, which for dramatic situations, suspense and vital, human appeal, is said to be one of the outstanding productions of the season, will be presented to local theatre-goers when "Temporary Marriage," a new Principal Pictures Production with a notable cast of players, is shown at the Royal Theatre on Monday.

The drama is woven around the Manners' home, a typical American household, virtually the same as any average man's house. By dint of hard work, Hugh Manners rises to the top but there is some disparity between the ages of the husband and wife. She is intent upon living a hectic, jazz life —a life in which she is occupied in retaining her youthful figure and countenance, regardless of the advancing years. She would seek a divorce from her husband because he is a "slow poke." And in honor of winning the first point in the domestic skirmish, she gives a lavish party.

But she doesn't know that she has been marked off by Preston Ducayne, a rich philanderer, as excellent game for blackmail. The call of youth is in her blood, and she encourages this younger man whose attentions flatter her. He weaves his net of intrigue, being aided by an adventuress. But Ducayne fails to reckon with a woman's jealousy. The trap is set for Mrs. Manners and her daughter, but the adventuress anticipates Ducayne's treachery, and a revolver flashes forth, resulting in the man's death. The question is who killed Ducayne? Was it Olga Kazanoff or Mrs. Manners or Robert Belmar, the daughter's fiance? These questions are answered in a most graphic manner. It would be difficult to conjure anything more compelling or gripping than the scenes which follow, leading up to a high pitched climax chock full of tense action and heart throbs.

A perfect cast has been chosen to play the various characters in "Temporary Marriage." In the role of the wife is Myrtle Stedman, with whom all picture-goers are familiar; Tully Marshall, another well remembered character actor, portrays the husband; Maude George and Stuart Holmes play the two blackmailers, Kenneth Harlan and Mildred Davis are seen as the lovers.

PROBLEM NEARS SETTLEMENT NOW

Difficulties Between France and Britain Smoothed Over.

LONDON May 3. — (Canadian Press).— Distinct progress was achieved in way of obviating difficulties between Great Britain and France in conference between the Prime Minister MacDonald, and Premier Theunis and foreign minister Hymans of Belgium at Chequers Court, last night, and this forenoon when procedure to be adopted under experts report was gone over, according to well informed sources although nothing has been divulged officially.

Various phases of reparation problem, including occupation of Rhur were discussed by the conferes and it is reported question of guarantees was raised. In this connection, the Evening Standard states that one of the proposals submitted by the Belgians was an economic boycott of Germany in case of her default under experts plan.

It is considered unlikely in well informed quarters that the question of Inter-Allied Debts received any attntion, as this is regarded as an independent topic.

WEEK'S ASSIGNMENT.

MUST RESPECT HIGHWAYS ACT

Parking Lights Required and Bicycles Must Carry Red Reflector or Lamp--Rule of Road.

Asked to-day as to the attention that is being paid to the new highways traffic act, Chief Constable S. Newhall said not many are yet carrying out its provisions. While under the old law parking without three lights on lighted streets were not strictly required, owing to the drain on the batteries, the new law positively requires these lights. "The new law, in all its provisions, will be strictly enforced in Peterboro," Chief Newhall declared.

There is also a great deal of carelessness regarding tail lights, it appears. These must be of at least four candle power and illuminate at all times between dusk and dawn the numbers on the rear of all motor vehicles. Complaints have also been received regarding drivers of all classes of vehicles who fail to keep to the right-hand side of the street. Many must continue to evade the law in this regard, but any who are found jeopardizing the lives and property of others by ignoring the established rules of the road will be dealt with according to the provisions of the law.

Every bicycle must now carry on the back a red-lighted lamp or red reflector so placed as to be clearly visible to drivers of vehicles approaching from the rear. The penalty for non-compliance is a fine of from $5 to $25.

A bicycle dealer interviewed to-day, told the Examiner that so many reflectors have been sold that he ran out of them. The best are made in England.

The Regulations.

The regulation covering parking lights reads: "A motor vehicle, while standing upon any highway at such times as lights are required by the provisions of this section for such vehicles, may, in lieu of the lighting equipment specified in this section, show one light carried on the left side of the car in such a manner as to be clearly visible to the front and rear for a distance of at least 200 feet, and to show white to the front and red to the rear of the vehicle, provided, however, that such light shall not be displayed while the motor vehicle is in motion."

The new highway traffic act provides the greatest security to life and property, and its provisions, outside the legal requirements, are worthy of attention.

GULLS AND LOONS IN FURIOUS FIGHT

PORT ARTHUR, May 3.— Canadian Press).—Furious battle waged for over an hour yesterday morning between flock of a hundred or more deep diving loons and sea gulls. The loons had divided to bring up live fish which was snapped at by the gulls as they swooped down from air and with enerring aim nipped morsals from loons bills. Loons vacated waters after an hours fight. It is rare thing for bird life here say for gulls to invade feeding ground of their water bred cousins and to attack them. Though gulls often fight among themselves.

There is sound reason back of the demand for more Concrete Highways

It's the little they cost to maintain that makes Concrete Pavements Economical

PROGRESSIVE communities are demanding the kind of roads that meet the traffic requirements of a revolutionized method of transportation.

Canada wants roads that will bear the shock of great loads at high speed — roads over which all varieties of traffic can operate with safety in all weathers and at all seasons.

The call is for roads that will yield their builders a profit instead of creating a deficit — prosperity roads.

And when the people, through its press, its legislatures, its motor car associations and its civic bodies, make insistent demands for modern highways, it is Concrete they have in mind. For they have learned by actual experience how concrete reduces haulage costs, speeds up transportation and saves upkeep charges.

Thoroughly alive to all that paved roads mean — realizing how they invite tourists, link towns, build trade and improve living conditions, all classes of people are now looking closely into this matter of "the right road," and the more thoroughly they examine the facts, the more clearly is it revealed that the right road for modern conditions is the Concrete road.

MINERS STRIKE FOR HIGHER WAGE SCALE

DUSSELORF, Germany, May 3. —(Canadian Press). — Situation in mines of this district is becoming acute owing to refusal of mine owners to acquiesce in decision of the Reich Labour Commissioner. Herr Menlitch providing for wage increase of 16 per cent instead of thirty per cent increased demand by the workers. Mines have refused Herr Menlitch's proposal to continue until October 15, agreement for longer working hours which expired May 1st and consequently most of miners to-day left their pits at expiration of seven hours provided by German Labour law.

FIVE ALIENS IN HANDS OF POLICE

Were Being Smuggled Across When Captured

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., May 3. —(Canadian Press).—Five aliens, one a woman, were brought across the Upper River from Canada in a row-boat and landed on the United States shore, a mile and a half above the Falls, early to-day, only to fall into the hands of the immigration inspectors who were patrolling the river bank.

The five are lodged in police headquarters here to-day awaiting deportation, and Joseph Snyder, 65 years old, of Chippawa, Ont., charged by the inspectors with bringing them into this country, is held on the charge of smuggling the aliens. He will be arraigned before the Federal Commissioner today.

The trip across the Upper River last night was a perilous one. The night was dark, and many ice floes were being carried by the swift current down to the rapids above the falls, which start less than half a mile below where the quintet were landed. If the boat had been carried slightly west of its course by the current it probably would have been swept into the rapids and over the American Falls, the police said.

CONGREGATION OF MARK STREET MET

A congregational meeting in connection with Mark Street Methodist Church was held this week, when a large number of the members were present and heard reports of the different branches of the church's activities. The meeting opened with a hymn, followed by prayer, by the Rev. Mr. Rork, an instrumental selection by Miss Musa Cox, a reading by Mrs. Fuller, and reading by Mrs. D. Holden, also a selection by a male quartette of choir members. The programme was interspersed by reports, which showed a very satisfactory condition of affairs, with a decided increase in every department of the church, especially in the Ladies' Aid section. Mrs. Ipsa Weir was called on, as being a member in long standing in the church, and made a short, impromptu speech, congratulating the pastor, Rev. R. Bamforth, on the year's work, which is considered to be the most successful in the history of the church, all running expenses having been paid, and some outstanding liabilities. Dainty refreshments and a social hour closed the session.

PRESENTATION AT LADIES' GUILD TEA

Despite the inclement weather, there was a fair attendance at the talent tea and sale of work held in aid of the piano fund of the Ladies' Guild of St. George's Anglican church on Thursday of this week, in the basement of the church. The president, Mrs. J. Brownlee, received the guests, assisted by Mrs. A. Cuffe. The fancy work table was in charge of Mrs. H. Rew and Mrs. James, the candy table of Mrs. W. Rew and Mrs. H. Robinson. The tea table, decorated with cut flowers, was in charge of Mesdames Mitchell, Warren, Wood, Brown and Monks. Music was provided during the afternoon and evening by Mrs. Cuffe and Jack Cuffe, in instrumental numbers, and vocal selections by Mrs. Broadley, Miss Edith Tucker, Miss Dorothy Walker, Mrs. Cuffe and Mrs. Brown. Miss Greta Brownlee acted as accompanist. The presentation to Mrs. Courage, who leaves with Rev. Mr. Courage soon for Pennsylvania, of a pair of embroidered pillow slips, was a feature of the occasion.

SAFETY SIGNS FOR THE CITY SCHOOLS

Queen Alexandra Association Proposed "Drive Slowly" Signs -- Motor League is Busy.

At the request of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association, the Motor League Directors will erect "Drive Slowly" signs on the streets adjacent to the schools of the city.
It was also decided at the meeting held last night to request support of the City Council on Monday night to erect two large signs on the Kingston Highway at Welcome, and also east of Port Hope, directing motorists to the city, the Gateway of the Kawartha Lakes.
Arrangements will also be made for a party of members and their wives, to visit Lindsay on Friday night, May 7th, for the purpose of organizing the Lindsay branch of the League. Definite arrangements will be made on Monday night.
The Peterboro Club is arranging to have on hand a supply of cards necessary for crossing the American border. This will avoid considerable delay owing to the great number of cars passing to and fro across the border.
The committee, under the chairmanship of Vice-President J. A. Bertram, to arrange for a camping site in the city, will report at the next meeting.

PLANTING TREES ON ARMOUR HILL

Government Forester is Enthusiastic--Six Thousand Scotch and Jack Pine Will Beautify the Park.

The planting of six thousand evergreens on Armour's Hill commenced yesterday under the supervision of Mr. H. J. Moore, who was responsible for laying out Victoria Park, Niagara Falls.
Groups of Scotch and Jack pine were laid out on the western side of the hill, and they are being planted four to six feet apart so as to protest the young trees during the first three or four years' growth, when they will be thinned out and transplanted to other areas of the hill.
Mr. Moore stated that the soil is ideal and the people of Peterboro would be surprised in a few years with the effect of the planting, which, when completed, will have been quite inexpensive.
The evergreens are being supplied free of charge by the Forestry Department of the Provincial Government, and the Patriotic League of Ashburnham are taking the responsibility of the planting.
Mr. Moore stated that it will not be necessary to construct the driveways for some time, and when it is done will be very inexpensive owing to the nature of the soil. He further stated that the hill is one of the best locations he has seen for park purposes ,and the foresight of the Patriotic League in securing this property would be appreciated by the entire city before very many years.

CUT UP HARNESS.
Harness stored in Alderman Walter Stocker's barn was cut to ribbons by midnight prowlers, and was discovered in the morning a useless heap of leather. Collars, straps and even the tires on an auto had been subjected to the knife. The property was taken over by Mrs. Hodgson when Alderman Stocker gave up his business.

THAT WONDERFUL ESSEX CAR

"As Kentuckians know horses, Detroiters know motor cars. Nearly a quarter million workers are engaged every day in making them. That is why it is so significant that Hudson-Essex, since the bringing out of the Essex Six, has become the largest selling line of six-cylinder cars in that city," said C. L. Brewer, Hudson-Essex distributor here.
"For the first three months of 1924, in fact, the new Essex and the Super-Six have been bought by more Detroiters," he continued, "than any other makes except the two lowest-priced fours. These figures are from official registrations.
"That is important to us here in Peterborough, because it represents the verdict of experts — men who build cars and know what goes in them.
"In our city here we know the ins and outs of our own business. Our gossip is about how this or that concern is doing. Similarly, in Detroit nearly everyone knows almost immediately whether this car or that is a success, or whether it has failed to fulfil the expectations held out for it. You can see for yourself that it takes a car that is fundamentally right to get by. And in Detroit Essex has gone across big.
"This news about the success of the Essex Six is spreading all through the industry. Here in our own city motorists are beginning to talk it.
"The men and women who have driven the new Essex far enough to discover its full abilities are the best advertisers we have. The wave of success is here. No car which the Hudson-Essex organization ever produced met with the welcome which has been accorded this Essex Six. We are facing a spring shortage.
"The Boston distributor of Hudson-Essex wanted to know if the Essex Six would perform like the famous old Essex 'Four.' So he conducted a climbing test up Corey Hill, one of the most thorough testing grounds in New England. The Essex Six was not simply 'just as good' as the old 'four'—rather, it beat it decisively. It excelled in every test. The factory engineers say that in all useful driving speeds the Essex Six is superior in performance. Its pick-up and smoothness are remarkable.

The government party secured 25 seats and the independents 4. A tie resulted in the Midlands constituency and a recount is in progress.

DEMOCRATIC PARTIES IN GERMAN ELECTIONS HAVE SAFE MAJORITY

Early Results of Sunday's Voting Accepted as Assuring Predominance of Big Coalition Pledged to Fulfil the Recommendations of the Reparations Experts — Nationalists and Communists Make Gains But Not Menacing to Republican Groups.

VOTE EXCEEDED 80 PER CENT.

BERLIN, May 5.—Computations based on scattering official returns in Sunday's elections from all sections and People's Party, have captured more than sufficient mandatts to insure a safe majority for a big coalition, which is pledged to carry out the recommendations of the reparations experts.

Although the Nationalists and Communists are making decisive gains, their present average does not indicate a menace to the middle parties in connection with further returns. The candidates of the Hitler-Lundendorff Party are falling behind predictions.

Disturbances Few.

BERLN, May 5.—General Elections took place Sunday throughout Germany. Advance reports from all the metropolitan centres and industrial centers indicate an exceptionally heavy vote, the total exceeding 80 per cent., in numerous precincts, as compared with 78 four years ago.

Only a few disturbances were reported in and outside of Berlin. The voting in the occupied areas proceeded without obstruction. A very large Socialist and Communist vote was registered in the Rhur, Saxony, Thuringia, and the industrial districts of Greater Berlin. In the local residental precincts the German Nationalists and the Ludendorff Party led the other.

Leaders Vote Early.

Chancellor Marx, foreign minister Stresemann and other Government leaders who were nominated in out-of- town districts, remained in Berlin where they cast their votes early.

President Ebert, who is taking the waters at Bad Mergentheim was one of the first individuals to appear at the polls.

A Communist in Berlin, who was engaged in painting a sidewalk red, was shot dead by a policeman while resisting arrest.

Inquisitive foreigners who assumed that the average native would frankly confess his political preferences in the elections were surprised to discover that their questions were either viewed as impertinent, or met with clumsy evasion. One man who essayed to take an independent straw vote among shop clerks, hotel employees and news vendors, was soundly rebuked for prying into what is considered an ironclad secret or personally business.

Old Fears Linger.

Despite five years experience with the German brand of democracy, the German voter is unable to shake off his pre-war habit of concealing his political creed, fearing that confession of his political attitude to the right, leit or middle might jeopardize his job or social rank. This in large measure is explained through the boycott imposed on the Socialists and Liberals in pre-war days, when a confession of ultra-liberal policial sentiments in the stern monarchical environment called for exceptional personal courage. The average citizen cannot escape the old habit, or make himself a booster for his party.

Veterans Elected.

All the parties returned their veterans, the Socialists re-electing Dr. Rudolf Hilferding, former minister of finance, Wilhelm Sollman, former minister of the Interior, Arthur Crispien, Edward Bernstein, Paul Leobe, president of the Reichstag, Dr. Rudolph Breitscheid, Frederick Stampfer, editor of Vorwaerts; Otta Wels, and Wilhelm Dittmann. Dr. Bernheard Barnburg, Dr. Eugene Schiffer, Erich Koch and Dr. Karl von Siemens, Industrialist, were reelected on the Democratic ticket. The Nationalists returned Oskar Hergt, Count Von Westarp and a majority of its former delegation, as did the Clericals, among the latter being Dr. Johannes Bell, Dr. Peter Spahn, Johann Giesberts, and Adam Stegerwald, the former Prussian Premier.

Reinhold Wulls, Albrecht Von Graefe and Major Wilhelm Henning, who deserted the Nationalists a year ago and organized what is now the Hitler-Ludendorif party, were re-elected as were also Herr Remmele, Herr Koenen, Clara Zetkin, and Herr Hoellein, Communists.

The new Reichstag will in all probability contain two parties wedged in between the Socialists and the Communists, these being the Socialisas League headed by George Ledebour, and the Independent Socialists, headed by Theodore Liebknecht, brother of Karl Liebknecht, who was assassinated in the 1919 revolution.

Prominent New Comers.

Count Von Roventlow, who will sit among the new party deputies was a familiar pre-war figure in political journalism and Pan-German activities.

Admiral von Tirpitz, former Minister of the Navy, who was responsible for the ruthless submarine warfare in the great war, and the young Prince Otto von Bismarck, will be prominent newcomers among the German Nationalists. Von Tirpitz, in accepting the nomination, announced that he would reserve judgment on his party's extreme policies, and permit himself to be actuated only by patriotic motives.

Count Hugo von Lerchenfeld, who enters the new Reichstag as a member of the Bavarian Peoples' Party, is generally considered possessed of liberal leanings, despite the fact that his party was suspected of having taken a pronounced orientation to the right, which has brought about a rupture with the Clerical party of Marx and Stresemann. Other new deputies include Dr. Albert Heinrich Schnee, former governor of German East Africa, and a well known colonial enthusiast. Schnee was elected as a candidate of the people's party.

Former Chancellors.

The following former Chancellors were re-elected: Philip Scheidemann, Hermann Mueller and Gustave Bauer (Socialists); Constantine Fehrenbach Joseph Wirth and Wilhelm Marx (Clericals); Gustave Stressmann, (People's Party.) Other members of the present Cabinet re-elected are: Rudolph Oeser, (Transportation); Edward Hamm (Economics). Dr. Otto Gessler (Defense); on the Democratic ticket; Dr. Hans Luther (Finance), on the Peoples' Party ticket; Heinrich Brauns (Labor), and Dr. Anton Hoefle (Occupied Territories and Posts) on the Clerical ticket.

COMMUNIST OPPOSITION.

BERLIN, May 5. — The Communists alone of the Radical party, oppose the Dawe plan for the settlement of the reparation question, thereby emphasing the cleavage with the Socialists. At a meeting of delegates of the French, German, Italian and British Communists parties, a vote was taken which showed that the full weight of international Communism was unanimously against acceptance of the recommendations of the exeprts.

As the Communists expect to obtain fifty seats in the Reichstag in the elections, it is thought that their joining with the Nationalist opposition to the Dawes' report may have serious consequences.

The Communist opposition to the experts' report is based on a fear that the emission bank will transfer the Government reserves from the country, thus making them unavailable to the Communists in the event of a revolution. The Communists also contend that an international steel trust will rule Germany, exploiting the workers, reducing wages and lengthening the hours of work.

Glasgow Reds Hear Discontent Gospel

GLASGOW, May 5.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The feature of the largest May Day celebration ever held in Glasgow which was postponed until Sunday, was the speech of J. Maxton, Glasgow labor member of the House of Commons who exhorted the crowd to eschew the word, 'tranquility' and emblazon on their banners the word, 'discontent.'

Mr. Maxton added: "As long as we have such conditions don't be peaceful even for the sake of the labor government. Politics is not a game now but a very definite and bitter class war which cannot be fought with kid-glove methods."

JUDGES FAVOR LASH PENALTY

Four Out of Five in Montreal Would Apply It When Warranted — Fix Fines For Gambling.

MONTREAL, May 5.—Penalties of $200 and costs or three months in jail for keepers of gambling houses, and of $25 and costs or one month in jail for inmates were decided on at a meeting of judges of the Court of Special Sessions held here during the week end.

Up to the present there has been no uniformity of sentences either for keepers or inmates while it has been found that the practice of playing one judge off against another has been the rule here.

Five judges were present at the meeting and it is understood that the question of the lash was discussed. It is reported that four expressed themselves in favor of its application in such cases as seemed to warrant such punishment. The fifth judge said he would investigate the severity of the lash punishment at the penitentiary before making up his mind.

THE WEATHER.

PUBLIC MAY BE EXCLUDED FROM BANDIT'S TRIAL

Montreal Sheriff Considering Card System of Admission Calculated to Prevent Trafficking In Tickets — No Decision Made Yet.

ELEVEN IN CELLS.

MONTREAL, Que., May 5. — Rules far stricter than those enforced during the trial of the Rev. Father Delorme will go into effect to prevent crowding of the court of King's Bench should the eleven suspects now in the cells to be sent before a jury on the charge of murdering Henri Cleroux, Bank of Hochelega chauffeur, who was killed on Apil 1, here when bandits held up Banks collection car and stole $142,288.

Sheriff L. J. Lemieux has already perfected details of police protection in the court room, while he has under consideration a card system of admission of the public calculated to prevent trafficking in tickets. At the last Delorme hearing, pasteboards changed hands for sums ranging from $2 to $5, it is said.

It is expected that the public will be absolutely barred from the trial and attendance confined to court officials, lawyers and newspaper representatives. Decision has, however, yet to be made on this point.

PORTRAIT OF KING BEST OF ITS KIND

The Painting by Charles Sims Which is Now on Exhibit is Said to Be Good Portrait,

LONDON, May 5. — (Canadian Press). — The controversy forecast over Charles Sims' picture of King George, exhibited at this year's Royal Academy, has been started, and is bound to be waged fast and furiously as soon as the public is admitted to the exhibit, beginning to-day.

State portraits have been difficult things to handle ever since those faraway days when the unlimited authority of the Monarch made it expedient for the artist to produce a flattering canvas. Having read the diverse opinions of his work by critics in the newspapers here, Sims, offered an opportunity to reply, said:

"Art has no relation to criticism in this case. I am perfectly satisfied with my portrait of His Majesty.

"The legs and garter robes were painted from the figure of an Academy student who sat for me wearing them."

"I have painted the King as a human personally, not as a legendary, flamboyant monarch—a manner in which sovereigns are too often portrayed."

Some criticisms of the work are as follows:

"A merciless and pitiless caricature."

"The legs are not to be taken seriously."

"The most human royal portrait within living memory."

"A merciless and tasteless caricature of the King in white silk stockings and all sorts of paraphernalia."

THE PSYCHIC MESSAGE CAUSED HER COLLAPSE.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 5. — A psychic message (true or false) caused Mrs. Frederick L. Martin, wife of the missing world flight aviator lost in Alaskan snows, to collapse on Saturday, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Lewis J. Utt.

After bravely fighting her fears for 60 hours, Mrs. Martin broke down and asserted that an overwhelming conviction that her husband was dead had seized her.

Mrs. Utt said that at the same moment she had also felt an unaccountable conviction that Major Martin was dead.

Arbor Day Planting At Marmora School.

MARMORA, May 5.—Arbor Day, Friday, saw the boys and girls of the Public School busy. The girls thoroughly cleaned the blackboards and desks of the school.

Under the supervision of Mr. E. C. Prentice, the boys planted four maple trees on the grounds and the playgrounds of the school were generally cleaned.

Rev. Barrett, of Stirling, made a call in town on Thursday evening on his way from Cordova.

QUEBEC UNEASY HIT BY TARIFF

Budget Has Created Feeling of Business Uncertainty According to the Provincial Secretary of Manufacturers' Association.

MONTREAL, May 5.—Returning from Quebec City where he attended the annual meeting of the Quebec Branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association last week, R. W. Gould, secretary of the organization said here yesterday that he found the manufacturers of the city and district of Quebec very much disturbed over the budget. "Quebec," said Mr. Gould, "has been badly hit by the low and unstable tariff policy of the government. The manufacturers do not complain so much regarding the budget itself as of the general feeling of business uncertainty it has created."

A resolution was adopted at the meeting and will be forwarded to the acting minister of finance, asking that a sufficient and stable tariff as at present in force is endaniff be maintained and stating the conviction that the preferential targering the life of the principal industry of Quebec, the manufacture of boots and shoes."

W. J. HANCOCK WON IN CIVIL ACTION

Litigation to Secure Possession of Farm

The case of Hancock versus Hatherly was the only other case to occupy the attention of Mr. Justice Wright at the non-jury sittings just closed.

This was a case brought by Mr. W. J. Hancock, the well known auctineer, for possession of the farm purchased by him at a recent mortgage sale, and judgment was given for Mr. Hancock, together with costs.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, K.C., appeared for plaintiff Hancock and Mr. J. A. O'Brien appeared on behalf of Mr. Hatherly.

The Judge intimated that in the event of Hatherly affording the plaintiff immediate privileges of ploughing and complete possession within two weeks, that the costs directed to be paid would be remitted.

The defendant's counter claim for damages was dismissed, the Judge intimating that the plaintiff's conduct in the entire matter had been fair and proper in every way.

CHEESE PRICES ON GRADE BASIS

Only Number 1 Will Bring Full Price As Result of New Government Regulation--Cornwall Objects

CORNWALL, Ont., May 5. — At the Cornwall cheese board meeting Saturday considerable adverse discussion was aroused by a telegram from the secretary of the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association, stating that in view of the new and stringent government regulations, cheese would henceforth be placed in three grades and culls, that number 1 only would be accepted at full price, while number 2 would be cut by two cents a pound and grade 3 and culls would be adjusted at their values. A resolution was finally passed at the meeting instructing the secretary to urge Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture not to enforce the regulations as they would prove injurious to the cheese industry.

The best system it was argued, would be to grade as finest and fine.

BELLEVILLE IS PASSIVE.

BELLEVILLE, May 5. — "In view of the additional stringent government grading regulations effective May 1, I am to advise you that members of this association will accept only at full price Government grade No. 1 cheese at Montreal. No. 2 will be held at factoryman's account or accepted at a reduction of two cents per per pound. No. 3 grade and culls will be adjusted at their values."—H. C. Beatty, secretary Montreal Produce Merchants' Association.

The above telegram read at the meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board Saturday caused a great deal of discussion and several resolutions which, however, were withdrawn.

Effective May 1st, the Government regulations insist upon No. 2 grade cheese being branded on the box and in view of the problematical attitude of the English buyers at cheese branded No. 2, the exporters are protecting themselves by a margin of two cents on cheese branded No. 2. Heretofore No. 2 cheese has been sold, unbranded, at half a cent per pound below the price of No. 1 cheese.

It was charged in the course of the discussion that the Government had been requested by the farmers through the dairy association to have No. 2 cheese branded, it being held by some that cheese paid for as No. 2 was often sold by the buyer as No. 1.

Verulam Whiskey Still Discovered

LINDSAY, May 5.—(Canadian Press).—One of the largest illicit whiskey manufacturing outfits yet discovered by the local authorities, was found Saturday when Provincial Officer Storey and Inspector Thornbury pounced upon the moonshiners in a lonely place seven miles north of Bobcaygeon, in the township of Verulam. This forty gallon still was in full operation and when the officers entered, the operator made a bold dash for liberty, jumping through a window and running across a plowed field pursued by Officer Storey, who captured him about half way over the field.

CLERK GAMBLED $7000 ON RACES

Canadian Customs Employee Stole From the Government, Squandered the Money and Surrenders in New York, Broke and Penitent.

NEW YORK, May 5. — A request that he be arrested and returned to Canada to answer charges of stealing $7,000 from the Canadian Custom service, last September was granted by detectives who were accosted by Hugh G. McVean of Windsor, Ont., Saturday night. He is being held for the Canadian authorities.

Penniless and shabby, McVean stood up on an uptown Broadway corner. Three detectives walked up to him to question him.

'Are you men detectives?' the officers said McVean asked them. "Please arrest me. I have something on my conscience. I want to go back to Canada to my wife—I don't know why I did it.'

He said he had been working in the Customs service and last September ran away with the $7,000. He said he had served in the Canadian army and had been gassed in France. He lost the money on the races in Mexico, detectives said he told them.

SEAMAN'S LIFE IS NOT ALL SUNSHINE

Clarence L. Staden Was Adrift in the Gulf of Panama for Twenty Three Hours in Which Sharks Kept Him Company.

NEW YORK, May 5—(Canadian Press).— To the list of plain men made remarkable by caprice of the sea has been added the name of Clarence L. Staden, erstwhile able seaman on the tanker, Frederick W. Weller which arrived yesterday from Panama.

Staden, adrift in the wide circle of the Gulf of Panama, alone except for sharks, fought the man eaters hour in and hour out, with the long blade of a sailors jack, until the steamer Dorset picked him up. He had engaged in this bizarre warfare with the blood hungry fish for twenty-three hours, had eaten no food, had had no sleep, and despite all emerged unscathed.

A note pinned to a forecastle post reading "good bye tanker Weller" was the first inkling Captain Samuel Purdy of the Weller had that Staden was missing. From the shelf above his bunk his lifebelt was gone, as well as the knife the seaman had taken pride in tempering.

Staden, shipmates and officers said he was inclined to be melancholy and they offer this as an explanation for his jumping overboard. The assumption, was, they said, that once adrift terror and fear of the sharks dethroned any other thought he may have had and he desperately slashed and stabbed at the encircling fins.

GERMAN SEARCH CLOSES SOVIET TRADE MISSION

And Russian Ambassador Announces to Depart On Tuesday—Police Hunted For Communist Leader and Also Examined the Records In the Russian Offices.

IMMUNITY CLAIMED.

BERLIN, May 5.—M. Krestinsky the Russian Ambassador who was to have left Berlin for Moscow Saturday night, has postponed his departure until Tuesday. There are indications that the political confusion caused by the entry of the German police into the building of the Russian trade delegation and searching it for the Communist leader, Botzensardt, is subsiding. Since the Germans expelled M. Joffe and the entire diplomatic mission in October, 1918 under the charge that the Mission was carrying out communistic propaganda, there has been no such excitement in Russo-German diplomatic circles.

The Communist newspaper Rote Fahne, which has been used by the trade mission as headquarters, indicates that Premier Marx is "kowtowing to the capitalistic powers."

"Poincare, (the French Premier) cannot," says the newspaper, "permit Germany to keep up relations with any power which openly opposes the Versailles Treaty, as does Russia."

Acted Hastily

The Vossische-Zeitung says the Germans had a right to search the mission, but that they were a bit hasty and that the police should first have consulted the German Foreign Office.

Mr. Krestinsky claims that the Russian Trade Mission enjoys diplomatic immunity under the trade agreement before the Rapallo Treaty. The German Government, however, denies this. The Russian Trade building is far removed from the Russian Embassy and building in Unter Den Linden and seven hundred employes work there under Dr. Starkov.

Europe Watching

The Soviet Government also had a medical mission, a political "laboratory," and several other missions in Berlin. Consequently its extra territory would be widespread throughout the German capital if it should gain its point. European diplomats are watching the outcome of the situation, with much interest because of the bearing the question may have on negotiations in London between the Russians and British and its effect on other countries which established trade relations with the Russians under the conditions that no Communistic propaganda should be carried out.

Mr. Krestinsky insists that the trade mission will be kept closed indefinitely as a protest against the search. He charges that six hundred police went through the records of the mission and that this clearly was more than a search for a fugitive.

Recognition of Debts Blocking Conference.

LONDON, May 5. — The Anglo-Russian conference which began about two weeks ago in London, has reached a deadlock on the question of the recognition of debts, according to the statement of J. J. O'Neill, national Liberal, at Lancaster Sunday. He declared that the conference was doomed to failure unless the debt problem was solved.

PREMIER QUITS PARTY LEADS FORMER ENEMIES

Political Anomaly In Newfoundland Following Defeat of Government — St. John's Business Man Is New Leader of Liberals In Elections.

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., May 5. — Premier Warren, according to the make-up of the new cabinet which was sworn in before Gov. Allardice, Saturday afternoon has undertaken to fight the approaching election with his former political foes ranked under his banner, while his former associates are organized against him throughout the country.

Saturday's Evening Advocate announces that the Liberal party has offered the leadership to Albert E. Hickman, who has agreed to replace Hon. W. R. Warren. Mr. Hickman who is head of the firm of A. Hickman, Ltd., and is stated to be the most prominent figure to Newfoundland's commercial [illegible] reported to have won to his [illegible] practically all the rank and file [illegible] government membership of the House of Assembly.

Warren's Executive.

The new Warren executive consists of W. R. Warren, Prime Minister and Minister of Justice; Hon. J. [illegible], Colonial Secretary; M. S. [illegible], Minister of Finance and [illegible]; Hon. E. Hawco, Minister [illegible]; J. R. Bennett; W. S. [illegible], Charles F. Ayre, J. Alex. Robinson, executive members without portfolio.

C. Windsor and W. J. [illegible], Ministers without seats in the executive of the former having portfolio of Fisheries and the [illegible] of Agriculture and Mines.

The whole government personnel, with the exception of Hon. M. E. [illegible]co, comes from the old opposition party, which was defeated at the polls last year.

After the dissolution of the House several weeks ago, Premier Warren, it is stated, started a movement for accession to his party of members from the opposition, the old administration bearing with him up to a certain point but finally rebelling when he decided to throw overboard all his old cabinet.

The result appears that the Premier is about to fight the approaching election with his former foes ranked under his banner and with his former associates organized against him throughout the entire country.

Sir. W. F. Coaker Retires.

The Evening Advocate also announces the retirement from active public life of Sir W. F. Coaker, President of the Fishermen's Union. The Advocate adds that Sir W. F. Coaker has decided to devote his influence and activities to the cause represented by Mr. Hickman.

Among those directly associated with the new Liberal chieftain are: Hon. W. N. Halfyard, who at the time of the dissolution was colonial secretary; Hon. W. H. Cave, who held the portofolio of Customs and Finance; Hon. Hon. Dr. Barnes, who was Minister of Education.

Mr. Hickman thus has the active support of four members of the old Warren executive, while only one former member remains with the Prime Minister.

CARRY OUT DAWES' PLAN.

(By Carl Groat, United Press Staff Corespondent.)

BERLIN, May 5. — A coalition government, pledged to the fulfillment of reparations obligations, and carrying out the Dawes-Young plan, will probably take office as a result of the national elections in Germany Sunday, in which 25,000,000 men and women voted.

Whether the new cabinet will represent the present coalition or a new alignment of Liberal parties, depends upon the final returns which are still somewhat confused, owing to the presence in the field of more than 30 parties.

Although the Moderates won, substantial gains were registered by parties on both extremes. The German Nationalists Party at the extreme right, polled a heavy vote, while an official foreign office statement referred to the "frightful growth" of the Communist vote.

There were numerous conflicts between the extreme Nationalists and Communists in different parts of the country, two Communists and one Nationalist being killed in street fighting in Berlin, but the elections on the whole passed off in comparative quiet.

The heavy gains scored by the Nationalists, added to a strong Folkists' vote, gave rise for a time to some apprehension in government circles, but on the strength of returns up to noon to-day, it seemed the new Reich stag would be sufficiently balanced to prevent sabotage of the Dawes report.

The Foreign Office unofficial but apparently reliable count this morning was as follows:

Deutsch National	4,500,000
Folkists	2,000,000
Democrats	1,600,000
Communists	3,600,000
Socialists	5,600,000
Folks Partei	2,000,000
Centrists	3,700,000
Bavarain Folks Parte	750,000
Hanover-aner Party	100,000

All the larger parties thus far have elected one or two women. A heavy woman's vote was cast. Chancellor Marx and Foreign Minister Stresemann were compelled to stand in line behind some old apple woman at the polls, the crowd failing to recognize them.

Marx was re-elected, also Count Von Bernstorff, former Ambassador to Washington.

HELEN OF TROY NO GREEK MYTH

Egyptologist Finds Manuscript In Tutankhamen's Tomb That Tells of Real Helen.

CHICAGO, May 5.— (Canadian Press.)—"The face that launched a thousand ships" was no figment of the imagination of Homer. Dr. James H. Breasted, just back from Egypt, has deciphered ancient manuscripts of a date contemporary with the destruction of Troy and finds the fair Helen coming in for notice.

This is the firs ttime a man of science has come out and admitted belief in what has been termed a Greek myth. If Helen was real, Paris, Hector and Romoche and the sulking Achilles must have been genuine. Dr. Breasted has been investigating King Tutankhamen, deciphering manuscripts found in the tomb. These scripts will amplify all history of Egypt now known, he says, and also will throw light on ancient Grecian affairs.

It is in this ancient correspondence that Dr. Breasted has discovered documents supplementing discoveries in Asia Minor, showing that Helen of Troy was a real woman and not the imaginative creation of a Greek minstrel. The manuscripts tell of a revolution during King Tut's reign. He gave the people liberty of thought and declared for one God. His widow lost the throne and it went back to the stand patters.

IRISH PEACE IS AIM OF THOMAS

British Colonial Secretary Deprecates Abuse of Irish Leaders — Reticent On Boundary Proposal.

DARBY, England, May 5. — In a speech Sunday at a Labor demonstration held here, J. H. Thomas, the Colonial Secretary, said the Irish boundary problem could not be solved by abusing the Irish leaders. Mr. Thomas declared there must not be talk of another war or of another attempt to coerce Ulster. Such a threat would not bring Ireland to a reasonable frame of mind, nor induce her to make a contribution to a settlement of the situation, which was desirable.

Mr. Thomas said he had refused in Parliament, and that he intended to continue to refuse, to make public the proposals he made at last week's conference, between the Irishmen on behalf of the Government, because the conference was private. The delegates were told that they could talk freely but publication of what had transpired would make it difficult to call them together again with any hope of settlement. The Government Mr. Thomas added, did not intend to treat the Anglo-Irish Treaty as a scrap of paper, but to honor it in spirit and letter.

Pipers Call Tune And Make Hearers Meet the Account

DETROIT, May 5. — (Canadian Press) — Four musically inclined gunmen serenaded Steve Kish, Roulo avenue, Springwells in his poolroom at that address yesterday morning and then held up the place to fortissimo accompaniment of about fifteen shots.

Three of the musical gunmen were singing and the fourth was playing a mandolin in poolroom. "Sweet Adeline" had been concluded and there was a moment of applause.

During the handclapping all four of musical gunmen drew revolvers simultaneously and started firing promiscuously. Bullets forced Kish and a dozen patrons to cover. Then the thugs took $80 from the cash register and walked to the street and escaped in an automobile.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Local Team Expects to Have Good Line-up in Baseball League-Motorists Organize.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 5.—When the umpire gives the order to play in the opening game of the Northumberland League season, some of the best players who wore the Campbellford uniforms last year will be in the local line-up again. They will include such reliables as Weston at first, Holmes on second, and Eagleson at short. Richardson, a new man in the team but a player with a reputation will cover third and these four should constitute an infield that will be able to take care of everything, flies or grounders, that come their way and who can pass the ball from one to another with the celebrity that is the delight of the fans.

In the outfield Blakely will be in the left corner and there isnt a better man for that position in the league. Hume, the heavy hitter will be in his old place at right and Cowell will play centre according to present arrangements.

Manager Davidson has a large force of pitchers and catchers from which to make a selection. The pitchers are Brady, who more perhaps, than any other man brought the team so close to first place last year and who is in better shape for the coming season, Watson, a sidewheeler, and Clemens. The team started last season with untried pitchers, but it will be different this year.

The members of the catching staff are: Nesbitt, who officiated so often and so successfully behind the bat last year. Capt. Hoyland, manager of the Regent Theatre, who will on the diamond seek relaxation from his theatrical cares and who as a player has had experience in Belleville and Toronto and Armour, with Warkworth in 1923.

Season Opens May 21

The 1924 season opens at the Fair grounds here on May 21st with Roseneath as the opposing team. This is a nine, which like Campbellford and Orland, did not find its stride last year until near the close of the season when it was going strong. The Roseneaths have the loyal support of the residents in their district, one of the best incentives any team can have to do their best. They have an official staff composed of some of the most efficient and enthusiastic baseball men in the country. Every weak spot in the line-up has been strengthened and Roseneath is one of the teams that has to be seriously reckoned with in the fight for the Clarke Cup this year. The opening game of the season here will certainly be worth seeing.

Different This Year

No one but a man possessed of the optimism and the true sporting spirit for which Manager C. H. Davidson is noted, would have had the enterprise to organise a baseball team here last year in the face of the discouragements that were thrown in the way of the project. Campbellford was essentially a lacrosse town. There were few ,if any baseball players in the municipality but Manager Davidson secured all local material available and then raked the surrounding country district for the remainder. Brady, Hume and Eagleson were his discoveries.

Manager Davidson alone financed the team from the start. He went into the league with an untried team that at the ouset wereunable to locate themselves and the attendance was not liberal but the manager held on in spite of discouragement, weeded out the team, finding new talent, and when the seasons' schedules were completed Campbellford tied with Warkworth for second place, losing out on the playoff, by a narrow margin. This year the team goes into the race with the prestige of a creditable record.

Officers of the Club

The following are the club officers for the coming season:

C. L. Owen and Major J. M. Bygott, honorary presidents.

Charles Nadoo, president.

William J. Sarginson, vice-president.

Roy Bell, secretary-treasuder.

C. H. Davidson, manager.

Cliff Weston, captain.

A. J. Wood and Marshall West, umpires.

At the opening game here Mayor Myers will pitch the first ball which will be caught by President Nadoo.

Out at Orland

Orland is another of the Northumberland teams that has been strengthened this year, especially so by its amalgamations with Warkworth. Orland has a number of brilliant individual players last year and the most of these have been retained

No team ever goes into a race without an ambition to win the trophy of championship. Orland has another and more immediate objective than the Clarke Cup. That team aspires to get on an exhibition game with Trenton before the opening of the season and by defeating the leaders of last year's league the struggle for the main trophy with the prestige such a victory would give them.

Autoists Organize.

The officers of the Campbellford branch of the Ontario Motor League, for 1924, are as follows: Fred W. Wood, president; J. A. Irwin, secretary-treasurer. These officers, with Wesley Stephens and J. Nelson Stone will form the executive committee, whose first duty will be to make a drive for new members, the objective being 35. Signs will be put up for the guidance of motorists on all the thoroughfares leading out of town. It is also proposed to improve the signs put up last year by the council at the town limits, which do not give the name of Campbellford but simply inform visitors that they must not run their cars faster than 15 miles an hour.

Visitors might easily pass through Campbellford without knowing the name of the place. This oversight is to be remedied and instead of setting a speed limit, it is proposed to put on the new sign, under the name of the town, the request, "Please Observe Motor Laws."

Goes to Orillia.

Rev. J. J. Black, pastor of the Presbyterian churches at Burnbrae and Rylstone, informed his congregation yesterday morning that he had finally decided to accept the call which he had received some time ago to become assistant pastor and director of religious education in St. Andrews church Orillia. The change take place on July 1st, and the Kingston Presbytery, in which Mr. Blake's present charges are situated, will deal with the matter at the next meeting.

Mr. Black's decision has caused universal regret among his people, as he was highly esteemed both for his pulpit and pastoral work among whom he had labored for the past six years, his first charge after leaving college. The call to Orillia, however, is one which no rising young pastor would care to ignore, and as no other applicant for the position was ever heard, it is evident that the people of Orillia were not slow to recognize the talent which the people of the Burnbrae district hold in such regard.

At St. Andrew's.

The preacher at St. Andrew's last night was Rev. Alex. McMillan, of Toronto, field secretary for the praise work of the church. At the conclusion of the service a special service of praise was held in the school room.

The school cadets attended the morning service in their neat uniforms and listened to an eloquent sermon on their duties as future citizens, by the pastor, Rev. C. E. McIntosh.

A Cooking Sale.

The cooking sale given by the Bemersyde chapter of the I.O.D.E. on Saturday afternoon and held in the basement of the public library was a success.

Miss Atkinson (the Regent), Miss M. Smth and Miss E. Dafoe met in the morning and decorated the room.

Those in charge of the tea tables were: Misses M. Smith, E. Dafoe, H. Riendeau, H. Wood, E. Smith, E. Irwin, with Miss H. Redden as cashier. The centre of each table was decorated with violets and Hepaticas and the menu was salads, jelly, bread and butter, cake and tea.

The cooking table was in charge of Misses H. Atkinson, H. Tait, H. McCaulley, E. Meiklejohn, with Miss E. Ferris as cashier. Miss L. Gay looked after the tea.

The proceeds amounted to over forty dollars. The young ladies of the chapter received many compliments on the success of the sale and also on the daintiness of the menu.

A few of the baskets made by the blind, which were left, were sold during the afternoon.

Miss Grace Irwin, Front street, spent the week end with Miss Barbara Farwell at Havelock.

Mrs. S. J. West, who has been spending the last six months visiting her parents in England, and other friends, returned to Campbellford on Saturday night. Mr. Parish went to Montreal to meet Mrs. Parish and returned on Saturday.

AT THE REGENT.

The programme for the week at the Regent Theatre is as follows:

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday —"A Woman's Woman," with comedy by Mack Sennett.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with Saturday matinee—"My Wild Irish Rose," another episode of the serial, "Speed," and Larry Semon in "Lightning Love."

PROTECTING THE CHILDREN.

"Drive Slowly" signs in the vicinity of the city schools will be a warning to many drivers who are inclined to be careless or forgetful.

One of the big problems caused by the development of motor traffic is to protect the children, and it can only be solved by general co-operation.

Parents and teachers must lose no opportunity of impressing upon youngsters the peril that awaits them upon the streets.

At the same time motorists should remember that there is no sure way of predicting what a child will do and should therefore see to it that their cars are under such control that an unexpected movement on the part of a youngster can be prevented from developing into an accident.

The man who realizes fully that at any movement a little tot is liable to run out into the roadway is not likely to have many accidents, for he will always drive with that thought in his mind.

The real menace is caused by the irresponsible driver who delights in running his car at the speed limit or beyond it regardless of traffic conditions or anything else.

Safety signs near the schools may help some of this class to realize the chances they take.

CHILDREN AND FLOWERS.

In seeking to engage the interest of the school children of the city in the growing of flowers and gardening generally the Horticultural Society is moving in the right direction.

The boys and girls of today will be the home-makers of the future, and if large numbers of them can be inspired to interest themselves in horticulture there need be no worry about the Ptecrborough of twenty years hence.

Unfortunately, the tendency has been away from rather than toward such a development.

There are so many activities and recreational facilities for children nowadays that it is the unusual thing to find boys or girls concerning themselves with gardens.

For some years a prize offered by the Horticultural Society for the best bed of flowers grown and cared for by a boy or girl under sixteen years of age has gone unclaimed, the Examiner understands.

The new campaign of the society which makes children members for a fee of ten cents, provides them with flower-seeds and includes an exhibition toward the end of the summer should go a long way toward correcting a condition that needs some attention.

Good results should follow, but the total benefit may not be immediately realized.

It will be reflected in well-kept gardens and trim lawns a decade or two later on.

PETERBOROUGH'S NEW PARK.

Mr. H. J. Moore of the Forestry Department of the Ontario Government and incidentally one of the best authorities on horticulture in the Province, declares that Armour's Hill is one of the best locations he has seen for park purposes, and that the foresight of the Patriotic League of Ashburnham in securing the property will be appreciated by the entire city before very many years.

The Examiner's opinion is the same as that of Mr. Moore.

The lack of vision of the citizens who twice voted down the purchase of this property has always been a matter for surprise, and there is not the slightest doubt that as the development of the park proceeds the bitterest enemies of the proposal will readily confess that they were mistaken.

Fortunately, the Ashburnham organization stepped into the breach and saved the property for the citizens, and at the present time six thousand Scotch and Jack Pine trees are being planted on the hill under the direction of Mr. Moore, whose success in laying out the beautiful Victoria Park at Niagara Falls shows his calibre.

In a few years the barren hill will transform into a beautiful park, one of the show-places of Peterborough, and citizens will be proud to take their visitors there and gloat over the wonderful view to be obtained from the heights.

FOOLISH TALK ABOUT THE EMPIRE.

In the debate which took place at Westminster on Wednesday on the Labor Government's Budget, Sir Robert Horne, a former Chancellor of the Exchequer, said that he saw

"No prospects at all of holding the British Empire together if the Government was going to flout the resolutions passed at the Imperial Conference last autumn."

Such talk is both mischievous and foolish. So far as Canada is concerned—and there is reason for believing that the same thing holds true of the other Dominions—it is as misleading and as fantastic as anything that could possibly be said. Canada's position in respect of Imperial preference (which was the particular question which Sir Robert Horne was referring to) is been defined again and again. Briefly, it is that while she would welcome any favors that the Mother Country might grant her in the way of tariff preferences, she recognizes that Britain has a perfect right to make her fiscal policy in her own way and for her own benefit, Canada reserving the same right for the Canadian people.

And that, surely, is the sensible thing to do. A country's fiscal policy is its domestic policy. It is as much domestic policy as taxation, which, in fact, it is. That being so—and not even Sir Robert Horne will challenge it—the idea that the Canadian people, or the people of any other part of the Empire, should adopt a truculent attitude toward the Mother Country and say to her in effect, "you tax your people for our benefit, or we will get out of the Empire altogether," is nothing short of repugnant.

There are some people in Canada who are eternally fearful that somebody in Downing Street is constantly sapping our liberties. There are some people in England who are constantly terrified by the spectre of Canada getting out of the Empire. And they are both equally absurd. If their warped ideas were anywhere near being right, then the Empire would have collapsed years ago.

Fortunately, they are hopelessly and completely wrong. Records—records that cannot be challenged—show that there is nobody in Downing Street who wants Canada to have other than liberty untrammelled and complete. Record equally unchallengeable makes it grotesque to suggest, as Sir Robert Horne suggested, that Canada's remaining in the Empire is a matter of dollars and cents.

Sir Robert Horne paid a flying visit to this country last fall, and upon returning home told the people of England that "influential Canadians" told him that unless Canada was granted a preference Canada would break from the Empire. It would be interesting to know who those "influential Canadians" were. We venture to think that, if such people exist at all outside of Sir Robert Horne's electioneering imagination, they are confined to a few British-born who come over here and who, unlike the vast majority of the British, live in the political metaphors of a quarter of a century ago, and are incapable of understanding the Canadian temperament and position. Certainly Sir Robert Horne was told no such foolish thing by Mr. Meighen, and just as certainly he was not told it by either Mr. Forke or Mr. King. Yet his words were seized upon with delight by every newspaper in the world that wants to see the Empire smashed from the Hearst press to Mr. John Devoy's Gaelic American.

It is good to note that Sir Robert Horne was sharply rebuked by Mr. J. H. Thomas, the Colonial Secretary. 'Stop talking," said Mr. Thomas, "as if the Empire were the property of one section, and realize that on the government benches—indeed, in all quarters of this House—you will find men to co-operate with you in doing their very best for the Empire."

So far as Canada is concerned, the Journal is convinced that instead of Canadians believing that Britain is not doing enough for them they are rather ashamed to confess that they are not pulling their load in the boat with Britain. In other words, that Britishers are already taxing themselves too much for the benefit of Canada—such as in the case of naval defence. Not one-tenth of one per cent. of them harbor the foolish miserable attitude credited to them by Sir Robert Horne.—Ottawa Journal.

GERMANY'S "LUNATIC FRINGE."

Germany provides for her "lunatic fringe" in politics better than we do. This is one of the merits of her twenty-three party system, which makes it easier for the extremists of all sorts to satisfy their longing for self-expression. Under what other plan could a program such as that put forth by the Pan-German League find a suitable place? It may be summed up: "Down with the Allies, down with the German Republic and three rousing cheers for the old Germany to return!" It calls for vengeance upon Stresemann, Marx and other "traitors" who advocate support of the Dawes plan. Its every word is written in fire.

Its chief weakness is that it is obviously composed by a member of the Green Cheese Club, and that its effectiveness rests on one of those giant "ifs" which are such a comfort to all who are discontented with the present. It shows a Bryan-like faith that a million men will spring to arms to defend the embattled Pann-Germans, and a Bryan-like incapacity for inquiring as to the quantity and kind of arms available, and as to the forces against which they might have to be employed. It brushes aside all that has happened since 1918. The head of the Pan-German League would have done well to take as the text for his rallying address the words of the excellent Mrs. Malaprop: "We will not anticipate the past; so mind, young people, our retrospection will be all to the future."

A similar group met the other day to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the founding of Germany's Colonial policy. It drew up a platform demanding the immediate return to Germany of all her former Colonial possessions. It might even have gone further and asserted that the Berlin-Bagdad Railway plan, and the hopes of a Greater Germany, and the ambition of having more places in the sun, could be realized by a little serious effort. All that is necessary is bravely to insist that the past should be annulled and that what Germany surrendered by the Versailles Treaty should be returned to her.

Even the German lunatic fringe has not exhausted the possibilities. Logic demands that the Versailles Treaty be undone, precept upon precept, line upon line. What, then, of the skull of the great Sultan Mkwawa? According to Article 246 of the treaty, this was to be handed over to his Majesty's Government within six months after the signing of the treaty at Versailles. Has this injustice been righted, or will the twenty-fourth party in Germany bring this issue into the campaign and insist that Mr. MacDonald forthwith return the great Mkwawa's skull if he expects to see the peace that passeth understanding in Europe?—New York Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The number of motor licenses issued here this year is expected to reach 4,000. Watch your step.

After fifty years' experience Judge Avory of England says that the abolition of capital punishment would lead to a disastrous increase in crime. His remarks are referred to sentimentalists in the House of Commons.

Although the result of the vote is a foregone conclusion, the Ottawa House will continue the debate on the Budget for at least another week.

Russia is now to be known as the Union of Soviet Socialistic Republics, a name that will give the soapbox orators something to talk about.

Reports indicate that the district will attract more than its usual share of the tourist traffic this summer. The effect upon business conditions in many lines will be marked.

Montreal will have daylight saving again this year. No large centre that has given the system a fair trial seems anxious to give it up despite the disadvantage caused by the fact that it is not carried out on a national scale.

LATE SESSION OF MONAGHAN COUNCIL

Sat Until Two Hours After Midnight—Tax Roll Returned — Total For 1923 Was $30,396.54.

The North Monaghan Council held a special meeting at the Court House on Monday evening. Several delegations were present which kept the meeting until 2 o'clock the next morning. Mr. John MacVicar, District Engineer of County Roads, and Mr. Smythe of the Department of Public Highways, were present and discussed with the council the question of dealing with commuted Statute Labor and the whole township paying a flat rate of so many mills on the dollar.

A committee, composed of Mr. J. A. Doherty, W. C. Bennett, sr., and R. H. Bennett, were present on behalf of the T.A.S. Park and pressed their request for repairs on the road leading into the park. Mr. Doherty and Mr. Bennett stated that it was impossible to get to and from the park during the summer season with a car, on account of the impassable condition of the road.

Reeve Rye assured the delegation that the council would discuss the matter further with the object of devising some means of getting material to fill the ruts in the wheel tracks, such as field stone or crushed stone.

A letter from Mr. Panter asking permission to put in a drain pipe in front of his property and covering the said pipe for an approach was read. The request was granted on condition that the pipe laid be not less than 10 inches.

Mr. John Whitfield, tax collector of North Monaghan, was present, and made his return for the year 1923. The total of the tax roll was $30,396.54, five per cent. collected equalled $108.37. Taxes remaining unpaid, and returning against the land, $788.21. Poll tax not collected, $16.25. Error in statute labor, $2.50.

A resolution was passed that the tax collector's final report be accepted and that he be paid a salary of $200.00, also in allowance of receipt tax and bailiff's fees, $17.50. The Court of Revision will be held at the Peterboro' Court House on Monday, May 26th, at 2 o'clock.

FABLES ON HEALTH

KEEPING BABY COOL

Summer heat! With everybody uncomfortable, particularly the baby.

Mr. Mann of Anytown fretting around, wondering what he could do to make himself cooler, and disturbed over the discomfort of the child!

Summer days are petulent days for baby: restless, erving days.

A few, easily done things will always help.

Sponge the child off at least three or four times a day. Wipe its face and head with a cool (not cold) cloth about once an hour. If the baby's skin is easily irritated try the bran bath, which is prepared by placing a cupful of bran in a muslin bag and pressing it out in bath water. Dust talcum powder carefully over the body after each bath.

As a protection against flies and mosquitoes, have screens on the windows, or throw a soft cloth netting, in tent fashion, over the crib, arranging this so that it will be free from the child's body.

DIFFERENT BOBS.

All bobbed heads are not smoothly plain or elaborately curled. Some are cut to form an uneven line and give a certain shaggy look. This should be adopted, however, only by the exotic type.

A True Story of Brown's Success

"Use the Bell to Sell"

J. M. McHardy
Manager

"WHERE do you buy your groceries?" we heard Mrs. Martin ask a friend.

"Oh, Brown sells us our groceries. He calls up every morning between 9.30 and 11 and by that time we know what is needed."

Brown is proud of his grocery business. He should be. It is growing rapidly.

He doesn't depend on a telephone. He has three. One to buy with; one to sell with; one to take orders over.

He knows the value of "adequate equipment, intelligently used."

Brown's example can be followed to good advantage (and is) by many dealers and wholesalers. They develop and hold out-of-town trade though they see their customers seldom—if at all.

Business has a way of seeking out the man who is equipped to handle more. Calling out-of-town customers on a certain day each week often proves highly profitable. Letting them know you want such business and guarantee first-class service, helps a lot.

Take an SMP Enameled Ware Sauce Pan, and a sauce pan of equal size made of aluminum, tin or other metal. Into each pour a quart of cold water. Set both sauce pans over the fire. The water in the SMP Enameled Ware Sauce Pan will be boiling merrily in about five minutes, while the water in the all-meta sauce pan will come to the boil in about eight minutes—three minutes longer. WALKS ALL NIGHT WITH DYING BABY

Officers of U. S. Indian Department Urge Immediate Transfer of Oklahoma Indians Back Under Federal Control

By ROY J. GIBBONS.

MUSKOGEE, Okla., May 2.—Nothing can bring back to life the baby that Martha Axe Washington carried through the terror of a stormy night seeking medical aid to save her little one from death.

Martha is one of Oklahoma's poor rich Indians now recoiling under what he paradoxically brands the curse of wealth that came when oil was discovered on her property.

A white guardian had been appointed by the State courts to take charge of her $15,000 yearly income.

Indian Department officials charge that this guardian had notices published in several newspapers notifying the world that debt contracted by Martha would not be paid.

They also say that the guardian took this action because Martha had moved from the county wherein the guardian lived to the home of her parents.

Rich in name, Martha on that fatal night trudged through the darkness clutching the dying babe to her breast.

But she found few who could understand her, and none, she says, who would help stem the ebbing life because she had no money to buy medicine or hire a doctor.

Martha's guardian brands as false charges that he was instrumental in depriving Martha of sufficient of her own funds to care for herself and baby.

At no time, he says, did he ever act in any way that would be prejudicial to Martha's best interests, and that the death of her child can in no way be impugned to any dereliction of duty on his part as conservator of Martha's fortune.

Officers of the U.S. Indian Department urge immediate transfer of the five civilized tribes—the Choctaw, Chichasaw, Seminole, Creek and Cherokee nations.

When the Government allotted these Indians and placed them on the rolls, there were 101,506 members holding title to 15,794,219 acres of land.

At the end of 1923 only 17,410 of these same Indians were subject to federal property supervision, and, according to the best of reliable estimates, had in their possession at that time only 2,051,812 acres of land left.

Of the 83,096 Indians removed from all restriction by the Federal Government, 98 per cent of the number are said to have parted title for what has been declared "inadequate compensation" to more than 13,000,000 acres.

But all the stir raised to resuscitate Poor Lo, in the opinion of veteran Indian Service employes, whose names, under promise of secrecy, cannot be divulged, comes too late to be of any practical use.

Says one high official of the Interior Department, who has watched intensely the supervision of all Indians since 1908, when State appointed guardians came into control over incompetent red men:

"Nothing done now can ever help the Indians of Oklahoma. They have been despoiled, robbed, exploited and treated in so faithless a manner for almost a generation that their case is beyond recall.

"The next 15 years will see Oklahoma with a race of paupers on its hands, devoid of livelihood, unschooled, and a burden upon the commonwealth.

"This is a sad transformation to predict for a one-time proud race of landlords reduced to abject tenantage through their own inexperience, or the cunning of their fellows."

The Brilliant Novelist of Modern Society

LEADING CHARACTERS:

Prudence Page, a pretty country girl has awakened from a brief and unhappy love affair with unreliable

Bert Traymore, a dfascinating philanderer, guest at the home of Mrs. Vansittart, wealthy women who owns Winston Towers. Another of her guests is

Virginia Dale, a blase beauty who has brought about a forced engagement between herself and

Peter Armstrong, brilliant young inventor, much attracted to Prudence, who, for her part, loves him deeply.

CHAPTER LXI

Air Castles

Virginia Dale, before the mirror in her bedroom at the Towers, was busily engaged in peeling from her face a green, adhesive mask of 'complexion clay'.

Virginia was strangely happy. She had two strings to her bow, now, and one of them extremely 'worth-while' too. That she was in love with Peter Armstrong, she didn't for a moment doubt.

And Bert Traymore's infatuation for her showed no signs of diminishing. He'd been awfully sporting in the way he'd 'butted in' between Peter and the Page chit, that memorable day in the hospital!

It was all the more commendable in that he didn't really care a scrap for Prudence. He'd told Virginia, repeatedly, that Prudence was the last creature in the world he would desire to marry!

"I can't stick these bread-and-butter misses! She's the world's prize-bore!" he graciously observed to Jinny, sure that his words would have a welcome here. "And if Armstrong weren't as dull as ditch-water himself, he wouldn't look at her!"

Virginia pretended to heartily concur in the latter sentiment. Her 'cue' was to make Bert think she didn't care a jot for Peter, but had only engaged herself to him (temporarily) for the purpose of extracting money from him.

"My scheme is—having brought about a definite engagement, and had it publicly announced, to make myself thoroughly obnoxious to the man! You know what a little beast I can be, when I want to, Bert?"

Bert nodded rather dubiously. Jinny was too cute, altogether, and he couldn't entirely trust her, and her schemes. She had seemed mighty keen on the Armstrong fellow, despite what she said to the contrary.

"And then——? What next?"

"Oh, men aren't angels of forbearance," she cried lightly. "Peter'll break it off. Then——you mark my words!—there'll be merry hell to pay, and all!"

Bert had given a grudging laugh of admiration. How clever Jimmy was! What nerve!

"Don't be too sure he'll break it off. Even though you have a devil in you sometimes, you're a beauty any man would be proud of, Jinny!"

("Dear old simpleton!" thought she amused.)

Aloud she said, with a shrug of her slim shoulders:

"Oh, much dropping of water wears away a stone. And Peter isn't as crazy over me as you think. A clever woman, be she as lovely as Venus, can soon make a man loathe her, if she wants to. And then poor old Peter'll have to stump up the 'consolation money'. I should think fifteen thousand dollars would be the right amount of balm for my broken heart, ha! ha!" sand dollars would be the right amount of balm for my broken heart, ha ha"

"Fifteen thousand dollars?" Bert's near-set eyes stared at her in amazement. "That's a sweet sum"

"Oh, I happen to know that Peter's last invention has brought him heaps of coin," rejoined Virginia airily. "I've got in touch with the firm in town that handles it. It's selling to beat the band."

"And you think the judge will award you that amount of money?" Bert looked incredulous.

"Uh-ha" She nodded her blonde head. "Trust me for making eyes at him, and getting on his soft side"

Bert was meditative for a moment. Then he sagely observed:

"I wouldn't bank on that. Awfully pretty women seem to be getting frightfully snubbed in the courts, these days. Vamping's out of date. Just take a glance at the papers—"

But Jinny wasn't listening. How could the subject really interest her, when at heart she hadn't the slightest intention of letting Peter go? No, not even for fifty thousand dollars! She wanted him!

Meantime, Bert was useful for the furtherance of her plans.

Now, as she unpeeled the green, clay mask from off her face, and leisurely dabbed on cold cream to ease the smarting, her thoughts were pleasurable ones.

Peter Armstrong was a rising man. He would be very rich, one day.

How she would love to spend his money!

He was well born, too. Jinny was a little snob at heart, a veritable social climber. She was glad that Peter's 'connections' were of the very best.

And he was handsome, too. She'd superintend his wardrobe, and make him go to the best tailor in New York, and order half a dozen suits, in lieu of the shabby garments he so often chose to wear. Nothing like having a well tailored husband to drag around to social functions!

How she would brag about his brains, too!

"My husband, the famous inventor—"

A town house she'd have. Better start now and study up on interior decoration.

And country cottage, for week ends. Gave one quite a 'cachet', to have a little week end place!

She'd travel, too. Oh, rather! Of course, Peter couldn't always come with her, but then it was rather fashionable for a young married woman to roam about alone . . . Not that a pretty woman ever was alone! Good gracious no! That was an exploded fallacy.

Jinny began to see herself in Switzerland at the winter sports, with a retinue of gay young men teaching her how to 'luge' and 'ski' and skate . . . forming queues of partners for her at the evening dances!

She visualized herself on board ship, the centre of an admiring throng! Down at Palm Beach, queening it over all the other women, a gorgeous figure in a bathing suit!

Or at the best hotel in Cairo, setting off on camel back for a moonlight glimpse of the world's great mystery, the Sphinx!

Or on the beach at Honolulu, with the crooning of the waters of the South Pacific all about her, and a handsome youth at her feet, singing a love song the intriguing music of his ukelele! Gently, sweetly, she would check the flood of his spoken adoration.

"No . . . it cannot be . . I love my husband! We have met too late!"

That New Charm

That free test will reveal it

New beauty and new charm have come to millions in this way. The whiter, prettier teeth you see show what this method does.

This is to bring you like delights by offering a ten-day test.

That dingy film

This method fights the film on teeth—that viscous film you feel. Teeth are not pretty, clean or safe when coated with a film.

That clinging film becomes discolored, then forms dingy coats. That is why teeth lose luster.

Film holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Such troubles came to nearly all under old ways of tooth brushing.

There are now two ways to fight that film, due to modern research. One disintegrates the film by curdling. One removes it without harmful scouring.

Dental authorities, after careful tests, have given these methods their approval. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

The use of this tooth paste has fast spread the world over, due to the evident results. Careful people of some 50 nations are employing it today.

See the film go

Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. It multiplies the starch digestant in saliva. Those are the factors which combat the mouth acids and starch deposits on the teeth. So this test will bring you new conceptions of what clean teeth mean.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

You will know in a few days that this new method is essential in your home. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

PRINCE LAUDS ART OF EMPIRE

All Schools of Present Day Painting Represented In Display At Wembley — Artistic Appreciation to Be Quickened.

LONDON, May 5.—(Canadian Press Cable).—The Prince of Wales in a speech at the Royal Academy banquet Saturday night described the Palace of Arts at Wembley as the first show of British art of a truly imperial nature. He said that never before had there been gathered under one roof the picked work of painters not only of the United Kingdom but of Canada, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, India and Burma. All the schools of present day painting of the United Kingdom were represented in the exhibition galleries. It would be interesting to see, he said, to what extent overseas painting had been influenced by the British schools. The Prince added that all who had contributed to the art display at Wembley would have their reward in the quickening of artistic appreciation, not only in the people at home but in their friends overseas who may see how British art has inspired the its place proudly among the art of noblest ideals and is able to take all-nations.

WHERE OLD DOBBIN STILL HOLDS HIS OWN.

A forty-horse train will trek the 70 miles between Vulcan and Calgary, Alberta, during Calgary's Annual Stampede first week in July. The trip will take about four days. The calvacade recently transported 1142 bushels of wheat over the same route, went on the elevated platform and unloaded without unhitching. It's believed to be the longest "team" ever harnessed together. Glen House of Gleichen ,Alberta, owns the outfit, and "Slim" Moorehouse of Vulcan, an old-time pack-train driver, will handle the reins.

Give the children WRIGLEY'S after every meal

A prominent physician says:

"It is surprising how free from decay the teeth can be kept by using gum after each meal."

You know how hard it is to get the children to clean their teeth. By giving them WRIGLEY'S you not only reward them for cleaning their teeth, but the reward is actually the means of performing this important service!

WRIGLEY'S aids digestion too, and acts as an antiseptic wash for the mouth and throat. Several flavors—all of WRIGLEY quality.

NO EXTRADITION FOR CONSPIRACY

Charles Matthews Cannot Be Brought From Hiding Place Across Line Without Another Charge.

TORONTO, May 5.— (Canadian Press).— People in touch with the probe into the Provincial Treasury affairs are expressing amazement that apparently no action has been taken toward bringing Charles Matthews, former deputy treasurer, back to Toronto. As yet the Police circulars asking for his detention have not been sent broadcast. No definite information could be obtained over the week-end as to the direction action was tending. It was stated that Matthews has been in touch with Toronto friends quite frequently of late.

It is believed by some that the authorities are in touch with him. The fact that no direct police action has been taken tends to strengthen his view.

L. C. Masson, son-in-law of Matthews is also still absent from Toronto and there is strong feeling that he is with Matthews.

Although the provincial crown officers have not as yet taken any specific steps toward having Andrew Pepall brought back from Los Angeles in connection with the trial of former treasurer Peter Smith, it is understood at parliament buildings that such action is contemplated. Mr. Pepall is named in connection with the conspiracy charge laid against Mr. Smith.

One difficulty at the moment in the way of Mr. Pepall's extradition is that the conspiracy charge in which he is named along with Mr. Smith, is not extraditable and some other charge would have to be laid in the papers for his extradition.

GREATER COMFORT FROM AUTOMOBILES

No Different People Have Radically Different Ideas About Riding Discomfort

BY ISRAEL KLEIN

One of the greatest problems upon which automotive engineers are centering their attention is that of producing better riding comfort for automobile passengers.

This is one of the five major projects the research department of the Society of Automotive Engineers this year. The other four are fuels, truck transportation costs, gears and highway contruction.

The problem of riding comfort offers particular difficulty to the engineers in that they have the human element to contend with. There is nothing stable which they can measure. Every person is different in his feelings and reactions from the rest.

Little information has been available even in learning what are the basic factors that determine the riding qualities of automobiles, let alone trying to study them and improve on them.

There is, however, a generally accepted working basis for the research activities into this line of automotive engineering.

The psychological and physiological effects of auto riding are being studied, for instance. What effect change of speed has on a passenger, whether one speed feels better than another, or what effect the seat upholstering has on the rider are all important questions to be consideered.

Then there are topics such as the effects of wheelbase length, spring suspension, unsprung weight, types of tires, types of seats, backs and floors and irregularity of the road, that are being studied scientifically.

Besides the technical questions applied to riding comfort, the automotive society's research department has to consider the varying sides of human nature, and the effects of riding changes, on different persons. For example, Dr. H. C. Dickinson of the United States Bureau of Standards suggests such questions for research as:

Do different people have radically different ideas about discomfort?

Are motions which are pleasing to some, displeasing to others?

Are persons equally sensitive to motions or forces in different directions and, if not, which are more important?

Use is First Consideration in Furnishing a Room

NOTE HOW USE OF STRIPED COVERING ON THE SAME HEAVY FURNITURE MAKES THE PIECES LOOK SMALLER AND THE ROOM LARGER.

Home furnishing primarily is based on utility.

A daintily carved chair, with finely embroidered covering, may look beautiful, but it is not interior decoration if it cannot be sat on. A highly decorative mirror, with grooves cut in crisscross fashion and fine curves across the whole surface, may be pleasing to some eyes, but of what use is it?

Such "decorations" merely add to the confusion of a room. Especially in this age of small rooms, should this be avoided.

Everything in every room must have a definite use. That is the first essential. To make these furnishings look good and pleasing to the eye is secondary.

Since use comes before beauty in furnishing a room the first consideration in buying or changing furniture is what pieces you must have in that room.

Pieces Needed.

To decide what are the essentials for any room, first consider the purpose of the room. The dining-room, for instance, is to eat in. Therefore its furniture must include only those pieces that are useful in dining. The table and enough chairs for the family and a few guests; the china cabinet, the buffet, the serving table and perhaps a tea cart. The latter two if the room is too small, may be dispensed with, they merely give added use and comfort.

A bedroom, being for rest and sleeping, should contain only those pieces used for these purposes—beds, a comfortable chair, a dresser and chair, a chifforobe and a small bed-table and reading lamp.

The living-room affords the freest applications of a person's individual tastes. Yet even here, unessentials should be eliminated. The living-room is for comfort and enjoyment and should therefore have comfort and joy-producing furniture. Piano or phonograph, soft, heavy chairs and sofas, reading tables and lamps.

And so on through the rest of the house, with only the furniture that affords use.

Purpose First.

With just bare furniture, however, the rooms would look forlorn and unappealing. Here decoration comes in. And even here decoration must be such as to help furnish the idea for which the room is designed.

For instance, a small room with a large, overstuffed sofa and chair in it, looks much smaller than it actually is—and much overcrowded. But you needn't discard these pieces if you have this trouble. All you need to furnish a more roomy feeling and more pleasant air is to use one of the many tricks of the decorative art.

In this instance it implies the use of vertical lines in covering the large pieces. Vertical lines, in dress, make a stout person look taller and thinner. They do this also to heavy furniture. A large sofa and chair in a small, low-ceiling room, if covered with a vertically striped denim or other material, would look smaller and would help the room look larger.

Crude Ideas.

The decoration itself must be useful, as well. For example, dinner plates painted with fruits or flowers, or sometimes a fish in their centre, spoils one's pleasure in eating anything else. And how much more disconcerting is it to be walking all over a bed of roses woven on the carpet or rug. It's not as bad, however, as being obliged to sit down on a beautiful damsel woven into the tapestry of a chair seat.

Yet these are everyday occurrences. They are not right, for they spoil the effect for which they originally have been intended.

How much better would it be to have a conventionally designed tapestry for the chair seat, or a plain rug to walk upon. A rug, anyway, should not call attention to itself.

Consideration of the use of these parts of a home would avoid such missteps in furnishing.

K.C. CONVENTION COBOURG JUNE 3

Local Council Preparing to Entertain the Provincial Executive — Highway Is Patched West of Cobourg

COBOURG, May 3 (Special).—The local council of the Knights of Columbus are already busily engaged arranging for the annual state convention, which is to be held at Hotel Cedermere on June 3rd-4th. A large number of delegates are expected. The Cobourg Motor League, at a recent meeting, decided to assist in the entertaining by furnishing cars for a sight-seeing trip about Cobourg and district. There will also be, probably, a lake excursion.

Address by W. F. Kerr.

On Friday Mr. W. F. Kerr, County Crown Attorney, gave an address before the Cobourg Rotary Club on "Commercial Law" that was listened to with much interest.

Highway Improved.

Autoists report the provincial highway west of the town, which has been in bad condition, to be now considerably improved. Gravel has been used on the bad spots and the road bed has been dragged.

Convention at Roseneath.

The various auxiliaries of the W.M.S. on the Cobourg Methodist district have appointed their delegates to attend the district meeting, which is to be held in Roseneath on May 14th. Already the Roseneath ladies are arranging for the entertainment of their guests.

Fractured Arm.

Kenneth Ferguson, son of Mr. Wm. Ferguson, Mill Valley, Haldimand township, was brought to the hospital here during the week suffering from a fractured arm, the result of an accidental fall.

Will Remove Here.

Mr. R. McCracken, of Tweed, is stated to have purchased the property on Cottesmere Avenue belonging to Mr. James Brewster, and will come to Cobourg to take up residence.

MAGIC AND JAZZ DECLINE

Chautauqua Managers Report Demand for Plays and Opera.

CHICAGO, May 5.—No more magic no more jubilee singers; plays instead of impersonators; less jazz—more grand opera, and lectures with a purpose by men who have achieved are demands which indicate changes in the tastes of the American public, according to the Lyceum and Chautauqua Managers' Association in convention here.

"We haven't had a call for a 'humorist' in five years," said one manager. "The public wants humor, but there must be something more—a religious or educational value, though it can't be labelled as such. And the old-fashioned orator is gone, too."

More than 15,000 towns in the United States have a Winter Lyceum course, and over 5,000 have the Chautauqua circuit in Summer.

By No Means Allow Your Bowels To Get Constipated.

If you allow your bowels to become constipated you will have bilious attacks, sick headaches, coated tongue, foul breath, sallow complexion, specks floating before the eyes, whites of the eyes dull and yellow, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, as by doing so you will be able to keep well and have no more trouble with your liver.

Mrs. I. Rubin, Halbrite, Sask., writes:—"I was very badly troubled with constipation, often had bad headaches my tongue was coated, and I felt anything but well.

After taking Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills I have felt much better as they certainly did me a lot of good."

I e's Alive! Look at Him!

George Gillespie, the A.E.F.'s "finest and most complete corpse," wants the world to know he still is very much alive. He has been reported officially dead many times. At Romagne, a shell splintered 10 ribs. Then he was buried in a shell-hole, but managed to crawl out. The hospital he was in was bombed, and the ship he came home on caught fire. But now he cant show any disability and the government has cut off his allowance. He is an electrical engineer at the Hawthorne works of the Western Electric Company in Chicago.

WHEN YOUR ABLE TO SEE BY RADIO.

The Appeal of Singing, Acting and Other Theatricals in Two Ways, By Eye and Ear.

Old P. T. Barnum must have turned over in his grave the other night when a dress rehearsal of one of the big circuses was broadcast by radio. Not that the show wasn't any good. The circus itself was as good as ever—they average about the same, year after year.

But the broadcasting was disappointing, for the very simple reason that the circus is an 'eye show." It appeals by glitter and swift movement and rapid changes. We never realized how little there is in a circus, appealing to the ear, until we picked it up by radio.

Hearing a circus that you can't see is like eating a meal without a sense of smell.

* * *

Women's voices do not broadcast as clearly and appealingly as men's. Probably this is because a considerable part of the charm of a woman's voice is in seeing the singer. Her looks and her voice may be charming individually and separately, but we are accustomed to a blended harmony of the two. When the singer is invisible and her voice suffering by mechanical reproduction, something is lacking.

Maybe this is also true of male voices. But the audience is not accustomed to enjoy the personal beauty of male singers as a necessary Siamese Twin of their vocal work. No imagination is not strained when listening to male voices by radio.

* * *

The appeal of singing, acting and other theatricals is two ways—by eye and by ear. When there is an intellectual as well as an emotional appeal, there's apt to be a scant audience.

The appeal to the eye is several times more vital than the appeal to the ear. This has been demonstrated by the success of the silent form of entertainment, movies, though even in this field the effect is enriched by skillful orchestral aid.

But radio, now appealing strictly to the ear, faces a more difficult problem. "Radio will not be all around satisfactory until the radio bug is able to see as well as hear the entertainers.

The inventors are hot on the trail now. It probably will not be many years until the radio bug will have an attachment by which he will see what he is hearing. Radio has eliminated space as far as hearing is concerned, and the chances are that it will also eliminate distance.

A fascinatin prospect, even for the doubters.

CONDEMNED ESKIMOS PREPARED FOR DEATH

TORONTO, May 5.—(Canadian Press.)—John G. M. Christie, Spadina avenue, is in receipt of a letter from his brother, Charles Christie, accountant of the Akavik post, Western Arctic district, in which he refers to the hanging of the eskimos at Herschell Islands February 1. These Eskimos, writes Mr. Christie, as the hour approached for the execution, claimed that they had nothing to say, but that they deserved their fate and were prepared to die for their crime.

Aklavik is situated about 100 miles from Herschell Isladns and the letter, written by the accountant, told of raging gales, snowdrifts, piled ice and 30 feet high, with the temperature registering 50 degrees below zero.

TWO WOMEN SOCIETIES HAVE STIFF ARGUMENT

WASHINGTON, May 5.—(Canadian Press).—A pacifist fight nearly occurred when Mrs. Newport, president of the District of Columbia Society of the Daughters of 1812, interrupted a session of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom to-day, by asking: "Do you want to abolish the War Department? Have you signed the pledge to nurse no wounded soldiers?"

A loud hiss drove her from the hall, but in the corridor outside the argument grew wild between the partisans of the two societies.

After much wrangling with the Executive Committee, growing nearly to the point of blows, the disturbance was quelled by the hotel police. The meeting meanwhile proceeded regularly.

STUDEBAKER MAIL VETERAN OF WEST PLACED IN MUSEUM

Light-Six Which Holds the Pacific Coast Road Records Wins Honor Place In 'Hall of Fame.'

Made Records More Than Three Years Ago That Still Stand — One Will Probably Never Be Equalled.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., May 5.—The famous Studebaker Light-Six, which holds Pacific Coast records in fast mail carrying service arrived here today, and was placed in honorable retirement.

The veteran machine, still full of pep and power despite its gruelling service was moved into a prominent place in the Studebaker Museum—where many celebrated cars and vehicles with a romantic history are viewed each year by thousands of visitors.

This new addition to the museum of transportation in the Studebaker Administration Building, was sent by the Chester N. Weaver Company, Studebaker distributors at San Francisco.

Holds Many Road Records

Driven by Hart L. Weaver and James F. Gurley of the Chester N. Weaver Company, and accompanied by observers, this car made road records between Los Angeles and San Francisco more than three years ago that have stood unequaled by the officially-observed performance of any other car.

On February 2, 1921, it established a new round-trip record between San Francisco and Los Angeles, a distance of 864.8 miles, in the sensational time of 21 hours and 23 minutes. On the same trip it lowered the coast route record between these two cities by 2 hours, 35 minutes and 20 seconds, the time being 10 hours, 12 minutes and 30 seconds for the 453.7 miles.

Three weeks later this remarkable car smashed the valley route record between the Main post office at Los Angeles and Ferry post office, San Francisco, running the distance of 411.1 miles in 9 hours, 15 minutes and 5 seconds. It is believed that this time between these two points over this route will stand forever.

A month after these phenomenal runs, this Light-Six covered the 425 miles of narrow desert trail from Los Angeles to Phœnix in 13 hours, 16 minutes, cutting off two hours and 28 minutes from the best previous automobile record. The railroad time is 1 hour, 4 minutes slower than the record established by this Light-Six.

Museum Honor Coveted

To earn a place in the Studebaker museum, which is in reality a record of transportation in America, is an honor much coveted. Singularly, California contributed the two most recent exhibits.

The first was the half-million mile Studebaker Big-Six, which traveled in mid-winter under its own power from Los Angeles to New York and thence back to South Bend, after covering a verified milage of half a million miles in 5½ years.

The next and latest addition is the Studebaker Light-Six from San Francisco.

WOMEN OF ROSENEATH BUY VILLAGE LAMPS

Women's Institute Will Have Six Gasoline Lamps Set Up and Assume Their Maintenance—District Meeting In June At Roseneath.

ROSENEATH, May 5.—The annual meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 at the home of Mrs. J. A. Brown with a good attendance.

Final arrangements were made about the play to be given here Victoria Day by the Plainville Young People "Dust of the Earth."

The date for the next meeting was set on June 6th as that is the day the lady speaker will address this Institute and Fenella Institute. It was thought best to have the meeting in the village and on the lawn as it would perhaps be very warm for such a large crowd in a house.

As the district convention is to be held here sometime about the middle of June it was not thought necessary to appoint a delegate as everyone would have the privilege of being present and there was therefore no occasion for a report being taken.

Will Light Streets.

The next item of business was the street lights and it was decided after much discussion to buy six Coleman lights from the local agent. Mrs. M. Davey and Mrs. Turner were appointed a committee to buy the lights and engage a man to look after them.

A motion was made to send an application to the Department of Agriculture to have Miss Campbell an instructor give a course on sewing sometime in June.

This concluded the business for the present with the old officers. Those elected for the coming year are:

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Parton

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY

"If you want to know the truth," said the wicked fairy.

"Who else would you like to see in Once-Upon-a-Time Land?" asked Mister Muggs.

"Let's go to see the Sleeping Beauty," cried Nancy.

"Jack-and-the Beanstalk!" said Nick.

"We can't be two places at once," declared Mister Muggs, "so we'll go to see the Sleeping Beauty to-day and Jack to-morrow. Come along."

Away went the magic automobile past seven gardens and through seven lanes each seven miles long and there they were at the pearl palace of the Sleeping Beauty.

"Tap, tap, tap!" they went on her front door.

But there was no answer.

"Tap, tap, tap!" they went again. Still there was no answer.

But suddenly they heard a loud snore from within, so pushing open the heavy oaken door, in they stepped.

What a sight met their eyes! Everybody was asleep—servants—lords and ladies, and everybody.

"Well, I declare!" said Mister Muggs. "This is a pretty kettle of fish! Why, I thought that when the Prince kissed the Sleeping Beauty and woke her up, that broke the charm. When he married her and brought her here to his pearl palace, the story said that she lived happily ever after."

"Do you suppose Beauty is asleep, too?" asked Nancy.

"If you want to know the truth," said the wicked fairy, suddenly appearing, "it's just this. I came back after the Sleeping Beauty married the prince and bewitched both of them, and all their people. I never forgot that I was slighted at the christening. Never! And I'll never get over being insulted. So now I have put them all to sleep again for another hundred years. What are you going to do about it?"

"Waken them," declared Nancy.

"You can't!" It is magic sleep," cackled the wicked fairy. "The only thing that can waken them now is a hair from the tail of the iron dog that stands in front of the Fairy Queen's palace."

With that she disappeared into thin air, leaving a little trail of smoke behind her.

Suddenly there was a whirr of wings, and there stood Silver Wings, the Fairy Queen's messenger.

"We heard every word," she said. "I think it came by radio. And here is a hair from the iron dog's tail!"

So the three of them tiptoed to the room where the Sleeping Beauty slept and touched her with the magic hair.

Instantly the whole palace awoke and there was great rejoicing.

And the Sleeping Beauty and the prince gave a feast for the visitors. I'm not sure, but I think the wicked fairy was invited this time, and she got over being offended.

THE EXAMINER

EVERYONE NEEDS A LITTLE GARDEN.

Nature Plainly Intended Every Man and Woman to Till the Soil and Grow Part of Their Food Supply.

Every normal persons hears the call of nature at this time of year. Some answer by taking strolls in the woods, others by long auto rides in the open country.

But the greatest pleasure in springtime is planting home gardens, flowers and grass.

Nature plainly intended every man and woman to till the soil and grow a part of their food supply.

Working with our hands in the soil is the natural life.

Theres' a thrill unlike any other joy, in watching the gradual growth of plant life from the seed in the soil prepared by your own hands.

First the delicate green sprout, on through the various stages to the harvest of vegetables, flowers or fruit. The stages to the harvest of vegetables, flowers or fruit. The home garden is life on a small scale—a never-ending struggle for survival. The constant battle with weeds and insects is as fascinating a game as the struggle for success and against failure in the battle to "make a good living."

Home gardening is a sport. No baseball fans gets more genuine pleasure from a game than the dyed-in-the-wool home gardener watching his vegetable patch or flowers sprout and mature.

That's where health is—close to the soil. A patch of land only six feet square is the best medicine in the world for pale cheeks, fagged nerves, flabby muscles and sickly appetite.

Plant a garden—if nothing more than a bed of lettuce, which is about the easiest thing to grow in creation.

The garden brings health by fresh air, exposure to sunshine, moderate exercise, the relaxation of a hobby, and by a mysterious alchemy caused by contact with the soil.

If you have children, help them start a garden. It is, in addition to its health benefits, excellent training to make them think straight. The man who tills the soil absorbs knowledge of the laws of nature—and these laws regulate all human activities.

Nothing is more powerful than a garden to impress children with the fact that nature makes man pay the full price for every joy, every folly, every neglect, and that while effort occasionally is fruitless it brings sure returns by the law of averages. It is like life—all seeds do not sprout in the garden, nor all efforts in the battle for success.

The country is far away from the average city child. Bring the country to him by having a home garden this year.

CONSERVATION OF HEALTH IS TOPIC TODAY

Lr. T. N. Greer Tells Rotarians Community Should Be Able to Fix Its Own Death Rate.

LINDSAY REUNION

That every community within reasonable limits could fix its own death-rate was a striking statement in a scholarly and most interesting paper on "The Conservation of Health," delivered by Lr. T. N. Greer before the Peterboro Rotary Club at the weekly luncheon at the Empress to-day. President Wren occupied the chair, and the attendance was large.

Dr. Greer's paper was the piece de resistance of the programme, and was followed with close attention by the members as it developed the possibilities attendant upon a wholehearted and scientific plan of health conservation. Dr. Greer dealt with the progress that has been along health lines, pointing out the effect upon health of the growth of the modern transportation system, the establishment of a cold storage system, and other facilities that enabled a great change to be made in the diet of the people of to-day. He pointed out too the value of many discoveries made by facteriologists and medical research workers and the corresponding effect upon community health.

The time had gone by when the illness of a man was a matter in which only he and his family were concerned. Nowadays the health authorities wanted to know why a man became ill and what connection there was between his illness and the health efforts of the community.

The speaker stressed the fact that probably very few people even now lived according to the strict rules of personal hygiene, and pointed out what might be expected if such rules were generally observed. It would be quite possible to extend the average period of life on this continent from the 50 years that was now the estimate according to insurance experts by twenty years if there was general co-operation in a modern scheme of health conservation. It was necessary to recognize the importance of individual responsibility in such a scheme and to have the volition to discharge that responsibility as well as to realize the duty of each individual to help others from a health standpoint.

Dr. Greer was given a hearty vote of thanks for his splendid paper.

Rotarian James Boxall of Lindsay, who with Rotarian Adams, also of that town, was a guest to-day, brought greetings from the Lindsay Club, and as president of the Lindsay Old Boys' Re-union, extended a cordial invitation to the Peterboro Rotarians to visit Lindsay on July 8 and to provide transportation for the Peterboro band on that day.

The invitation was turned over to Rotarian R. G. Kingan for action.

Rotarian Kingan reminded Rotarians of the Port Hope Rotary Minstrel show to-night.

President Wren expressed the congratulations of the Rotary Club to the Peterboro musicians who did so well in the Ontario Festival, and especially congratulated Rotarian R. A. Brown on winning the bass solo competition.

Mrs. Duggan was sentenced to five years at the Woman's Prison at Sherborn, and Kane to three and a half to five years at the State Prison.

BIG PAGEANT AGAIN REPEATED SATURDAY

Notwithstanding the very inclement weather of the evening, the Grand Opera House was once again filled on Saturday night for the second performance of the big pageant of the gymnasium of the Young Women's Christian Association. The production received the same measure of enthusiastic response that met its presentation on Friday evening, the clever exercises and drills in physical work, the kiddies' "Peter Rabbit" pantomine, and the lovely programme of interpretive dances all getting repeated encores.

During the evening the physical instructress, Miss C. Littlefield, received several remembrances from her pupils. Little Moira Coutts and Eric Edmondson made the presentation to her of roses and a gift from the senior school girls and elementary classes; a box of chocolates was presented by the junior classes, and two small "bunnies" had charge of a large basket of roses presented by the ladies of the Board of Management. The pianistes, Miss Margaret Widdess and Miss Gwen Donley, also received bouquets of roses from the various classes. These were presented by Eric Edmondson.

At the conclusion of the production a flash light photograph of the Pageant members was taken.

The Young Women's Christian Association and Miss Littlefield are receiving many congratulations on the success of this year's Pageant, which was very satisfactory from every point of view.

CLEAN CITY IS A GOOD POLICY

Best Advertising Comes From Making Visitors Wish They Lived Here -- Peterborough Needs Growing Pains.

Streets and alleys in the city are the first points that a visitor sees, anod for tfis reason they should be kept spotlessly clean. In a city like Peterborough there are visitors every day who have never been here before and many will go on their way to give their impressions of this as a thriving progressive city or as a has been—just as they gain a good or bad impression. If cleanliness of the person is next to godliness surely cleanliness of the city is next to prosperity. It is easy for the visitor to to think that if the city is clean it is also prosperous. He will go to other cities and say so, and that is the best kind of advertising.

No town or city ever suffered in the eyes of strangers or got a bad reputation from having clean streets, bordered with shade trees well trimmed and cared for, with yards and houses bearing the evidence of being well kept and newly painted. Such a city is like the refreshing ocean breeze to the traveller who has gone from one dirty city to another until he has almost lost his anticipation of finding cleanliness and beauty in a municipality.

Peterborough has a justly earned reputation for street cleanliness, especially in the central district, but this is not all that has to be done. The whole responsibility for the civic reputation does not rest on the city council and the board of works. When visiting a strange city one is never stampeded into saying "I would like to live there" by the appearance of beautiful city buildings or sky-scraping theatres. He looks at the homes and if they are clean and fresh and well bordered with flowers and lawns he is very likely to say "This is a beautiful place to live."

Here is where the clean-up campaign inauguratd to-day by His Worship Mayor Turner comes in. It sets the people to work all over the city each around his own home and in his own neighborhood. It gets results that can be obtained in no other way. After such a campaign is thoroughly entered into the city is actually clean, far different from its former condition no matter how clean people thought it was.

Every public improvement organization, every club, every neighborhood association, every municipal department, should be united this week in one great and practical effort to create such a state of cleanliness, and then they should determine to preserve that condition, keeping it up. The city that keeps everlastingly clean keeps everlastingly growing. What Peterborough needs just now is some of the strong, growing pains produced by shovels, rakes, brooms, water, dump carts, and scrub and paints brushes. If all the people get on the job together and at the same time the city will emerge at the end of this week transformed.

Get behind and push the dirt out of Peterborough this week!

ST. ANDREW'S HAD AN ANNIVERSARY

Rev. J. M. Duncan of Toronto Was Special Speaker -- Sunday School Dedicated.

"Faith" was the subject of an inspiring sermon delivered last night in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church by Rev. J. M. Duncan, D.D., of Toronto. The occasion was the anniversary service of the church, and special music was rendered by the choir, which will to-night present its annual concert. Rev. J. W. Gordon, pastor of St. Andrew's, took part in the service, which was attended by the usual large congregation.

The record in Hebrews, 11:39 and 40 of a better thing provided was the subject of Rev. Mr. Duncan's address, which he delivered with a deliberate enunciation and remarkable simplicity that made a deep impression on his hearers. "The text points back to the list of men and women made famous by their faith," he said. "Abraham, who at the command of God left his home, kindred and country and went into a strange land; Jacob, an old man exiled in Egypt and drawing near the end of his strength, and his chequered career, blessed the sons of Joseph in faith that the God who had guided him had something good in store for them also; Joseph looked in faith to the freeing of the children of Israel; Moses resigned the advantages that belonged to him as the reputed son of Pharaoh's daughter.

Faith is a reality. There is a faith that waits and endures, and this was the distinctive faith of these old heroes. There is the faith that receives and endures. God has provided some better thing for us. "This does not mean that our faith is a better faith than the faith of Abraham and Moses. He would be a bold man who would say that he had a better faith than that of Abraham or Moses. Not that our faith is better but that our faith brings us better things through Christ that could only come to the world since He came to reveal God. We know now what is meant by the love of God. It is the coming of Jesus Christ and His sacrifice that have given us this absolute certainty of the love of God.

There is the faith that fulfils and completes. God has given us this better thing in that He has provided us with a part that we must fulfil. There is an obligation resting on us that they without us should not be made perfect; there is laid on us the obligation to bring to perfection and completion the things they have left incomplete. It is expected of us that we will catch the torch as it falls from failing hands and hold it high and hand it on to future generations undimmed.

"There they are, looking down upon us to see how we are carrying on in the struggles of life. They are filled with an ever deepening stisfaction when they see the cause prospering which they carried so well.

Let us seek so to live that we shall be worthy to receive the commendation of Jesus Christ, the author and finisher of our faith."

Sunday School Dedicated.

At the close of the morning service, the entire congregation adjourned to the new Sunday school building, when the session of the church and the building committee were called to the platform. The ceremony included two choruses by the children's choir, led by Mrs. J. A. McKone, a hymn by Miss Dorothy Engel, and a brief address by Rev. Dr. Duncan, emphasizing the value of the Sunday school to the church and the nation. Rev. Dr. Duncan also offered the prayer of dedication.

SERVICES AT THE CATHEDRAL

Yesterday morning at St. Peter's Cathedral, in the presence of large congregations, the Redemptorist Fathers, Rev. Charles Crowe, C.S.S.R., and Rev. Mark A. DeCoste, C.S.S.R., of Boston, and Rev. A. McCann, C.S.S.R., of Toronto, began the solemn fortnight's renewal of the Mission preached last year. In the evening, the Mission for the women, which will occupy the first week, was commenced. There will be short instructions at the Morning Masses, at five and eight o'clock, and the principal instructions in the evening at half-past seven o'clock.

The very large congregation of ladies present last evening for the opening sermon is positive testimony that the Gospel of Jesus Christ has lost none of its power to attract souls to Him. It is also cogent proof that souls need and long for the support of God's inspired Word. Man of his very nature desires life. The thought of eternal death appals him, and seeing nothing about him here below but constant change and decay, he eagerly seeks eternal truth which teaches him how to attain eternal life.

Father DeCoste preached the opening sermon, with a zeal, earnestness and clarity of doctrine and expression which produced a marked impression on the large congregation present.

Father DeCoste, basing his discourse on the "Value of the Soul," took for his text, "And the Lord answering, said to her: 'Martha, Martha, thou art careful and art troubled about many things, but one thing is necessary.'" Reviewing the circumstances which led up to Jesus' reproof of the worldly-minded Martha and his commendation of the listening Mary, as having chosen "the better part," the reverend speaker drew a parallel between the busy-ness in temporal affairs of Martha and the attitude of so many people at the present time, pursuing worldly pleasures and worldly benefits and forgetting the good of their immortal souls. "The human soul is the masterpiece of the creative mind of God." God so values the human soul that He came down from heaven, to live as a man upon earth, to offer Himself as a bleeding Victim on the Cross for the redemption of the fallen souls of man.

"Your soul is your greatest treasure. Consider what the saints of God endured in order to save the souls of men. Behold them braving the perils of the sea, laboring under the scorching rays of the tropical sun, or plodding along on the ice fields of the distant north. Think of a St. Francis Xavier who cast aside all that the world holds dear and devoted himself to the conversion of India and Japan. Think of a St. Vincent de Paul, who cheerfully gave himself up as a galley slave, in order to save the souls of men. To gain a human soul, the spirit of darkness himself will offer you the world. Think of the trouble he goes to, to seek out wicked advisers, bad companions, and seductive pleasures, in order to entrap the unsuspecting children of the world. King of pride though he is, he will stoop to the most menial service, to crawl beneath the feet of man, if only he can capture a single soul."

"Stand in spirit at the gates of hell and hear the poor lost creatures: "What hath it profited me to gain the whole world, now that I have lost my immortal soul."

"Your soul is not only your greatest treasure: it is your only treasure." In eloquent and picturesque language, here the reverend father reviewed the evanescent nature of the things of the world: wealth, honors, pleasures, all weighing less in the balance of life than the soul of one poor beggar boy, with his heritage of immortality. "And yet but one alone in all the wide universe does not realize the true value of this treasure which he possesses, and that is man himself. Why are you so quick to call in the physician of your soul? Do you recall the days when you said to the tempter: 'Take my soul but give me that glass of liquor, give me that vile companion or that forbidden pleasure or my ill-gotten wealth. I will keep that company that is an occasion of sin to me, I will frequent that dance hall and take part in those close dances that the devil himself would be ashamed to take part in, I will go out for those automobile rides that may lead to sin, you may have my soul, what care I for it, as long as my passion is gratified!'

"What if God were to summon you before His judgment seat to-night? Would you be ready to go and to render an account of your stewardship? You know not when your hour may come, but what you do know is that you have only one soul to save, and if that soul is lost, all is lost forever."

A concluding earnest admonition urged everyone to attend the services faithfully, and invited them to bring their friends, who will be heartily welcomed.

Has Science Now Conquered Cancer?

ANOTHER step toward the complete conquest of cancer has been made by the perfecting of a new X-ray tube invented by Dr. C. T. Ulrey, research engineer of the Westinghouse Lamp Company, Bloomfield, New Jersey. Dr. Francis C. Wood, director of Crocker Institute of Cancer Research of Columbia University, and director of Radiotherapeutic Department at St. Luke's Hospital, New York City, and who is one of the foremost authorities in the United States on the treatment of cancer, says that this new X-ray tube is the most important development of this generation for cancer treatment. The new tube is capable of giving out five or six times the amount of X-rays the tubes now in use do. It will enable specialists to treat a great many more patients than have been cared for in the past and at a nominal sum. The treatment with this tube requires but twenty minutes, whereas the old treatment, which is still being used, requires from two to three hours for each treatment.

The New X-Ray Tube for the Treatment of Cancer Is Capable of Giving Out Five or Six Times More Rays Than the Present Tubes Do, and Will Reduce the Duration of Treatments from Three Hours to Twenty Minutes.

At the same time Dr. Ulrey's invention was made public it was also announced that Dr William G. Spiller and Dr. Charles H. Frazier, neuro-surgeons of the University Hospital, Philadelphia, had perfected an operation for the relief of pain in persons suffering from incurable forms of cancer. This new method, which is called "chordotomy," whereby the sensory nerves are severed in the spinal column, has been made known to the Philadelphia Neurological Society. It is performed in selected cancer cases where the distress of the patient is so great that drugs fail to bring relief.

"The operation is 'a delicate procedure,'" says Dr. Spiller, "and it is not to be undertaken by one untrained in the surgery of the spinal cords. It requires on the part of the operator a visualization of the microscopic anatomy of the cord and a realization that a slight misplacement of the incision may cause motor-paralysis of one or both of the lower limbs. In six of eight cases where the operation was performed pain was ended."

Dr. Spiller says that while the operation will not be entirely successful in every case in which it is employed, since some pain fibers occasionally will escape the knife, it has been performed successfully in numerous cases.

Irrespective of the curing of cancer, the triumphs of the university surgeon in making possible an operation to relieve the pain of those doomed eventually to death has been declared by Philadelphia physicians to be a notable achievement.

Dr. Spiller and Dr. Frazier have published the results of their experience with eight operations for the American Neurological Association, to be preserved in the archives of the Neurology and Psychiatry Association.

Drs. A. Kotzareff and L. Weyl recently published in the Presse Medicale, Paris, a method of locating cancer or other new growths within the human body. For some time it has been known that radium emanations would have specific effects on cancer or other rapidly growing tissues.

The new method, as described in Hygeia, involves the withdrawing from the body of a certain amount of blood; from this blood the serum is obtained, and to the serum is added a definite dosage of radium emanation. When this is injected and a photograph of the body made, its presence in various tissues is manifested on the photographic plate.

When the method was applied to a guinea pig it was found that after a certain period of time the radium emanations located in the embryo and disappeared from the remaining tissue. In the same way the emanations tend to locate in tumors of a malignant character, such as cancer. The experiments have been repeated many times, but not in a sufficient number of verified human cancers.

If the results are confirmed they will unquestionably have far reaching effects on the clinical detection and treatment of new growths.

The microscope reveals that cancer tissue resembles embryo tissue and grows rapidly for similar reasons, Dr. Montrose T. Burrows, of the School of Medicine of Washington University, St. Louis, and director of the cancer research laboratories of Barnard Free Skin and Cancer Hospital, announced in a paper read before the Southern Medical Association. It cannot be cured by methods which apply to infectious diseases, for it is not due to a primary change in the body cells themselves, he stated, attributing

How the Powerful New X-RAY May Soon DESTROY ... Dread DISEASE

its cause to a condition which brings the cells together in dense masses, such massing of cells being essential to cancerous growth.

Growth was due, he declared, to a substance excreted by the cells. With this growth-producing substance the body cells also excrete a substance which has the property of coagulating blood if it gets into the blood vessels.

The investigations point to a cure for cancer by some way of controlling the over-production of the growth stimulating substance, Dr. Burrows stated, the best available method until more about the growth reaction is known being surgical extirpation or destruction by means of the X-ray or radium.

The view that heredity plays an important part in the production of cancer has not been substantiated, and it is said that it has not been proved to be of any practical importance in the case of man. Neither can it be said that the use of any particular food increases the liability to cancer or prevents the occurrence of cancer.

Cancer has not been proved to be infectious or contagious, and a careful investigation has failed to support the view that there are families in which cancer is particularly liable to occur. There is danger in long continued irritation, such as that from a clay pipe on the lip or a jagged tooth. Every form of chronic irritation, pus formation, or ulceration should be treated at once.

In almost every single instance, early knowledge of cancerous infection will bring with it a means of cure. The public should know that cancer in its early stage is almost invariably not accompanied by pain and may be painless throughout.

Statistics compiled by the United States Census Bureau show that 95,000 persons died from cancer in the United States during 1922. As against this figure it is shown that the estimate for 1921 was 93,000. In this account Rhode Island showed the highest death rate, 106 per hundred thousand. Tennessee had the lowest rate, 53 per hundred thousand of population.

In the opinion of Dr. Royal S. Copeland, United States Senator, and former Commissioner of Health, New York City, to-day's figures would seem to indicate that cancer is more common and more fatal than ever before. "The fact is," says Dr. Copeland, "cancer is more commonly recognized now than it was a generation ago. The means for diagnosing disease have improved; the microscope, the chemical examinations of the blood and other fluids of the body, the X-ray and other modern methods have made it possible to discover cancer and to determine accurately that it is really present."

MILK Powder MAKES Better BREAD

WHITE bread is so generally well liked by the public, as experience has shown, according to Dr. Walter H. Eddy, professor of physiological chemistry and chairman of the committee in charge of Practical Arts Research of Teachers' College, New York City, that they will not let whole wheat bread replace it in the every-day menu.

"Shall we say eat more white bread and reduce the cost of living?" asks Dr. Eddy. "The answer is 'No' and 'Yes.' 'No,' if we fail to properly select other articles of diet, and 'Yes' if we supply the things deficient in white bread; i. e., we might eat more fruit and fresh vegetables and less meats, fats and sugars.

"Now, milk is really the best single food with which to supplement bread. But, unfortunately, the same grown person who insists on his child drinking a quart of milk a day often will not touch it himself. Thus, you see, we run to food habits of people. So the easiest way is to put the milk into the bread, and this, incidentally, will improve the taste of the bread and at the same time furnish all food elements necessary to the body. Then we can eat what we want of other things."

With this end in view departments of physiological chemistry, cookery and nutrition at Teachers' College have all been working together, and they feel that, in part at least, they have solved the problem of better bread. That new standards of bread quality must be established if people are to be induced to eat more bread Teachers' College feels is essential. The weight of the loaf and the purity of the ingredients are all that are demanded of the loaf of bread now sold commercially.

"This is not enough," says Dr. Eddy. "These standards take no account of nutritive quality. The baker who puts milk in his bread should not have to compete in price with the one who uses only water."

So, not with the idea of producing a loaf that would be a complete food (eating would not be a very joyous affair if we lived on bread alone), but of making a bread that is far more nutritious and eatable than the commercial loaf, Teachers' College carried on many experiments.

The results prove that by using milk powder more milk solids can be got into bread than by using fresh milk; and that, since butter is usually eaten on bread, it is not necessary to have the added expense of cream, but that skim milk powder fills all requirements.

The following recipe was developed in the college laboratories:

	Cost.
Flour, 7 cups	$0.06
Water, 2 cups	0.00
Sugar, 2 tablespoons	0.0006
Lard, 2 tablespoons	0.025
Yeast, 2 cakes	0.07
Salt, 3 teaspoons	negligible
Skim milk powder, 1 1-3 cups	0.20
Total	$.361

Why Camera CANNOT Correctly PICTURE Running Horse

THE "slow-motion" camera proves conclusively that there are times when all four feet of a running horse are off the ground at once. Major-General Carter points out that many artists' pictures of horses with front and hind legs extended fore and aft at the same time are incorrect. In an article in the National Geographic Magazine he explains:

"We know now that at the moment of the ride, when all the feet of the horse are off the ound, the soles of the front feet are turned and not down, as in many pictures. It should remembered, however, that when the camera ches the horse with his legs folded up under in the air, it is not motion, but one arrested ant or position of movement—a complete st, in other words. It is only by remembering the positions of the horse's feet at the walk and trot that the trained eye comprehends the fact that the horse shown on one hind or fore foot is ning.

"No one has yet pictured the horse, either in paing or by photography, in such a manner as to convey the sense of exhilarating motion at the llop, with the feet and legs shown as science has by established them at each instant of that gait. While the artist's method of painting the horse at a gallop probably originated in Egypt, it found its way to the Orient and was unhesitatingly accepted by all the then known world as an easily understood representation of continuous motion at speed. As a matter of fact, the old illustrations of the running horse more nearly picture the movements of the dog at speed than anything else. If the actual trail or footprints of the running horse be examined, it will be found that the feet do not operate in pairs, but that each comes to the ground in turn, making imprints akin to those made by the spokes of a wheel.

"The trotter strikes, at the completion of each stride, on the forefoot of one side and the hind foot of the opposite side; thus always the legs of the same side move in opposite directions, the forefoot being raised before the hind foot of the same side passes over to its landing position. The pacer moves the two legs of the same side together in perfect rhythm, both when leaving the ground and when landing; this gait is clearer from interference than the trot and is a little faster. The runner differs entirely from the other two, in that at the end of each stride he lands on one hind foot. After the impetus of the next stride has been given by the hind quarters, the weight is placed entirely on one foreleg before the animal leaves the ground. It is this peculiarity of stride of the runner that places so much more strain upon the thoroughbred race horse than is borne either by the trotter or the pacer. Both the latter, with only a light harness upon them, bring their weight down on two feet, whereas the weight of the runner and of its mount is thrown entirely on one."

SOME Strange TALES About TAILS

PROFESSOR GUISEPPE RENATO some time ago published a profound and exhaustive study on the various functions of animals' tails, and the learned dissertation of the Italian scientist has aroused wide interest all over the world. Dogs' tails occupy an important chapter in Professor Renato's book.

Passing lightly over the fact that in the Arctic regions the tail performs the functions of respiratory organs while the dog is asleep, Professor Renato considers it important that this appendage, rather than a dog's vocal apparatus, is the seat of his conversational faculty.

"Above all," says the professor, "the tail of a dog is an index to its psychological state. The animal raises and wags it under the impression of joy; lowers it when afflicted, and trails it between his legs when frightened. One may actually believe that dogs have a caudal language, and that the wagging of the tail is the method of communication between dogs."

Among cattle and beasts of burden, the professor points out that the tail is a weapon of defense against flies and other insects, which, in the natural state of those animals, meant often the saving of their lives. In fact, he says that in the early struggle for existence in cattledom and horsedom the question of the survival of the fittest was purely a question of which had the strongest tail. This, he states, has resulted in the development of the tail muscles of a cow or a horse to a remarkable degree.

When a horse is struck on the back with a whip, it switches the spot with its tail. The horse knows it was a whip and not an insect, but the reflexive muscles of its tail are so highly developed that it instinctly switches before the horse has time to telegraph to his brain and put in a stop order. A cow finds it less fatiguing to keep up a perpetual up-and-down, side-to-side motion with its tail rather than the nervous, energetic one which the horse employs only when there is actual occasion.

The fact that wild sheep have very short tails, instead of the majestic ones of wild horses and cattle, the professor says, is due to the fact that the natural home for such sheep is in the high mountains where flies and insects do not abound, and where there is little use for the tail.

However, the long tail possessed by domesticated sheep, at least up to the time that the sheep growers cut it off for reasons of health, the professor thinks is due to the fact that among the Oriental people centuries ago the sheep's tail was considered the "piece de resistance" of every banquet, and therefore only those kind of sheep which had long tails were raised.

The fact that whales and dolphins have their tails placed horizontally rather than vertically the professor finds is due to the fact that these animals were not always wise enough to stick to their own social circle.

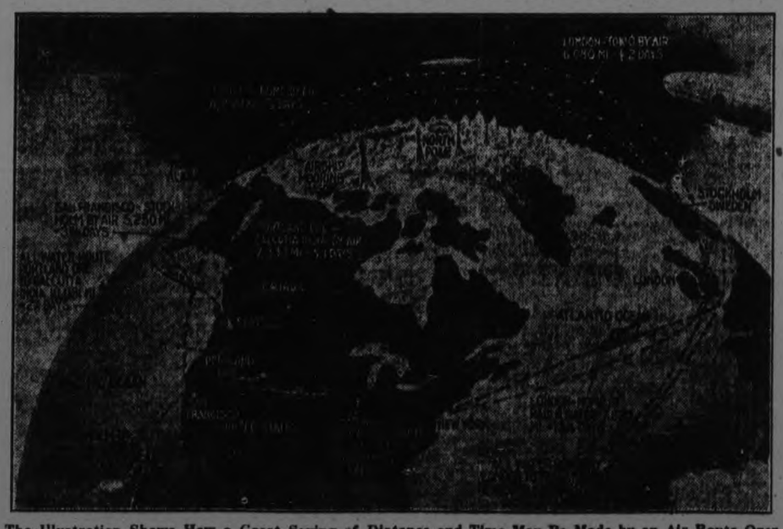
Having been born in the water they later took a try-out on land, but being obliged finally to give it up as a bad job, suffered the penalty of not having their tails restored to the precise position prescribed in the more fashionable circles of fishdom.

Shortening World's Mail Routes by Sailing Over the North Pole

THAT the North Pole region will be as well covered with aerial mail routes within ten years as the Atlantic Ocean is covered with steamship routes to-day is the opinion of Vilhjalmar Stefansson, famous Arctic explorer. In commenting on the contemplated trip of the giant Navy dirigible, Shenandoah, across the North Pole, which is scheduled by the Navy Department to take place early next Summer, H. Winfield Secor, associate editor of Science and Invention, says that there is no reason why the shorter distances between certain points which may be gained by taking advantage of air routes over the North Pole should not be realized with the present development of air navigating devices.

In the accompanying illustration is graphically shown the great saving in distance and time that may be made by the use of these air routes over the Pole. These courses simply take advantage of the saving effected by sailing the earth's surface on a Great Circle, a course long followed by mariners whenever possible.

Officials of the Aeronautical Division of the Navy have already contemplated making a base for the great dirigible at or near Nome, Alaska.



The Illustration Shows How a Great Saving of Distance and Time May Be Made by an Air Route Over the Pole, Which Is Effected by Sailing the Earth's Surface On a Great Circle.

HOW to PUT Your BABY to SLEEP

PROPER habits of sleep are almost as essential to the good health of an infant as is the right diet or sufficient exercise in the open air. Unless a baby gets plenty of sleep, he is certain to be nervous, irritable, and to grow more or less debilitated. During the first year, as a general rule, the more babies sleep the better. During the second year fourteen hours is the ideal amount and, in order to get this in, a twelve-hour night must be supplemented by a nap of two hours during the daytime.

The following suggestions for getting the baby to sleep are given in Hygeia:

The infant should be placed alone regularly at the same hour each afternoon and evening in a quite, partially darkened room or in a protected situation in the open air. Regularity is of the utmost importance. A baby put to bed late one evening cannot be expected to go to sleep promptly the next.

Nor should the baby be rocked, fussed over, or otherwise pampered at his bedtime hour. Such a practice, if indulged in, is certain to become habitual and react to the detriment of the infant.

Not only is it important for a baby to sleep a sufficient number of hours out of the twenty-four, but he should sleep soundly while he is at it. To insure this he should be protected, so far as possible, from loud sounds, strong light and tactile sensations of every sort. Young mothers are liable to make the mistake of disturbing their babies by unnecessary attentions. The less done to baby while he is asleep the better. Very often babies are kept awake by the mistaken ministrations of solicitous mothers, who fail to appreciate the fact that their babies' whimpering is in reality an appeal for sleep. A point, too, well worth emphasizing in this respect is that water given just before bedtime may consequently result in unnecessary disturbance.

Altogether, a maxim well worth bearing in mind at bed time is: "Let well enough alone."

Why Men's Clothes Are of Fixed Pattern

VERY few men ever dream of putting on any garment that would make them at all unusual, so men's clothes naturally change fashion very slowly, indeed. Man regards his dress clothes as a uniform for a particular occasion, and the uniform, of course, must with very tiny differences be the same as the other uniforms. Woman does not adopt a uniform fashion because she likes to look out of the ordinary, and her clothes must also be adapted to considerations of age, figure, complexion, and so on.

Man, on the other hand, sticks to one color and one "cut," equally suitable for all ages and types. His dress clothes uniform, though in this country kept for the evening, is in other countries the recognized wear for every function—at whatever time of the day—and a foreign gentleman attending any sort of affair will put on his dress clothes, or, as they are called, evening dress.

Why You Swing Your Arms When You Walk

THE pendulum-like swing of your arms serves the double purpose of helping to maintain a perfect balance and, at the same time of opening the lungs and assisting respiration, according to physicians.

Its origin can be traced back through untold centuries to the days when man moved monkey-wise on all fours.

Just as a walking animal will move his right foreleg and left hindleg in unison, so man's remotest ancestor swung his right arm in cadence with his left leg. When, as the years went by, the conditions of the world changed, and man at last stood upright on his hind legs he still kept this habit.

...cheerless weather condi-...ain and cold and with a de-...e threatening, the local ball sea-...on was opened at Riverside Park ...on Saturday when the Royal Cana-...dians of the Toronto Riverdale Lea-...gue, who were Ontario finalists last ...year, beat the Peterborough Central ...Ontario League team by 5 t., 0 after ...a game that under the circumstances ...was remarkably well played.

The Royals did all their scoring in ...one frame—the fourth—and with ...two men out at that. The break ...came when, with the bases full and ...two down, McCallum, the next hit-...ter, slapped a hot one back at Heck-...man. Had the Petes' righthander ...held t... drive or knocked it down ...the trouble would have been over, ...but he merely deflected the ball en-...ough to prevent a play, and the first ...run was across. Two more hits and ...a wide throw to the plate by Legon ...sent four additional counters in be-...fore the third out was registered.

The visitors were shut out in the ...other eight innings, while the Petes, ...whose hitting was as impotent as ...might have been expected from a ...team which has had no opportunity ...of looking over a fast straight one, ...let alone a curve, failed to drive a ...run over the plate.

The game, however, served to ...show that Manager Solomon need ...have no worries over his pitching ...staff this season. Everybody knows ...what Heckman is capable of when ...he is in condition and the performance ...turned in by Charlie Serth on ...Saturday demonstrated that the ...Petes have in him a lefthanded ace ...who will give the Central League ...hitters a lot of trouble in the cam-...paign that opens two weeks from ...Wednesday. The tall southpaw took ov... the pitching burden after ...the fourth and blanked the Royals ...in the last five frames, allowing on-...ly two scratchy hits and working ...steadily and effectively. Serth has ...excellent control and speed and will ...be a big asset to the Petes.

Defensively the home talent look ...strong. With two clever pitchers ...and a fast fielding team, the opposition ...scoring is not as a rule going ...to be heavy, and at this range it ...would seem that Manager Solo-...mon's chief task will be developing ...a punch to his attack.

The squad got but two hits on ...Saturday, a single by Holyman in ...the eighth and a similar safety by ...Swanston in the final frame, and ...not many ball games can be won on ...two singles. However, it must be ...remembered that the Royals' trio of ...twirlers were in good condition, and ...Maguire, the former Leaside south-...paw, in particular did not hesitate to ...use a hook early and often, while ...the Petes' gunners took no chances ...of hurting their arms. Heckman, ...who worked the first four innings, ...did not attempt to curve a ball, but ...seldom cut loose with a fast one, ...while Serth also had lots in re-...serve. The Petes' twirlers have two ...weeks' training before they have a ...league fixture, while the Royals op-...en their official season on Saturday, ...and the former could afford to go ...easy.

Both teams used big squads of ...players, and altogether twenty-sev-...en men got their names into the box ...score. At that the Petes were with-...out the services of Wolfe, who could ...not get off work in time, and Cook, ...who was called out of town. It was ...a good opportunity to try out mate-...rial and both managers availed ...themselves of the chance.

The fielding features were a ...snappy double play engineered by ...Swanston, Johnston, Harrison and ...Legon in the third inning and a ...splendid catch of a high fly back ...of third by McCallum, the Royals' ...left stop.

Under the conditions, with the ...players hardly able to keep warm ...and the spectators huddled in their ...coats, it was a good exhibition ...of baseball.

Hall fanned, and Legon was tossed out by a step on his bunt to Ramsay.

The Royals scored all their runs in the fourth. After Vanwinkle had flied to Hall, Compers walked and Dickson shot a double to right centre. Compers stopping at third. Hartman flied to Legon for the second out, Compers making no attempt to score. Reburn walked, filling the bases. McCallum singled off Heckman's glove, scoring Compers. Harrington drove a single between short and third, scoring Dickson and Reburn, and when Legon threw wild to the plate McCallum also registered and the batter reached third. Armstrong cut a single through Batten, sending in the fifth run. Ramsay was safe when Johnston dropped Holyman's toss to force Armstrong, but Vanwinkle ended the inning by rolling to Holyman, who forced Ramsay at second.

With Maguire pitching for the Royals Johnston opened the Petes' half with a walk, but died stealing after Swanston had fanned. Heckman also drew a pass, but Batten whiffed.

Serth was on the firing line for the Petes when the fifth opened. Compers, the first man up, beat out a bunt and Serth hit Dickson, putting two on the runways. Hartman popped to Johnston, Reburn rolled to Harrison and McCallum fanned.

In the homesters' half Harrison was tossed out by Maguire, Holyman flied to Vanwinkle and Hall fanned.

Harrington lined into Holyman's hands opening the sixth. Johnston threw out Armstrong. Maguire was hit, but Vanwinkle rolled to Serth.

For Peterborough Hall grounded out to Harrington, Legon walked and stole second, Johnston was thrown out by Harrington and Swanston lined to McCallum.

In the seventh Compers was safe on Harrison's miss of his roller, but died stealing, Swanston to Johnston. McLaughlin fanned, and Hartman was thrown out by Swanston.

The homesters died in order, Serth striking out, Collins flying to McLaughlin and Harrison missing three. Ball was the gunner for Royals in this frame.

Wienert, first up in the eighth, fanned, and McCallum and Harrington both flied to Legon.

Holyman opened the Central Leaguers' end of the frame with the Petes' first hit, a fast one through short. He went to second on Ball's low throw to first and to third on Moore's sacrifice bunt. Hall fanned and Legon popped to Compers, leaving the Petes' shortstop stranded.

In the ninth Fullerton struck out, Ball walked, but died stealing. Vanwinkle singled to right, but also went out trying to steal, giving Swanston four assists on attempted thefts.

The Petes had a great chance to avert a shut-out, for Johnston, first up, walked and Swanston singled through short. Serth forced Swanston on a roller to McCallum, Johnston going to third. Serth stole second. McCallum saved a run by a fine catch of Collins' ewisting fly back of third. Manager Solomon, who had replaced Harrison in the ninth to let "Hap" catch a train, had a chance to be a hero, but popped to McCallum and game was over.

THISTLES-VETS SCORELESS TIE

Second Drawn Game In Soccer League—Veterans Penalized and Used Only Ten Men Part of Period.

Ideal weather prevailed on Saturday afternoon for the soccer game between the Vets and the Thistles which resulted in a draw—no scoring. This is the second game that has been drawn in the league already. Early stages of the game looked promising until the Vets' player was ordered off which resulted in the one-back play—that never appealed to the large number of enthusiasts present. The Vets played with ten men for the rest of the period.

The teams:

Vets—Griffin, goal; Crowe and Wasson, backs; Mann, Parkins and Blowers, half-backs; F. Wade, Burrows, Dyer, McFadden and McGuigan, forwards.

Thistles—Curtis, goal; Rae and Anderson, backs; McPhail, Dawson and Hotston, half-backs; Melville, Hutton, Richmond, Williams and Burgess, forwards.

Referee—A. Mitchell.

Play Fast and Clean

Richmond started the game ten minutes late, and Melville and Hutton went down the right wing to give the Vets a fright. The Jags playing toe men, left Anderson as one-back until Rae arrived fifteen minutes late. Blowers initiated a move along the left wing but Dawson stopped them nicely. He swung across to Burgess who did not travel far when Crowe punted clear. Anderson returned into Vets area where Richmond lobbed the ball into Griffin's hands. Immediately afterwards, Richmond had another try that was unfruitful. At the other end Dyer was called up for offsides.

Griffin's Save in Goal.

The whole forward line of the Jags went down the field to press the Vets hard. It was at this period Crowe and Wasson were found sound. Burgess and Crowe had many lively tackles which always ended fifty-fifty. Parkins tried hard to open up the play and forced the issue at the Thistle end where Dyer, McGuigan and Wade tested Curtis repeatedly without any result. Again, a long pass from Hotston sent Burgess off, and again Griffin saved the situation through his run out of goal to kick clear with the opposing forward upon him. Melville sent an accurate centre in front of goal that went abegging. Mann relieved the pressure by sending Wade along the wing but his effort was nullified by Anderson at the right time.

McFadden Ordered Off.

Parkins sent the play back again into Thistle territory where an infringement of the game awarded the Jags a foul. The referee's decision was questioned by McFadden who was sent to the pavilion for something between the knight of the whistle and himself. With only ten men now, the Vets played havoc around the Jags' defence that stood the strain well. Rae cleared. Dawson travelled with the ball upfield. He passed forward to Richmond. The centre tried to carry the ball through with his hands that gave the Vets a free-kick. Dyer missed the upright from a long shot. Richmond repeated the same performance at the other end, alsto testing Griffin with a drop shot which was handled nicely. In a tackle between Crowe and Richmond, the latter was laid out for a few minutes. The Vets' half-back led an attack upon the Thistle goal where Dyer's parting shot went past the far upright, with Curtis watching it roll over the touch.

Blowers-Hutton-Melville Good

On the right, Blowers held the alert wing of the Jags time and again but had to watch the accurate passing of the pair on the right. The encounters between them were interesting in every respect and the game was played as it should be. A ruis-header by Wasson let Richmond through but Griffin robbed him at the critical moment. Then Dawson had a twenty-five yard drive that tested the Vets' goalie. A move by Williams was made to give Hutton a shot at goal that skinned the cross-bar. Just before half-time, a belated rally by the Vets side was dangerous but Rae and Anderson defended steady. Half-time—no scoring.

Half-Time.

On resuming, the Vets continued to attack and Dyer just failed to control a captivating cross from Wade, while later Blowers meandered through to finish one of his famous left-foot drives. Vets still worked around Thistle goal to get two unproductive corners. Then McGuigan, who was on the left-wing himself, tested Curtis twice in succession with low ground drives. In their anxiety, the Vets over-run the ball many a time when in good position to convert. A foul against Parkins looked dangerous. Crowe punted clear. Dawson trapped the ball, went down into attack that ended with a 25-yard drive over the bar.

Dawson Prominent.

The Jags centre-half brought forth the plaudits with a typical burst through that was spoiled when Richmond handled carelessly. Parkins and Blowers endeavoured to turn the play against Curtis and were very successful until Wade was drawn up for off-sides. At the other end, the Thistle left wing made progress until a foul against them was given for charging the Vets' goalie. No man was playing harder than Parkins to make an issue and his head work was a feature of the game throughout.

Vets Worked Hard.

The Vets chance to get a goal was enchanced when Dyer let drive from fifteen yards out. His shot was of the opportune kind but Curtis let the ball hit him nicely as he clasped his hands upon it. Both players received the hand. A raid down the wing by Blowers-McGuigan gained them a great chance to score through Wade. He was three yards in front of the goal, nobody to beat but goalie, lifted the ball over the bar amid shouts of "Oh!"—a pinch! Blowers then had a few long drives that were near the mark and on one occasion Curtis was compelled to give away a corner that gained nothing.

Melville Clever on Ball.

Richmond-Melville changed places. An elusive raid by Burgess-Williams wing seemed destined to bring success to the Jags but again weak finishing spoiled good play. Melville made things lively around goal when he went into centre and tricked Wasson-Crowe cleverly. In his headway dash, to unfortunately gave the Vets' player the uncalled push which gave relief. Time and again the "little fellow" manipulated the ball to his own fancy. Accepting a timely pass forward by McPhail, Melville beat the defence cleverly, then steadying himself, let drive for the insid of the upright cross-bar, to miss the corner by inches. Another raid by the Thistles was frustrated when Williams was called up for offsides. The Vets' defence put up a sterling game and played the "one-back game" to perfection. The last thrill was left to the last minute. Getting the ball at mid-field Dyer and Wade made a strenuous attack on Curtis' goal. Anderson tipped the ball to the side, then passed to Hotston who transferred the play to the other end. The whistle, therefater, sounded—a draw—no scoring.

An Experienced Referee

Mr. Mitchell who refereed the game has had considerable experience in many important games in the old country. His decisions were amicable in every way and as a "past president of the F. and D.F.A." said "that is the kind of referee we want then we will have real clean football in the city."

MASSEYS LOSE TO C. P. C. JUNIORS

Well - Contested Game At the Oval Saturday In Which Both Teams Tried Out New Material—Score Was 3-1.

C. P. C. Juniors defeated Masseys by the score of 3 to 1 at King Edward Park Saturday afternoon. Both teams brought out some new men who gave a good account of themselves.

Masseys won the toss and were soon causing Bradley some anxious moments playing a long passing game which was giving their outside men an opportunity which Griffin and Edgar took advantage of from one of Griffin centres, Laughlin caused Bradley to concede a corner which proved futile. The Packers seemed to settle down and Jack Montgomery placed Mitchell in possession and beating slaughter sent in a grand shot which Saunders saved in fine style. Cooper, who is in great form this season sent out to Griffin and racing at full speed sent in a splendid drive which beat Bradley all the way. This put new life in the Packers. Mongomery kept sending Mitchell and James along the right and from a nice combined movement by James and Mitchell their efforts were rewarded Mitchell beating the watchful Saunders with a great shot. From then to the interval the game was very even each goal having some narrow escapes, half-time arrived with the score 1-1.

Upon resuming Carmicheal changed places with Miller and this seemed to work well. Packers' forwards playing well together were soon test ing Saunders who is very safe and clears like a veteran. Cooper's returns were taken advantage of by Laughlin and Griffin and this fine wing ended a nice movement by Griffin just missing by inches. The game was now very fast both goalkeepers having plenty to do.

The Packers were awarded a corner and Mitchell placed nicely James heading. Just out of Saunders' reach and put the Packers one ahead from the centre kick Vinet went away but Curtis and Downer were on the alert and placed Billingsby in possession and from his centre Carmicheal scored the best goal of the day. The game from then to call of time was full of excitement. Masseys nothing daunted kept at it with a will but could not find the net having the hardest of luck. Laughlin, their latest recruit was very much in evidence and was a source of trouble to the Packers defence. There was no further scoring and a pleasant and well contested game ended in a win for the Packers by 3 to 1.

OLYMPIC GAMES OPENED SUNDAY

French Rugby Team Easily Defeated Rumania By 61-3 In Curtain-Raiser of the Eighth Modern Olympiad.

COLOMBOS, France, May 5. — The eighth Olympic Games of modern times were ushered in Sunday by France obtaining a crushing victory over Rumania in rugby by a score of 61 to 3.

The curtain-raiser of the Olympic games brought out an attendance of 15,000, who cheered impartially a great exhibition of rugby by the French and gameness on the part of the Roumanians in fighting a desperate battle to the finish in the face of tremendous odds.

The French team outweighed the Roumanians twenty pounds to the man, both in forwards and in the backfield, and showed a superiority over the Balkanites in every department of the game, including kicking, where it was acknowledged to be relatively weak.

France scored thirteen touchdowns, or ties, as they are called here, the ball, being carried over the Roumanian line four times by Jauregay, four times by Behoceguy, three times by Got, and twce by Dupouy. Beguet converted eight tries into goals, They were mostly easy kicks scored between the goal posts. Beguet also scored two goals from placements, after penalties, bringing the total score up to 61.

Queen Marie, of Roumania, disappointed her subjects by failing to be present at the games. A handsome woman in a wonder creation of blue, and we ring a cute little sailor hat of blue to match her gown, entered the official thrune just before the play began and fooled the officials, who believed she was the queen. The officials bowed low and the bandmaster ordered the band to play the Rumanian national anthem. Later it developed that the woman was a lady-in-waiting to Queen Marie and had come to the game to represent the sovereign.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL

SPLENDID DRAMA OF DOMESTIC CONFLICT

Presenting the sort of problems that are being faced in so many homes throughout the country, "Temporary Marriage," the Lambert Hillyer production which is being presented at the Royal Theatre until Wednesday deals with them in such a graphic and forceful way as to make a photoplay that has been heralded as one of the finest productions of the year.

Basing the story on the established truth that most troubles of the day are the result of internal troubles in the home and that there is hardly a household that has not a skeleton of some sort lurking about, "Temporary Marriage" goes on to show what happens to upset the even concord of domesticity when the wife, jealous of youth and wishing to return to it, indicts her husband as a "slow poke." Instead of accepting the advancing years gracefully and naturally, she resorts to artificies to retain her beauty. Hours are spent in the beauty treatment—other hours are spent in flirtations and the pretense of keeping up appearances. This woman has nothing to wish for except her departed youth—and this she must have at all costs. So the couple drift apart and divorce proceedings are started.

It's a story which tugs at the heart, which stimulates the imagination—and which carries a moral value. It is highly dramatic and interesting and is sure to fascinate every spectator who sees it. A cast of unusual excellence has been assembled to portray the characters of the play. Tully Marshall, popular portrayer of character parts, is cast as the husband and gives a most compelling study, while Myrtle Stedman as the wife gives a highly finished performance —one marked for its depth of feeling and understanding. Stuart Holmes and Maude George in the thankless roles of the philanderer and adventuress respectively, portray their roles with the finished technique which has always characterized their work. Kenneth Harlan and Mildred Davis, who bring out the romantic interest, give creditable performances. The story was written by Gilbert Patten. He has penned a human document—one which is enlightening as a series of side-lights on human nature. Don't miss it.

AT THE CAPITOL

DAILEY BROTHERS, DARING ACROBATS, OFFER THRILLS GALORE FOR PATRONS

Dailey Brothers, well-known acrobats, will offer their great programme of daring stunts at the Capitol to-day, Tuesday, and Wednesday, including their famous death leap, which is one of the best known and most dangerous stunts in vaudeville to-day.

DOROTHY GISH, VIVID DANCER IN "BRIGHT SHAWL"

Dorothy Gish is doing a Spanish dance at the Capitol Theatre to-day, Tuesday, and Wednesday in the Richard Barthelmess picture, "The Bright Shawl," that is one of the most delightful features of this fascinating romance of the days of Spanish domination in Cuba.

It is a revelation of the versatility of this very talented young actress, who, in a perfumed atmosphere of old Havana, gives the dancing number with a grace and charm that captivates all who see it.

She is seen in the tremendously emotional role of La Clavel, who has all Havana worshipping at her feet. And she figures in a most poignant and tragic romance with a young American (Richard Barthelmess) who is adventuring in Cuba on the side of the patriots conspiring against the Spanish crown.

La Clavel is undoubtedly the most vivid of the many vivid delineations Miss Gish has given the screen.

"The Bright Shawl" is a John S. Robertson production, adapted by Edmund Goulding from Joseph Hergesheimer's famous novel and presented by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., as a First National attraction.

HAROLD LLOYD CONTEST FOR KIDDIES PROVES BIG HIT

The Harold Lloyd drawing contest being put on by the Capitol Theatre in connection with the showing of Lloyd's latest comedy hit, Girl Shy, which comes to the Capitol next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is proving a big hit,and already scores of drawings have been received. The contest, which is open to children under the age of fifteen, requires that a freehand sketch of Harold Lloyd's famous face be drawn and handed into the Lloyd Contest Editor, Capitol Theatre. Thirteen prizes are offered for the best drawings of the comedian. 1st is $2.50; 2nd, $1.50; 3rd, $1; and ten prizes of free tickets to see "Girl Shy." Miss McRae, art teacher, in the public schools, is the judge. The contest closes on Tuesday night and the results will be announced on the screen of the Capitol Theatre during the showing of "Girl Shy" next Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. Each child sending in a drawing must write his or her name and address clearly on the lower right-hand corner of the picture.

ENTIRELY NEW ROLE PLAYED BY LLOYD IN HIS LATEST COMEDY

In his latest feature Pathe comedy, "Girl Shy," which will be seen at the Capitol Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Harold Lloyd once more demonstrates his remarkable versatility before the camera. Lloyd's role in this new fun-film is said to be so entirely different from any he has ever attempted to portray, that he debated a long time before tackling the part.

The locale of "Girl Shy" is for the most part a small town, although towards the end of the picture the action is staged in the city.

Lloyd will introduce a real novelty to the screen in this picture, and he has carefully guarded his secret because it is his own idea, and to have it known before the showing of the fun-film might rob it of some of its appeal.

As is usual with the Lloyd Pathe comedies, there is only a small cast in "Girl Shy." Johnna Ralston is again seen as Harold's leading lady. Richard Daniels, Carlton Griffin, Priscilla King and Dorothy Dorr are also prominent in the support.

Fred Newmeyer and Sam Taylor directed "Girl Shy" from a story by Taylor, Tim Whelan, Ted Wilde and Tommy Gray.

TRIPLE COLLISION ON HUNTER STREET

John Scott Had Narrow Escape--Cars Damaged and Horse Hurt.

Crashing in a triangular collision at 7.45 on Saturday night the occupants of two automobiles and a buggy narrowly escaped serious injury, and that one man of the party was not killed is nothing short of miraculous.

While John Scott and Joseph Scott were travelling west on Hunter hotel and Mark Street, their car stalled and the former got out to crank it.

Harry Redmond and his sister, of Otonabee, were driving west in a buggy, and pulled out to pass the stalled car, when the horse shied and carried them slightly over the centre of the road.

Harold Lawrence, driving a taxi east, with his windshield coated with the pouring rain, did not see the horse until he was close to it. Endeavouring to avoid an accident and thinking it the better way, he swerved to the left. At the same time Mr. Redmond pulled his horse to the right and they met head on.

The big car caromed over, missed John Scott by inches, struck the stalled car, and ran up on the sidewalk.

Edward Ackman, of the Bank of Montreal, one of the passengers in the taxi, sustained a cut forehead from flying glass, the horse was cut in several places, and the taxi driver suffered a deep gash on his chin.

Both cars were badly damaged, but the buggy and its passengers escaped injury.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir: The citizens of Peterborough have read with pride of the achievements of our Symphony Orchestra and the Male Voice Choir, not to mention the individual vocalists.

Would it not be fitting for the representatives of musical talent in our city to give us a concerted programme in the Opera House at a small charge.

I have heard many interested parties say that a concert of this description would be well patronized especially if sufficient notice were given and good publicity were given in the press.

Included in the programme, of course, should be the various test pieces, sung and played at the Festival.

Interest aroused will certainly be of great benefit to these organizations should they contemplate competing again next year. Yours truly,

"A Lover of Musical Effort."

LOCAL BRANCH OF THE W.C.T.U. HELD MEETING

At a meeting of the local branch of the W.C.T.U., held with the president, Mrs. M. A. Morrison in the chair, an interesting feature was the "Question and Answers" section in connection with the work of the missionary maintained by the W.C.T.U. in the lumber camps of Northern Ontario.

The local branch voted the sum of $96 to the Budget Fund, and decided to co-operate in the formation of new unions throughout the country. A resolution was also passed to be forwarded to the Hon. W. F. Nickle, expressing approval of his recent amendment to legislation, by which restrictions will be placed on the sale of liquor by druggists.

Six new members were admitted to the roll at this meeting. At the next meeting, on the last Wednesday in May, annual election of officers will take place.

SHOULD LIFT BAN FROM THE METHODIST CHURCH

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 5. — The ban on worldly amusements of the Methodist Episcopal church should be lifted because it "has not corrected evils named as detrimental to recreational life of our people,' the address of the Board of bishops before the Quandrennial General Conference of the Church, recommended yesterday.

The Bishops observed with grave apprehension the "growing spirit of worldiness." They endorsed the union of nations in the cause of peace; dubbed war "law of the jungle," and "organized revenge," and urged the entry of the United States into a world court.

Declaring that "frightful conditions" existed in the United States in relation to divorce, the address recommended the standardization of the divorce laws, and a return to "former ideals of personal virtue, modesty and social propriety."

EMPLOYMENT IS NOT IMPROVING IN CITY

The Employment situation in the city is still pretty dull. Textile plants in this city, such as the Auburn and the Canadians Woollens, are very slack. There are plenty of men for tnis work around town but no work is available. The foundries are working fairly steady, but are not taking on any men. Although work is scarce in the city there is plenty to do on the farms. Several immigrants landed here this morning and headed for the Employment Bureau but they found it a little more difficult to obtain work here than they expected. Some men are accepting work on the farms, but the majority of them are still looking for city jobs. At present there are a great number of men in the city out of work and a large number of these are immigrants. There are several positions open for women about the city. Last week there were 33 new applications and the same number of placements, which is about the same as for the last two months.

DAINTY FANNED 7 OUT OF NINE

Strollers of Toronto Riverdale League and Oshawa Played Tie Game Saturday Before Small Crowd.

OSHAWA, Ont. May 4.—Strollers of Toronto Riverdale Baseball League and Oshawa Central Leaguers played before one of the smallest crowds that ever attended an exhibition game at Alexandria Park on Saturday afternoon, and the one hundred rabid fans present were wrapped in winter overcoats. Two events that were not featured on the program, both of which are entered in the casualty list. A young lad named Hall had his nose broken when Murray, Oshawa's third sacker, made a wild heave to Wilson at first in the preliminary work-out; the ball striking the lad full in the face and he was taken to the hospital. The other happened to Tait, who was slated to do the heaving for the Strollers, when, whil, going through the warming-up process, threw a charliehorse into his pitching arm and he was put under blankets by the Strollers management.

Morris, a portsider and Hoose were announced as the visitors battery, while Webster, the Brantford right-handed recruit and Tyson were given the assignment for Oshawa and the telephone city youth, showed enough in the five innings, that he worked to warrant the local management giving him a permanent place on the local heaving list, allowing only three hits, one in the second, and two in the fifth, and only one run which came in the second, in the form of a circuit clout down first base line by Ashton, Strollers first sacker He was replaced by Morrison, who got by in the sixth, but in the seventh after five runs, the result of two walks and four bingos he was yanked and Dainty was hurried to the rescue and the "Duke" made seven out of the nine men that faced him whip the air.

Morris, the portsider of the Strollers, got off to a bad start in the first three innings when, with two walks and five hits, among the latter being a three bagger by W. Fair and one for two bases by Tyson, Oshawa, chased four runs over the pan; in the next four frames Lefty worked better holding the locals to no hits and no runs, but in the eighth they hung another one up on the score board, through Tyson's second two base clout, and Dainty's sky scraper to right field which advanced Tyson to third, and the Oshawa catcher bring on a throw to second to catch Wilson, trying to purloin the middle station. This run tied up the score at six all and with neither team scoring in the ninth, the second ball game of the season on local grounds, ended with no winner being declared. The line-ups were:

Strollers—Burns, ss; Boland rf; Downing 2nd; Mitchell lf; Hoose c; Ashton 1st; Reading 3rd; Yeoman's cf; Morris p; Reid 3rd; Dilling lf.

Oshawa—Roddick lf; Fair 2nd; Murray 3rd; Tyson c; Dainty rf; and p; Wilson 1st: Morrison ss; and p; R. Fair, cf; Webster p; Ward ss;

The score by innings:

Strollers 0 1 0 0 0 0 5 0 0—6 9 3
Oshawa 1 3 1 1 0 0 0 0 1 0—6 8 0

Umpires — Roy Morphy at plate, "Si" Dell on bases. Both of Oshawa.

STRIKE OF PRINTERS IS PROVING COSTLY SAYS JAMES LYNCH

Former I.T.U. President Declares Union Has "Gone Down" Since His Time.

TORONTO, May 5.—During the past three years 6,000 union positions have been lost by the International Typographical Union in the United States and Canada through the strike, which has cost $17,000,000, James Lynch estimated yesterday during the course of an interview. The strike has not been won, and statements made by employers of their success in different localities are correct, according to Mr. Lynch.

Mr. Lynch is a former President of the union, and held the position of Commissioner of Industries of New York State under two Administrations. Members of the union who have criticized the conduct of its affairs under its present management asked Mr. Lynch to become a candidate for the Presidency. He secured the endorsement of the majority of local unions. His name will be submitted to the membership of the organization shortly. He spoke to Local 91 on Saturday night.

Great in the Past.

"When our people were in charge of its affairs the Typographical Union was great and powerful," said Mr. Lynch. "Since its management was taken over by others with different policies it has gone down. The strike for the 44-hour week has cost $17,000,000, and it is no nearer a close now than it was three years ago when it started. Six thousand union positions have been lost in the large and small cities of the United States and Canada. We think our policies would have won the strike, just as we won the strike of 1906-7, which cost less than $5,000,000. In certain places what employers say is correct, and that is what we regret. We believe all these offices can be redeemed and our people sent back to work. We propose to inaugurate methods to put them back to work and to make the 44-hour week universal."

Unemployment in U.S., He Says.

Mr. Lynch staed that business of the printing industry had been poor since the commencement of the year, which he thought, was due to the general slump in business. He said that it was unusual for newspaper offices to be slack at this time of the year. "The slump hit the automobile industry hard," he said. "It was a bad winter. There is unemployment in the United States, and there are no boom-time conditions. However, business seems to be improving."

According to Mr. Lynch the organized Labor movement of the United States is recovering from post-war confusion.

A cat belonging to a Londoner is acting as foster mother to a brood of chickens hatched out in an incubator.

LIQUOR SHIPPED IN TOMATO CANS

Twenty-Eight Gallons of High Wines Was Confiscated Before it Reached the Mining Fields of Northern Ontario.

NORTH BAY, Ont., May 5 (Canadian Press). — A fine example of the ingenuity displayed by rum-runners in their efforts to get illicit liquor into the mining fields of North Ontario was shown in the District Police Court here this morning when Magistrate McGaughey ordered the confiscation of approximately 28 gallons of high wines put up in 2-pound cans bearing condensed milk labels and 2-pound cans bearing tomato labels.

It was an accident that divulged the illicit shipment. A mixed car of groceries was being transferred at the C.N.R. sheds, North Bay, on 23rd April to the T. and N. O. car for the north, and a case of "tomatoes" slipped and was jarred open.

In putting the cans back, one of the men noted a suspicious gurgle, and called the license inspector.

NEWS OF BURNBRAE AND THE DISTRICT

Cemeteries Well Kept in Seymour East and Rawdon Township—

BURNBRAE, May 5.—This district may feel justly proud of the way it attends and cares for its burying places, where rests the sacred dust of the earlier pioneers of Seymour and Rawdon.

Burnbrae cemetery has been for many years a credit to the community. Mr. George Cryahead, who has been a lifelong resident in the district, has cared for this cemetery for over thirty years and has spent much labor on it to make it the beauty place it now is. Its organization is as perfect as any other community organization, even to a numbeo of young people who are watering the flowers in dry weather, which the Flower committee try to keep blooming throughout the season.

Within the last two years or so, a number of other cemetries in Seymour and Rawdon have undergone improvement, under the supervision of Mr. Crayhead.

The following communities, influenced by the fine way Burnbrae cemetery was managed by Mr. Crayhead, secured his services in improving theirs: Wellman's Corners, English Line, Hubble Hill. These have all been levelled, planted with lawn grass and are beautified by shrubbery and have the grass regularly cut. Your correspondent passed by all these burying places in this district recently and the improvement from a few years ago is a community achievement worthy of the highest praise.

As I write I recall that the Ryl-

BRITISH-BELGIAN CONFERENCE HELD

Premier MacDonald, Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Hymans of Belgium Were Cheerful After Conference.

LONDON, May 5 (Canadian Press). — British Government circles are uncommunicative regarding the results of the conference at Chequers Court yesterday between Premier MacDonald and Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Hymans of Belgium.

The latter returned home last night evidently in a cheerful mood, but they would divulge nothing.

Diplomatic writers this morning do not profess to be able to penetrate the secrecy surrounding the discussions.

It is generally agreed, however, that the new inter-allied conference for making the experts' reparations plan effective is closer at hand because of the conference.

It is known that the whole tone of the conversations was such that the officials to-day were optimistic despite the divergence of French and British views.

Premier Theunis is said to be confident that these views could be reconciled at an Allied conference.

EXHIBITION GROUNDS HAD A BIG BARN RAISING BEE

Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board is justly proud of its achievement in building a new barn at the Exhibtion grounds—unaided except by the members of its directorate drawn from the country section.

A barn-raisihg bee under the direction of Thomas Brown and Orme Ball, built the barn, and another bee will be held in June to put on the finishing touches. All the work has been done by voluntary labor, and the materials were bought with the grant from the county council.

A speciail course to overcome defects of speech, such as stammering and lisping, has been started at London University.

stone people have held a meeting recently and passed a resolution to put a new fence around their cemetery and to ask Mr. Crayhead to supervise the remodelling of their burying ground. The work on it is expected to begin after seeding.

Spring Tonics Pass Without a Casualty One Narrow Escape

Spring tonics of all kinds, home-made and ready-made, have done their worst and best to the community, and no casualties have been reported. Every year there is an epidemic of dope slinging and reputable citizens subject themselves on a friend's say-so to horrible tortures in the way of poisonous-tasting medicines.

One man in Peterborough this year solved the problem pleasantly. He obtained two cases of fruit wine, which he assured The Examiner reporter is the finest kind of spring tonic. After the two cases he purchased a keg of the same tonic.

That is where he almost met catastrophe. In opening the keg, this citizen knocked the bung with a hammer; the bung went into the keg with a splash, and the citizen was splashed and all but drowned in the sparkling fruit wine.

That is the nearest to serious damage done by spring tonics this year, so far.

Another open season starts next March.

VILLAGE KEMPTVILLE AWARDED ONE DOLLAR

TORONTO, May 5.— (Canadian Press.)—The village of Kemptville has been awarded $1 damages and costs against Kemptville Milling Co. and Levi Daniel Bowen as an outcome of lengthy litigation in which Mr. Justice Kelly has just given judgment.

Up to 1921 the milling company supplied light and power to individuals in the village, but adoption of municipal hydro system led the village to warn the company off its streets. Law suit followed, which the municipality won, but while appeal was pending parties reached an agreement by which the company was to remove its plant, poles and wire and cease supplying individuals. Poles were cut down, when Daniel Bowen, owner of the grist mill in Kemptville, leased the system to the company at $1,200 a year to supply his mill. New action was started by the village to compel defendants to carry out agreement to dismantle the plant.

Defendants are now restrained from operating the plant.

$5,000,000 Bank in St. Paul Is Forced to Close -- Assets 'Frozen' in Foreclosed Farm Loans

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 5.—The Capital Trust and Savings Bank of St. Paul, with deposits of $5,000,000, was ordered closed here. A. J. Veigel, State Superintendent of Banks, made the announcement. Frozen assets was the cause of embarrassment, Mr. Veigel said.

The bank, which has a capital of $500,000, was organized in December, 1890.

Word of the closing of the Capital Trust and Savings Bank started a run on the Capital National, and when the latter institution closed for the day at noon many depositors still were in line in front of paying teller windows.

The banking room and the corridor at the entrance were jammed and many persons stood on the sidewalks. There were no demonstration and many persons apparently were there merely out of curiosity.

President Mitchell of the Capital National declared that the closing of the Trust and Savings Bank was in no way related to the Capital National, and said that the National Bank would continue to do business "as usual."

Mr. Mitchell declared that most of those drawing out money were small depositors. Banking authorities here expressed the belief that with Sunday intervening, any hysteria among depositors was dissipated.

The last statement of the Capital Trust and Savings Bank showing the condition as of April 22 gave deposits of $6,210,691, but officials of the bank said that this had been reduced since through heavy withdrawals and the usual fluctuations.

The order for closing came after two conferences of the board of directors with Mr. Veigel, which continued after midnight and were resumed. The "frozen assets" held responsible for the closing consist mainly of Montana and North Dakota mortgages.

J. L. Mitchell, president of the institution, issued a statement in which he said speaking of the land which the bank had acquired by foreclosure:

"If normal agricultural conditions return within a reasonable period of time, so that this land can be disposed of at anything like its normal value, the assets of the Capital Trust and Savings Bank should liquidate for an amount sufficient to pay its liabilities in full."

It was learned that the local clearing house association has under consideration some plan to aid the Capital National Bank in event of resumption of the run on that institution Monday.

DEFUNCT BANK CASE HEARING

Hon. T. A. Crerar Appeared Before Commission at His Own Request.

OTTAWA, May 5. — Canadian Press. — Hon. T. A. Crerar, a former director of the Home Bank, appeared at his own request before the Royal Commission inquiring into the career of that institution when hearings were resumed this morning.

Before Mr. Crerar was examined by Eugene Lafleur, K.C., counsel for the government, B. A. Reid of Toronto, announced that he had been instructed to attend sittings as a counsel for a number of large shareholders who were opposing the double liability.

In answer to Mr. Lafleur, Mr. Crerar said that he was appointed a director of the Home Bank in April or May of 1910. He had accepted the appointment after being requested to do so by Mr. Machaffie, then manager of the Winnipeg branch. Mr. Machaffie had said that Col. Mason, then general manager of the bank, was anxious for Mr. Crerar to join the board and act on the western committee. Messrs. John Kennedy and John Persse had already been appointed to the board.

"What was the Western committee expected to do?" asked Mr. Lafleur.

"We were expected to supervise and report on business in the Prairie Provinces. We did not attend meetings of the Board in Toronto," replied Mr. Crerar. All applications for credit from the Western branches of the bank came before the committee," he explained. He thought the Western directors had succeeded in placing the business of the bank in the West on a good basis. Mr. Crerar said that the Grain Growers Grain Co., of which he was head, had acquired about 1000 shares of Home Bank stock in 1908 and 1909. They had paid $133 per share for the stock.

Mr. Lafleur asked what events led up to the making of representations to the Minister of Finance?

Mr. Crerar said that in the autumn of 1914, Mr. Machaffie, Western Manager, told the three Western directors that he had heard disturbing rumors regarding three accounts in the Toronto office. The Western directors went to Toronto in November. They had noticed that money available for loans in the West had been restricted, while according to reports the general fund for loans had increased.

General Mason had expressed a desire to give the Western directors all possible information. But the Western directors wanted it given at a meeting of the whole board. "General Mason demurred, but finally agreed." A statement was presented to the Board showing all accounts of more than $35,000. Mr. Crerar recalled that the Frost account was about a million and a half; the Prudential Trust Loan was about $500,000 (secured by trust funds of the New Brunswick government), and the Pellatt account was about $1,100,000.

"We pressed for further information and satisfied ourselves that the trust fund of the New Brunswick government was not security for the Prudential Loan," he said. "We met the following day and learned that the Pellatt Loan was in excess of what General Mason had said it was the day before." Mr. Crerar recalled that it was about one and three-quarter milion dollars in excess of what General Mason had first said it was.

Mr. Crerar explained his reasons for writing the letter of March 20, 1916, to Sir Thomas White, in which he expressed the opinion that the condition of the bank was improving and that an audit was not necessary.

Mr. Crerar stated that this letter was written on the suggestion of Z. A. Lash, counsel for the Home Bank, after he and Mr. Lash had come to Ottawa to see Sir Thomas, but had failed owing to the Minister of Finance being out of the city. They had come to Ottawa following a meeting of the directors of the bank in which those from the East had expressed the greatest concern in regard to a communication from Sir Thomas White that it might be necessary to put independent auditors in the bank.

Mr. Crerar said that his reason for changing his mind and agreeing that an independent audit was unnecessary were briefly that it was emphasized at this meeting that an independent audit would probably result in wrecking the bank. Also he and the Western directors had come to have a great deal of confidence in M. J. Haney.

GERMAN BOURGEOISIE MAY FORM CABINET IF BIG COALITION FAILS

Alignment of Nationalists, People's Party, Clericals and Bavarians Considered a Possible Outcome of the Present Political Flux — Socialist Leadership, However, Sure to Adopt Experts' Report.

Lineup Waits Recount

BERLIN, May 6 (Canadian Press). — Unless an official recount of the ballots deprives the United Socialist Party of his rank as numerically the strongest party in the new Reichstag, President Ebert will, in the course of the next few days, commission the leaders to proceed with the work of organising a new Coalition Government.

In that event the Socialists will either promptly reject the assignment or summon the leaders of the Clerical, the German Peoples' and Democratic Parties for purpose of discussing the formation of a big coalition, which on the basis of the present returns would definitely control a total of 239 mandates out of 448. Only 180 of the Opposition votes, contributed by the Nationalists, Communists and Ludendorff Party, can be classified as a fixed oppositional factor; the remaining 30 votes are distributed among the Bavarian People's Party, and half a dozen major political factions which are making their first appearance in the Reichstag.

Would Insure Majority

This is the parliamentary situation awaiting the coalition, composed of the Socialists and the three middle parties, whose complete voting strength would ordinarily insure it a safe working majority. The only other alternative from Sunday's elections is suggested in the formation of a straight bourgeois ministry, comprising the German Nationalists, the People's Party, the Clericals, and the Bavarian People's Party, and the Democrats. Its prospect of being realized is considered very remote by the parliamentary leaders, who profess to see in the formation of a big coalition headed by the Socialists, the only reliable guarantee for prompt and faithful fulfillment of the conditions prescribed in the experts' report.

While the Nationaiist press is obviously jubilant over the gains made by the Nationalists and Ludendorff's chauvinistic "Freedom Party," they are not yet thoroughly warmed up to a contemplation of taking over the new government on a straight bourgeois basis, and political leaders who ordinarily would not be disinclined to have the Nationalists put on trial as an active government party, are of the opinion that the Hergt-Westarp reactionaries will discreetly abstain from venturing forth with such a proposal, especially as they are not certain of the participation of the Clericals and Democrats, without whom a non-socialist coalition is inconveivable

As the new Reichstag cannot be convoked for another two weeks, because the election commissioner cannot confirm the new mandates before that time, the parliamentary situation growing out of Sunday's elections will remain in abeyance for another week.

Sentiment for Coalition

Sentiment, so far as it has been made public, both in official and political circles, strongly inclines to the belief that a coalition reaching from the Socialists to Stresemann's People's Party, will succeed the present government and that its tenure of office will be firmly established, not only because it commands a working majority on the basis of its present line-up, but also through the scattering aid of unattached parties which nominally would be disinclined to join with the Nationalists in their opposition. This refers particularly to the Bavarian People's Party, which is not likely to desert the Clericals in a critical situation.

There is also a widespread impression in political circles that the Nationalists, since the death of Dr. Karl Helfferich, have become less intransigeant in their attitude towards the Dawes report, which they now are disposed to designate as "unfulfillable" rather than unacceptable." They rejected it on the latter basis in the course of their campaign

Leaders Unmoved

Despite the element of uncertainty which obscured the political situation so far as the beneficiaries and sufferers in Sundays' balloting are concerned, the government leaders, in informal conversations last night, were inclined to view the forthcoming political adjustment with complete equanimity, even to the extent of predicting that the government's action in accepting the Dawes report as the basis for early reparations negotiations, has been in no wise jeopardized.

Until the results of the official recount are announced, a definite survey of the party lineup in the new Reichstag will be impossible, although the Election Commissioner believes that the present list of 448 mandates will undergo only a slight change, and show an increase of six deputies.

Million Votes Wasted

No less than one million votes bestowed upon numberless nondescript parties on the official ballots are estimated to have been wasted, as none of these parties succeeded in obtaining the requisite total of 60,000 votes.

The futile balloting represent a five per cent. increase in the total number of votes over 1920, and explains the shortage of eighteen mandates in the final count.

Car Skidded Into Canal, Two Drowned

MONTREAL, May 6.—(Canadian Press).—Oscar Besaner of this city and Arthur Bousquet of Coteau Station were drowned Sunday night when their limousine they were driving along a slippery ground skidded and fell over an embankment into the Soulanges Canal, a mile from Cedars.

Two other occupants of the limousine esaped by opening the doors as the machine slid into the water. The body of Mr. Bessner has been found, that of Mr. Bousquet has not yet been recovered.

FEATHERS RIOT IN DODO DRESS

Latest Parisian Eccentricity In Gowns Also Sways Fashions In Berlin and Vienna.

PARIS, May 6. — The "Dodo dress" appeared at Longchamps races on Sunday afternoon, adding a new eccentricity to the already daring Summer modes.

The strange dress gets its name because of the lavish use of feathers, causing the gown to appear as if it were made of nothing else. The gorgeous effect obtained by flamingo feathers as a wide hem for the skirt, is brilliantly completed with a bodice entirely studded with feathers from brightly colored tropical songsters.

Plumes Finish It.

Occasionally a huge bunch of waving ostrich plumes is either fastened to the hair, hanging to the waist, or perched on one shoulder, completing the modern women's startling resemblance to the "dodo."

Dining at Ciro's last night many smart women wore "Ich dien" feathers, three upright plumes fastened to the left side of the hair, a mode which has been most fashionable since it was first launched in honor of the Prince of Wales.

Berlin, Vienna, Too.

BERLIN, May 6. — Feathers are back in style! Summer furs are passe. These are the two outstanding decrees of the Berlin and Viennese fashion dictators who are trying more and more to compete with Paris.

Feathers are all the rage among fashionable women here. Hats have been decorated with Paradise feathers and gowns and dresses with giant ostrich feathers, until the wearer looks like a gorgeous bird of many colors. Shoes and stockings must be made to match.

Summer furs have been replaced by shawls and scarfs which are draped around the shoulders and fall in clinging lines, Spanish fashion, to below the knees. The shawls and scarfs are mostly silk of delicate shades, but snow white, hand knitted woollen scarfs with artistic designs of leaves and flowers are gaining popularity.

TUCKER BABY IS BOGUS ASSERTS YOUTH'S FATHER

'Likely As Not She Bought It,' He Exclaimed, Alleging His Elderly Daughter-in Law Designed to Frustrate Action to Secure Separation.

BOSTON, May 6.—Joseph Tucker, father of Burton Tucker, seventeen-year-old husband of Mrs. Susie Burnham Simpson Tucker, declares that the girl baby which the oddly assorted couple say was born on April 2 at the home of Dr. Robert G. Moore, at Baldwin, L.I., was a "bogus" baby.

Mr. Tucker said that in all probability Mrs. Tucker had "bought the baby" and had introduced it into the family to thwart his plans for an annulment of his son's marriage.

Will See His Son

When a report was circulated here that the Tuckers were enroute to Mrs. Tucker's home in West Gloucester to effect a reconciliation with him, he said:

"Well, I'll see Burton, of course, but I won't see that woman, and I wouldn't as much as look at the fake baby. The baby story is ridiculous. It's even more foolish than the marriage. Baby! Rats! If that woman has been introducing a youngster down on Long Island as her own, it's dollars to doughnuts that she that she bought it somewhere. She is determined to hold on to Burt, and she will stop at nothing which she believes will cause us to stop the fight."

Grandmother Aids Defense

Mrs. Sarah Buriham of West Gloucester, mother of Mrs. Tucker, came quickly to the defense of her daughter and challenged the charges made by the elder Tucker. She said:

"I know that Mrs. Tucker has a new baby. I put father, mother and child on a train for California in New York a week ago.

"If the elder Mr. Tucker wishes to say that the baby is bogus, that's his privilege.

"I don't care to discuss it.

"Mrs. Tucker's baby is a healthy child. Mother and baby are both doing well. The baby, as a matter of fact, is no one's business except the mother's."

The brides' sister, Mrs. Henry O. Story, of West Gloucester, when told of the charges made by the elder Tucker said:

"I know all about the baby. The elder Mr. Tucker is only trying to get publicity. Everything would have turned out all right if Mr. Tucker had kept his mouth shut. The affair was impossible anyhow, and if Mr. Tucker had not talked so much to the newspapers, the romance would have died out. The more he talked, the more bitter his son and Mrs. Tucker became. It grew to be more a matter of spite."

Married For Love

At the time of the marriage of the Tuckers last fall Mrs. Story was quoted as saying:

"My sister married the man she loved, just as she had a perfect right to do."

The Tuckers left Dr. Moore's home in Long Island last Wednesday and were reported enroute to Hempstead, L.I. Thence, it was said, they went to Mrs. Tucker's summer home at West Gloucester.

Mrs. Tucker obtained permission last Fall from Assistant District Attorney McMahone of Jersey City to go to California. That was at the time when she and her boy husband were indicted for alleged violation of the marriage laws and perjury. Mrs. Tucker then said that her daughter by a previous marriage was seriously ill, and that a trip to California was necessary. A short time afterward they were seen in Atlantic City and still later at a hotel in New York. Mr. McMahone became angry and decided to bring them to trial at once but changed his decision when he was advised of Mrs. Tucker's delicate health.

Mrs. Burnham, said with regard to the trip:

"Mrs. Tucker was advised by two New York specialists to go to California, both for her own health and also to save her little girl, Margaret, who has lung trouble.

One of Mrs. Tucker's cars has been shipped West. Another is a home in West Gloucester, where a maid and a chauffeur remain.

Canada Supports Appeal To United States Courts

Government Will Be Represented When Appeal On Chicago's Diversion of the Great Lakes Water Is Heard By the Supreme Court—Date Has Not Yet Been Set.

OTTAWA, May 6 (Canadian Press) .— Canada will take an active part in the appeal to be taken to the higher United States Courts in the matter of the right of the Sanitary Commission of Chicago to divert the Great Lakes waterways.

This is the most recent phase of the much-discussed question, according to a correspondence between Ottawa and Washington, tabled by Premier King in the House of Commons yesterday.

The voluminous correspondence shows that Canada's protest against the diversion began in 1912, when the Duke of Connaught, then Governor-General, enlisted the help of the British Ambassador, the late Right Hon. James Bryce, in presenting Canada's case. A special committee of the United States Senate investigated. The Secretary for War, Mr. Stinson, found against Chicago's right to take water from the Great Lakes and divert it to the Gulf of Mexico, in order to carry on sanitary and water power operations.

Th District Court of the United Stats l aerehedpul g eoian hmhmrfw States later upheld tht Government's dictum. An appeal is to be taken shortly in the Supreme Court of the United States against the Disrict United States against the District Court's findings.

Canada will be represented in this appeal, the date for which has not been fixed.

GOVERNOR HAS NOT REPORTED

Incident In the Jamaican House in Which Governor Probyn Intervened Has Not Formally Reached British Government.

LONDON, May 6. — A question was put to the Secretary of State for the Colonies in the House Monday, whether a report had been received from Governor Sir Leslie Probyn of Jamaica regarding the use of his power to invoke the "paramount importance" clause of the constitution in connection with the vote of the elected members of the Jamaican legislative council to cut off the salary of the managing director of the government railway; what had been the secretary's reply and whether he would support the governor in any action to protect the managing director from the attacks made on on him.

The Minister, J. H. Thomas, replied that he had received a telegram from the governor but he proposed to defer consideration of the matter until he had received a full report.

Replying to supplementary questions Mr. Thomas remarked that in fairness to the officer concerned all the evidence tended to show that he was a most efficient and capable man and that nothing ought to be done to prejudice his position until a full report on the situation had been received.

Governor Sir Leslie Probyn on May 1 directed the official members of the Jamaica legislative council to vote about 300,000 pounds as railway estimates after the elected members of the House had withdrawn. The elected members had voted to strike out the salary that was paid to the managing director of a government line but the governor put it through under authority of the "paramount importance" clause of the constitution. The elected members later gave out a statement declaring that the people had no confidence in the administration, and that if proper officials were not placed in charge that British rule in Jamaica might come to an end.

TARIFF CHANGES ARE APPRECIATED

The Massey Harris Company State That the Changes Will Be a Benefit to the Farmers.

OTTAWA, May 6. Canadian Press —Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King late last night issued the following statement bearing upon one sent out from Toronto earlier in the evening, by the Massey-Harris Company, respecting the proposed tariff changes:

"The statement of the Massey-Harris Company bears out the contention of the government that tariff changes effected by the present budget should prove of benefit alike to the farming community and the agricultural implement industry. If, as is indicated, the farmers of our country are immediately given the benefit of lowering of duties and the abolition of the sales tax by a corresponding reduction in the price of implements, it is up to every farmer, in the words of the statement issued by the Massey-Harris Company, 'To stimulate Canadian industry by the purchase of Canadian-made machinery,' and I believe they will."

OTTAWA RIVER SWELLS.

OTTAWA, May 6 (Canadian Press). — Though the water in the Ottawa River, which has been rising steadily for the past week, went up another foot during the week-end, it has not yet caused any inconvenience to industries at the Chaudiere.

NO REPLY FROM PREMIER KING

Question of Invitation to Lausanne Conference Is Again Mentioned In the British Commons—Mr. Thomas Had Nothing to Add.

LONDON, May 6 (Canadian Press Cable). — Replying in the House of Commons yesterday to Sir E. W. M. Grigg (Liberal) who drew attention to the statement by Premier Mackenzie-King in the Canadian House of Commons on 2nd April that Canada had not been invited to the Lausanne Conference, J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Colonies, said he understood that on 24th April King, when replying to questions, had stated that he would be in a position later to make a further statement.

Sir E. W. M. Grigg suggesed the publication of the correspondence with the Canadian Government in view of Premier King's statement that Canada would not object to publication, and in view of the difficulty of reconciling the statements made in the British House with the statements made in the Canadian House of Commons.

Mr. Thomas said that with regard to the publication of the correspondence, he could add nothing to the answer given on 9th April when Sir E. W. M. Grigg urged publication. The Minister declared that his Government had no objection to publication, but by the agreement with the Imperial Conference the authority of all the Dominions must be obtained before such a step could be taken and as authority in this case has been refused the British Government had no alternative.

Replying to further questions, Mr. Thomas emphasised that the correspondence was not solely between the British and the Canadian Governments, and Mr. Thomas undertook to submit the proposal.

"To whom?" asked several members, but there was no reply.

NUPTIAL MASS 50 YEARS AGO

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Spratt of Lindsay Observed Golden Wedding In Fenelon Falls—Son Celebrated Mass.

LINDSAY, May 6. — (Canadian Press).—Lindsay citizens are extending congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Spratt, whose fiftieth wedding anniversary was observed on Sunday. As a result of a bereavement this very important event in their history was quietly observed. The venerable couple, accompanied by members of their family and other relatives, motored to Fenelon Falls and attended Mass in St. Aloysius Church, where fifty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Spratt were united by the late Rev. Father T. J. Spratt and the late Rev. Father Duffus. Mr. and Mrs. Spratt occupied the same pew Sunday morning as they did that happy May morning of fifty years ago when they were made one.

High Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father John Spratt, C.S.B., of Assumption College, Sandwich, assisted by Rev. Father Welty, C.S.B., of St. Michael's College, Toronto, and brother Wilfrid (Joseph Spratt) of St. Alexian Hospital, St. Louis, Mo. Rev. Father Donnelly, C.S.B., of Detroit, preached the sermon.

Mr. and Mrs. Spratt were the recipients of many beautiful remembrances by relatives and friends, together with congratulatory messages from friends at a distance.

HUNTER STREET BRIDGE GHOST IS WALKING AGAIN IN COUNCIL HALL RATTLING CHAIN FORGED IN 1919

WHAT THE CITY COUNCIL DID

Decided to open the bathing beaches on Sunday.

Received a claim for $200 from Ray Harnett for wrongful arrest.

Passed four bylaws.

Granted $300 for illuminated road signs on the highway.

Paid another claim connected with Hunter Street Bridge.

Let the contract for painting Lake street bathing house to F. Crowe.

Asked the Exhibition Board to consider opening the grounds for camping motorists.

Appointed H. L. Bamforth at Inverlea and R. E. Evans at Lake street as bathing beach guards.

Adjourned at 11.50.

Joe Longo Meets Reward of Persistent Effort In Claim For Damage — Council Decides On Sunday Bathing and Allows City Hall Clerks Saturday Half-Holiday.

APPOINTMENTS MADE

In a session that last from 7.30 until ten minutes to twelve last night the City Council dealt with one of the biggest slates of business that has faced it this term. The new rules of order were in use for the first time, and were appealed to repeatedly in the effort to expedite business.

One of the longest discussions of the evening was on a complaint from Alderman Stocker in which he declared Chief of Police Samuel Newhall had called him a "street corner bum." He first moved to request the commission to ask for the Chief's resignation, but withdrew this after discussion in favor of hearing a report from the Police Commission. Several Aldermen spoke in favor of urging the necessity for an immediate report.

A second important complaint was received from Ray Harnett, who was arrested as he was about to board a train on February 2, charged with passing forged cheques. He claims $200 for wrongful arrest, alleging that he was detained without legal advice or the privilege of communicating with his people, and that he suffered bodily harm that incapacitated him five weeks. This was referred to the legal committee with a request for a report from Chief Newhall.

The annual Sunday bathing debate came up early in the evening but was quashed by the Mayor, only to break out at 11.30 and carry through to a show of hands. The beaches will be open and guarded on Sunday, according to the vote.

Claims aggregating $3,612 against the city for personal injuries were reported, and it was decided to allow Joe Longo $100 in full settlement of his claim arising out of the raising of the grade on Hunter Street West to meet the bridge.

Notification that the Utilities Commission investigation will open on Thursday was received, and arrangements made to have the city council represented.

And in the closing moments of the session Alderman Phelan was deputed to appoint an official dog catcher for the season.

Sunday Bathing.

In discussing the recommendation of the Parks Committee that H. L. Bamforth, son of Rev. R. Bamforth, be appointed caretaker at Inverlea bathing beach, the hardy annual discussion of whether bathing beaches are to be open on Sunday was raised. Mr. Bamforth, who is a student, and has taught swimming in Toronto, would not work on Sunday at the same figure as he tendered for six days.

Alderman McIntyre: Why not close the bathing beaches on Sunday?

Mayor Turner: I am in accord with that.

Alderman Turner: People will bathe, and it is a question of safety to have a guard there.

Alderman Phelan: I was going to move that the bathing beaches be open on Sunday.

Alderman Stocker: People will bathe, anyway.

Alderman Morrison: It is well known that accidents happen on Sunday.

Alderman Maher: The protection should be afforded.

Mayor Turner ended the discussion for the time being, by reminding the

Missing Airman Is Reported Seen

FALSE PASS, Alaska, May 6. — (Canadian Press). — That Major Frederick L. Martin, American Flight Commander, missing since Wednesday was flying above the Aslaka Peninsula Sunday was the indication of a report received here last midnight.

The report was that two men at Fort Moller on the north side of the peninsula saw a plane circle in the air near that place and then drop behind the hills in the Aleutian range to the south.

Port Moller is 100 miles west of Chignick, on the south side of the peninsula where Major Martin took the air Wednesday for Dutch Harbor.

Manitoba Government Assumes 16 Schools.

WINNIPEG, May 6.—(Canadian Press).—Administration of sixteen schools in the Birch River municipality of the Swan River district has been assumed by the Manitoba Government on the recommendation of Hon. Charles R. Cannon, Minister of Education.

This is the first district to be taken over by the Government which in this instance was rendered necessary owing to heavy indebtedness.

Discussing the action of his Department, the Minister of Education said that the only way that the schools could be kept open was by Government guarantee to meet the overdue financial obligations of the district.

Approval of the action has been given by Order-in-Council.

Montreal Expects Heavy Grain Export.

MONTREAL, May 6.—(Canadian Press).—Local exporters predicted here yesterday that grain exports from this port will reach twenty million bushels by the end of May. It was stated that all indications pointed to the busiest season in years in this respect.

At present 25 lake grain boats are in port with 22 more on the way down the canals. Twelve tramp ships are on charter to load grain so far in May and there will likely be a large increase in this number by the end of the month.

Legs Cut Off By Train, Section Worker Died.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., May 6.—(Canadian Press)—Emo Rurieka, working on a section gang on the Canadian Pacific at Niblock was struck by an engine, while stepping from in front of another train and both his legs cut off. The accident occurred on Saturday night and he was brought to the hospital at Fort William, where he died after an attempt had been made to operate. Coroner Dr. R. M. Boyd left yesterday for the scene of the accident to investigate.

SUSPECTS DENY GUILT RUMORS

Montreal's Corps of Prisoners Declare to Counsel They Did Not Confess to Police.

MONTREAL, May 6 (Canadian Press). — Questioned by counsel retained to defend them, all of the 12 prisoners held at Bordeaux Jail and at Bridgeport, Conn., deny having made confessions regarding the Hochelaga Bank collection car holdup here on 1st April, when one bandit was killed and the bank chauffeur, Henri Cleroux, was also killed, and $142,288 stolen.

Two of the men to whom confessions have been attributed by report, are emphatic in their denials of the rumours.

Ciro Nieri, in Bordeaux Jail awaiting trial on the charge of murder, told Alban Germain, K.C., yesterday: "I have made no declaration, for the simple reason that I know nothing."

Mr. Germain adds: "All the others have told me the same thing."

Adam Parillo, now in Bridgeport Prison pending extradition proceedings on accusations of murder and highway robbery, also told Joseph Cohen, Montreal lawyer, on Saturday: "I have said nothing. I know nothing."

Mr. Cohen, who returned to Montreal yesterday after visiting Parillo, whom he will represent here in the event of the prisoner being extradited on 23rd May, stated that the $7,800 in bills found in Parillo's possession on his arrest were American and not Caandian currency as reported in the early despatches from Bridgeport.

"Parillo," says Mr. Cohen, "declares that he left Montreal on 28th March—before the hold-up—and arrived in Bridgeport on 29th March. He explains the $7,890 as the proceeds of bootlegging and gambling."

TRAINING FARM FOR IMMIGRANTS

British Government Is Asked For Financial Help Toward Scheme to Provide Elementary Farm Knowledge.

LONDON, May 6. — (Canadian Press).—The conference of the Empire League on Training and Overseas Settlement appointed a deputation to interview Premier MacDonald and ask the Government for financial help for the scheme for training and testing prospective emigrants and for the immediate establishment of a farm for training camps in Britain.

Major Moore, director of Canadian Pacific Railway colonization, said that a large proportion of British unemployed needed only simple elementary training to turn them into good settlers for Canada.

Mr. Mahoney, a visitor from Australia, endorsed the scheme, and Miss Wileman, secretary of the League, asserted that nearly all the boards of guardians had expressed their willingness to divert funds employed on outdoors relief to the maintenance of training camps.

FORKE A PINCH HITTER FOR LIBERALS ASSERTS T. L. CHURCH, TORONTO

"Tory of the Old School," Mr. Church Stands For Protection Always--Calls For National Policy For Protection of Mining and Steel Industries.

BUDGET DISCUSSION.

OTTAWA, May 6.— T. L. Church, enunciating Toronto Toryism, undiluted and effervescent, provided a breezy interlude in the budget debate Monday afternoon. He proclaimed protection as essential to Canadians prosperity, and ruffled the Progressives by reflecting upon the defeat of the Farmers' party of Ontario and the subsequent revelations culminating in the courts.

The North Toronto member was preceded by T. L. Shaw (Independent, West Calgary) who urged upon the government the necessity for economy and suggested that additional revenue might be secured from the branch of the Royal Mint in Ottawa. From 1908 until 1923 the mint had produced a surplus of seven and a half million dollars but for the last three years the surplus had been only $181,450. Apparently the profit earned by the mint in the earlier years had been secured by calling in United States coinage in circulation in this country and substituting for it Canadian coins. This policy had ceased during the last three years. Before that time the amount of American coin exported had varied from $900,000 to $1,800,000.

Succession Duties.

In practically all the countries of the world, said Mr. Shaw, increase in the public debt was causing a redistribution of private wealth. One of the means employed was inheritance or succession duties which he found a most logical means of mobilizing for the public good fortunes made by private enterprise. If a pauper claimed the right in luxury at the expense of society, such a man would be consigned to a lunatic asylum. But if he produced a document signed by a deceased relative he was accorded public honor. In the United States, both Federal and State taxes were levied on estates. This could be done in Canada.

Mr. Shaw said that if he had any complaint in regard to the reduction in duties on agricultural implements with the savings which would accrue to him by bringing the Crows Nest Pass Agreement into full effect on the first of July next.

Lower Freight Rates.

The reduction in duty, according to the figures he gave, varied from $2.92 to $8.56, while the reduction in freight rates under the Crow's Nest Pass Agreement varied from $2.81 to $11.00. Mr. Shaw said he did not quote these figures by way of criticism but by way of suggesting to the Government the desirability of bringing the Crow's Nest Pass agreement int oull force and effect. He was not sure whether the farmer would get the full benefit of the reduction in the duty, but he was qutie sure he would get the benefit of a reduction in the freight rates.

Militarism and protection declared Mr. Shaw walked hand in hand. A great opportunity had been lost in the peace treaty to bring about freer trade, as had been advocated by President Wilson, but there were signs of encouragement. Hungary under the League of Nations, has adopted free trade. The same principle had been reaffirmed by England. In Ireland a commission had reported that free trade was proper policy for that country. Russia was now entering into trade relations with other countries. Even in the United States the people were gradually being awakened to the futility of the protective policy.

Woodsworth's Amendment

In a brief reference to the Woodsworth amendment, Mr. Shaw suggested that this formed a splendid opportunity for the Prime Minister to disregard out-worn custom and ask the House to give a free and unfettered vote as to whether further reductions in the tariff were desired.

Mr. Shaw objected to the recent change made in the dumping regulations referring to it as a step in the direction of protection.

Mr. Church's Comments

Toronto's regret that Right Hon. W. S. Fielding had been compelled to retire for the time being from the ministry of finance was expressed by T. L. Church (Conservative, N. Toronto) who added that while Toronto also appreciated the painstaking and obliging manners of the Acting Minister (Hon. J. A. Robb), there was much perturbation amongst the industrial community of his constituency over the new Budget proposals.

If Canada was to be committed to "semi-free trade" why was she participating in the British Empire Exhibition? Wembley was dedicated to the building up of inter-imperial trade. Canada's new fiscal policy threatened to reduce Canada to subjection to foreign competition. Mr. Church thought that Canada's exhibit at Wembley should include portraits of the Minister of the Interior, who wished to sound the death knell of protection, and of Mr. McMaster of Brome, who swore by the principles of Cobden and Bright, without taking note of the fact that the world had ignored those principles in modern fiscal policy.

Mr. Church thought that the only way to adjust the curious situation obtaining this year in the House of Commons was for the member for St. Lawrence and St. George (Herbert Marler) and the member for Brome (Mr. McMaster) changing seats in the House.

Forke as Pinch Hitter

Another portrait appreciate for the Wembley Exhibition would be of the Progressive leader, Robert Forke, who Mr. Church described as the "star pinch hitter" for the Liberal side. Then there should be a memorial to the road building policy of the United Farmers of Ontario under Mr. Biggs.

Mr. Church oulined the industrial expansion of England during two hundred years of protection. When Canada got an industry it was torn to pieces by fluctuating tariffs. There should be a national policy for the protection of mining and steel industries. No country in the world was so adapted to benefit from protection as Canada.

Tory of the Old School

Mr. Church was opposed to a tariff commission. Commissions were not successful in this country. He suggested that there should be a permanent tariff expert in the department of finance whose duty it would be to keep the tariffs constantly maintained to serve the best interests of the country. "I am a Tory of he old school, a protectionist first, last and always." Every country in the world was increasing its tariff. Canada would be compelled to take up a national policy of protection.

He believes in the future of Canada within the British Empire. There had been four years of blue ruin preaching in Ontario under the Drury Government. Ontario had finally sent the Ontario end of the Progressives packing but Ontario had not yet got over the injury done to them by that Government. He did not advocate protection for the sake of manufacturers but for the sake of Canada. Free trade would mean fifty cent wheat and protection was the only policy which would help the western farmer out of his difficulty American grain interests took two dollars out of the farmer's pocket for every ten cents taken by the Canadian manufacturers.

From within the ranks of the Liberal Parliament there emanated yesterday two of the most important utterances yet delivered in the course of he debate upon the Budget. One of these was an unqualified endorsation of that document by the Hon. A. B. Hudson (Winnipeg South). The other was an unequivocal and slashing denunciation of the same istrument by the member for the city of Brantford, W. G. Raymond.

Both addresses hinged chiefly upon the matter of the reduction of the customs tariff, with particular reference to the implements of production.

The member for Winnipeg, who last year opposed the Government upon the Budget, congratulated his leader upon turning from "stability" to progress toward freer trade, while his colleage from Brantford announced with some regret that this year he must be one to place the ballot in the box against his fellows.

"If in doing what I now see it my duty to do, I plough to-night a lonely furrow," the latter declared, shortly before midnight, "I shall attempt to do it with a Brantford plough."

Frankly stating that he must enunciate the views of his constituency, even at the cost of misinterpretation, Mr. Raymond vehemently opposed the policy that had singled out for adverse effect as he saw it, one Canadian industry and had called upon that industry, to bear alone, and unaided, the entire price of fiscal reform. Buttressing his ease with frequent specific references to Brantford's industrial establishments, he urged the wisdom of some sort of tariff inquiry by experts as a precedent to any reorganization of Canada's fiscal scheme. Finally, he announced that he must oppose the budget tabled by Hon. J. A. Robb.

Hon. Mr. Hudson's speech, though very brief, was a fine summing up of the fiscal situation, not only of Canada but of the United States, and a call to the Government to proceed further in pursuit of ideal of freer trade relations. Others who contributed to the debate were: Joseph T. Shaw (Progressive, Calgary), Thomas L. Church (Conservative, Toronto North), and G. A. Brethern (Progressive, Peterboro).

Adjournment was moved by A. E. Ross (Conservative, Kingston).

TOWN COUNCIL CAMPBELLFORD HELD MEETING

Deputation Will Attend a Meeting in Port Hope--No Change in Train Service.

CAMPBELLFORD, May 6. — Reeve Davidson and Deputy Reeve Dorie were deputized at the regular meeting of the Town Council last night to attend a meeting of the reeves and deputies of the towns and villages in the counties of Northumberland and Durham, which has been called at Port Hope at 1.30 Wednesday, to protest against the proposed suspension of the highway grants to these municipalities. The amount which Campbellford stands to lose this year if the suspension is effected is $2,800.

The Department of Highways asks the urban municipalities to forego these grants for from three to five years so that the money may be expended on the rural roads. Warden Fowlds of Hastings, has sent a circular to the towns and villages calling attention to this matter and the meeting at Port Hope to-morrow is the result.

The Campbellford deputation will go to Port Hope armed with a resolution, moved by Mayor Meyers and Deputy-reeve Dorie setting forth that in the opinion of the members the County Council has no right to withhold these grants. Mayor Meyers staed that 1,500 auto licenses have already been issued for this district this year. As the average price of thees is $17, the total income from this source is about $25,000 and of this the town and district receives nothing. Mayor Meyers believes that the district which pays this amount for licenses shold receive a rebate of 40 or 50 per cent.

Oppose Private Ownership.

The Council went on record as opposed to the granting of any power rights on the St. Lawrence river to the private corporation that is applying for a franchise to the Federal authorities. This action was taken on the request of the Ontario Municipal Association who sent in a resolution which was unanimously endorsed. A note of this action will be sent to the Department of Railways and Canals at Ottawa.

No Change in Train Service.

Some time ago the Council asked the C.N.R. management to run by way of Campbellford the night train which is now operated between Peterborough and Port Hope through Millbrook. Major J. M. Bygott, the local agent, wrote last night to say that the company had taken the matter up and had decided that for this year at least no change could be made.

Accepts Offer.

Twenty years ago when there were only 22 hydrants in Campbellford the rental piad for these was $500. There are 52 hydrants now and the charge on the town is the same.

Engineer Scott, of the Water and Light Commission, wrote offering that if the town paid $20 a year for each of the 52 hydrants that the amount over $500 so received would be applied to a reduction in the cost of the street lights which now amounts to over $3,000 a year. This change was proposed simply to adjust the revenue of the Commission. The offer was accepted.

Embargo on Fowls.

Councillor McDonald brought up the matter of fowls running at large and working havoc with gardens. If there is no by-law in force dealing with this nuisance he believed one should be passed.

Councillor McDonald added that the amount of dog taxes received last year was $170, which at $2 each meant 85 dogs. He was positive that there are at least twice that number of dogs in the town.

Councillors McDonald and Johnston were appointed a committee to take up with Town Solicitor Humphries the matter of drawing up a by-law to prevent fowls from running at large. The by-law regarding the dog tax is regarded as all right if properly enforced, and an example will be made of residents who do not comply with it.

New Drinking Trough.

Councillor Redden believes that there should be a drinking trough on each side of the river, and asked that permission be given to tap the water pipe on George Street, near the Government Wharf, to put in one of these, offering to build a cement trough at his own expense. The Government proposes to improve the grounds near the wharf by the planting of flowers, and a supply of water for the benefit of these is essential. Councillor Redden will set out some shade trees on the street near the same place.

The committee on roads and bridges will look after the work of installing the trough.

Stock Shippers Appear.

W. S. and W. H. Nelson, drovers, of Dartford, who ship from Campbellford, and Russell Peake, secretary of the Farmers' Club, who is in the same line of business, asked that for the convenience of shippers, the weigh scales at the yards be moved and that a summer water service be put in.

James Johnston, manager for Fowlds and Company, and other coal dealers, objected to any change as likely to injure their business and to prove an inconvenience to farmers having hay to weigh.

W. S. Nelson said that the stockmen were willing to pay part of the cost of any changes, and offered to put in scales at his own expense if the Council would give him permission.

It was finally decided to have the Council go in a body to the stockyards at 11 o'clock to-day to see what could be done with justice to all parties.

Routine Matters.

A special meeting will be held on May 12 to take up the matter of the proposed new sewers on the west side.

Another special meeting will be held one week later to set the tax rate for the year. At this meeting Chief Duncalfe will be asked to appear to give the Council information concerning the amount received in fines during the past year.

The Salvation Army were given permission to change the date of their tag day, originally set for May 17, to May 23, the day of the Agricultural Society's celebration.

Plans will be prepared for a sewer on Front Street, Major Street and the Oliver Road, the petition of the residents asking for the improvement having been confirmed by the Clerk.

The by-law to raise $15,000 by debenture issue for the purpose of equipping the new High School was put through the various readings.

COUNCIL MEET AT WARKWORTH

Spent Two Hours Discussing Payment of Bill for Community Hall.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

WARKWORTH, May 6. — The members of Percy Township Council spent two hours on Monday afternoon discussing the payment of a bill for the maintenance of Community Hall, a question of more than local interest for the reason that if it had ever come to a legal test the decision would have affected every similar institution in Ontario. The outcome of the discussion was that the bill was ordered paid, although Reeve John McCubbin contended to the last that tht charges involved should be paid by the societies using the building.

This matter has been held up ever since the present council took hold at the beginning of the year, Reeve McCubbin made it a plank in his platform. The amount of the cost of maintenance, which includes the janitors salary, fuel and light, was $33.76.

At a meeting last week of the board of managers, which is composed of two members of the council, and a representative from every organization in town, Reeve McCubbin took the same stand as he did at the council meeting Monday. Councillor Atkinson, the other township representative on the Board, was absent.

Reeve McCubbin yesterday read to his colleagues on the council the clause in the Community Hall Act, which gives the board of managers the right to fix such charges as are necessary for the purposes of proper maintenance, the charge to be levied for the use of the building.

That as the main argument that he used. Another was his interpretation of the clause in the Act which says that a hall erected under the act shall be available for every public gathering of an educational, fraternal, religious or social nature, or for the discussion of any public question and no organization shall be denied the use of the hall for religious, fraternal or political reasons.

Reeve McCubbin contended that there is nothing in this clause to show that the intent of the act is to allow the free use of the hall, and to pay for the upkeep out of the public treasury.

The reeve stated yesterday that he had consulted wth County Solicitor F. D. Boggs of Cobourg, and George A. Payne of Campbellford on this question, and that both these legal authorities had supported his position.

At the meeting of the Board of Managers last week, the members declared that they would resign unless the bill was paid by the council. They have no funds on hand, and did not purpose to make a canvass for money to pay the outstanding accounts.

Some of the councillors suggested as a compromise that instead of paying the bill the Council make the Board a grant as is done for the upkeep of the public library, but this idea was not entertained.

Deputy-Reeve Nelson moved and Councillor Poole seconded, a motion that the bill be paid and this was carried without putting the members of the council on record.

Appreciates Hall.

A letter was received from Gordon Lapp of Brighton, secretary-treasurer of the Northumberland Baseball League, thanking the Council for allowing the free use of Community Hall for the holding of baseball meetings and commending the enterprise of the municipality that built and maintained such an institution.

No Profanity Allowed.

At the March meeting of the Council the statute labor of four or five residents in the vicinity of Bethany church was commuted, but they were given the alternative of working it out on road division 59. It was alleged at the time that these residents refused to put in their labor on the division to which they had been assigned, on the ground that they received no benefit from it, and that when they were warned out by the pathmaster they had, with profane emphasis, refused to go.

This charge of using profane language was vigorously denied Monday when the interested residents called to ask that their former status be restored. The pathmaster had notified them over the Bell Telephone and that company does not permit its lines to be used for the transmission of improper language. This argument appeared conclusive and the deputation left after receiving the assurance that their request would be granted.

Schools Well Attended.

Truant Officer Thomas Allen, since his appointment to that position at the end of the year, has never failed to bring in a report of his work each month. Yesterday he informed the Council that all the schools are well attended and that there are no cases of truancy. Mr. Allan's salary is $25 a year, the lowest ever paid for that position by Percy township, and the general impression appears to be that he is more than earning that amount.

Cost of Street Light.

It cost $72.50 to light the streets of Warkworth during the month of April, according to the bill rendered yesterday. This is about double the cost before the Hydro was turned on, but under the old system the lights burned only from sundown until 11 o'clock, where as now the village has a 24 hour service with more illumination.

Bowlers Getting Ready.

The members of the Bowling Club are preparing for the season which they expect will be formally opened this week. The fame of Joseph R. Wilkinson, caretaker of the Campbellford green, has reached [illegible] and he has been engaged to [illegible] Warkworth club the benefit of his expert service. He began his duties yesterday and will be here for several days by which time he hopes to have the green in first class shape.

That Tug of War.

Percy township is selecting a tug of war team to compete against the Burnbrae champions at the celebration in Campbellford May 23rd. The Percy men say it is only fair to the champions to advise them to appear on that occasion in their old clothes as dragging men over a gravelly soil is hard on fine raiment if they are so arrayed.

WAS THROWN OFF LOAD FURNITURE

Mrs. George Howson of Cavan Township Badly Injured in Runaway.

MILLBROOK, May 6.—Thrown from a wagon heavily loaded with furniture, through the team taking fright and running away, Mrs. George Howson, of the 10th line, Cavan, was brought to Dr. H. A. Turner's private hospital Monday afternoon seriously injured her collar bone being dislocated and shoulder and side of the neck badly hurt.

Mr. Howson is moving to Millbrook taking th farm recently vacated by Russell Smith, and Mrs. Howson was on the wagon preparatory to starting for the village when the accident occurred. The team was a pair of young horses and the cause of their sudden fright is unknown. Onlookers aver that the wagon actually passed over Mrs. Howson's body but, becoming unconscious through the fall, th latter is unable to say whether from this source, or the falling furniture, her injuries were caused. This morning, Mrs. Howson was resting quietly, though recovery will doubtless be slow and painful.

BE IN EARNEST ABOUT SOMETHING.

Enthusiasm has both its dangers and its limitations, but at best it may be said that it is better than some other things, says the Christian Guardian. Many a time in the history of the world the enthusiast has been voted a nuisance and a snare, but just the same the history of the world would have been a vastly poorer thing if there hadn't been a goodly number of him scattered through the centures. It is true that once in a while it is a tremendous job making good the mistake made by some enthusiastic individual, but on the other hand heaven itself can never make up on that hideous mistake that some men indulge in of not having any enthusiasms. The supreme danger in life is not that one might make mistakes. Mistakes are not always the terribly fatal things we think them to be. In reality the worst kind of mistake a man can possibly make is to get into the habit of being so careful about making mistakes that in the end he makes nothing a all. To run the risk of tremendous enthusiasm and earnestness about some things, and to jump into them without thinking too seriously of costs or consequences, is not always to be foolish; sometimes it is to be supremely wise. And to calculate too closely on consequences is often to play the fool with a master hand. Whatever a man may have or may not have the one thing that it is absolutely unsafe for him to be without is enthusiasms.

HUDSON BAY RAILWAY.

The controversy over the Hudson Bay Railway project may be summed up as in the main an argument between three different schools of opinion, the Eastern view being that the scheme cannot be a success and therefore there is no sense in "throwing good money after bad," while Western sentiment is divided between the out-and-out enthusiasts who profess to believe the railway will be of the greatest value to the people of the West and the more cautious advocates of the completion of the line who hold that so much money having already been expended it is worth while taking a chance on spending the balance needed to finish the work.

It cannot be denied that it is galling to have to accept the expenditure already made upon this project as a dead loss, but the Examiner is convinced that the probabilities of the Hudson Bay Railway ever being a paying proposition or of any great benefit even to the West are so unlikely that it would be wisdom on the part of the Federal Government to accept the loss and refuse to sink any more of the people's money in a railway project that seems hopeless.

The Eastern viewpoint may be wrong and the ultra-enthusiasts of the West may be right, but the evidence is that the work remaining to be done will run into a very large sum and that there is no certainty that the line will be of sufficient service to justify the outlay involved.

CANADA'S GRATITUDE.

"Canada can teach the rest of the world how to appreciate and reward scientific men's free gifts to mankind," declared Frederick Hudd, Canadian Trade Commissioner, at a meeting of the American Philosophical Society in Philadelphia.

That was splendid advertising for Canada, and doubtless Mr. Hudd believed he was speaking the truth.

Unfortunately, however, Canada does not always reward her scientific men for their contribution to the world's betterment or enrichment.

The case of Dr. Saunders of the cereal branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture is a striking example of State ingratitude and lack of appreciation.

Dr. Saunders, after years of research and painstaking effort, gave Marquis wheat to this country.

The effect of his discovery was to extend the wheat belt hundreds of miles to the north and make possible a huge increase in Canada's wheat production.

Probably no one man has by a single discovery added so much to the world's wealth.

He was not richly rewarded as might have been expected.

On the contrary, the Examiner believes, he was given a retiring allowance of $2,000 and a pension of $900 a year.

A yearly allowance less than a labourer's wage for a scientist who spent a lifetime in his country's service and evolved a new wheat that meant millions of dollars a year to the producers in Canada!

While Dr. Saunders' case is still fresh, there should be no boasting about Canada "showing the world" how she appreciates her scientific men.

THE TOURIST TRAFFIC.

Early reports indicate an unusually large influx of tourists into this district during the summer.

It is expected that not only will the automobile visitors be more numerous than ever, but that the Trent Canal will attract many launch owners.

The district in general should prepare for this army of visitors, remembering that upon the service they obtain from those with whom they do business will depend to a large extent the size of the exodus in future years.

The danger lies in attempts to exploit the tourist traffic.

Shorsighted individuals are inclined to look upon summer visiors as people with plenty of money who don't care how they spend it.

There are some tourists of that class, of course, but the majority are people who have made their money by keen attenton to business, and they are not the kind who can be fooled very much.

Once let the impression be created that extortion is being pracised by the people of a certain distric and it will take a lot of propaganda to restore the prestige of such a district from a tourist viewpoint.

Let Peterborough endeavour to make an impression upon its 1924 visitors that will make this city and the resorts to which it is the gateway one of the most popular tourist centres in the Dominion.

If some earnest effort is made to provide satisfactory service at a reasonable margin of profit, and if visitors are treated with courtesy and kindness, they'll not only come back themselves in future years but they'll bring their friends with them.

AN OLD HOME WEEK.

For a number of years the Examiner advocated the holding of an old boys' reunion in Peterborough, believing that the return to this city for a short time of a large number of its ex-sons and daughters would be a good thing for them and a better thing for Peterborough.

However, after an attempt had been made to launch an organization the undertaking was condemned as an obsolete idea that could not possibly succeed.

Strange to say, however, other communities in Ontario have held such reunions since the Peterborough project was dropped and have scored an outstanding success.

They found that their old boys and girls were eager to come back under such auspices, because it not only afforded them a chance to meet their old friends at home but it offered them an unique opportunity of meeting each other, something that in the ordinary course of events with ex-Peterborough citizens scattered all over the Continent would be impossible.

Lindsay is this year holding a reunion.

Strong committees have been formed and are working energetically on behalf of the enterprise, and the Examiner does not hesitate to make the prediction that our neighboring town will have a memorable week with a programme that will impress itself not only on the visitors but on the townspeople as something quite out of the ordinary.

Sometime when Peterborough people are feeling sufficiently full of Tom Best's "peptomism" to undertake such an event it is hoped that a second attempt will be made to have an old home week here.

We not only want to see all the old friends again but we have a lot of things here at home we want them to see.

UNDER INDICTMENT.

If a motion picture of public life in North America were taken today, a large section of the film would have to be devoted to investigation committees sitting in solemn deliberation for weeks and weeks; auditors delving into books and records; witnesses disclosing foul facts; statesmen basking under dark clouds; detectives snooping behind the seats of the mighty; juries deliberating on silk-hatted prisoners; middle-aged officials in striped clothes; court scenes, jail scenes; piles of slimy gold everywhere in evidence! Richard Squires, Peter Smith, Attorney-General Daugherty of the United States are all under indictment. If it were only a few individuals that were under indictment here and there, there might be no cause for alarm; but the state of public affairs disclosed by investigation into the conduct of these gentlemen is alarming. More than these men are on trial: the whole political system and the whole basis of carrying on large financial business is under fire. Without attempting to try men now on trial or to cast doubt upon the probity of all men in official positions, it is safe to say that not only were some highly-placed men open to bribery, but that great businesses, directed by men high in public esteem, were willing to debauch for their own financial purposes any public man susceptible to such influences. Once upon a time, it was thought that by selecting men who were financially independent, the temptation for them to go wrong would not exist and the public treasury was safe; but the disclosures in the United States have shown that men, already in possession of more money than they knew what to do with, stooped to wholesale dishonesty to pile up surplus dollars. The war may have something to do with it. There is a loosening of morale and public morality during a war and after a war; grafters flourish best in a setting of blood. Party politics has something to do with it. To hold the party in power, it is necessary to have funds; the gang must be kept together; friends with money must be secured. To keep political parties working smoothly, money is sought; and men with lots of money and lots of favors to ask from the Government, gladly fatten the party purse. Squires apparently succumbed to money of this kind. The Toronto Globe vigorously maintains that if Peter Smith did collect a few dollars which should not have been collected, he was merely following up a well-trodden path. There has always been mysterious money flowing around the camps of political parties, and there is little doubt that many times in the past individuals have taken advantage of the situation to annex some of it for their personal comfort. It is to be hoped that the investigation in Ontario will go far enough to disclose all that can be disclosed concerning the financial manipulations of the Governments that have ruled Ontario for many years. If the extent of the disease were known, the possibility of cure could be estimated. If only one or two individuals have been guilty of wrong-doing in Ontario, the matter is deplorable but not very serious; for individuals will go wrong, and sympathy, rather than criticism, should be extended to the party unfortunate enough to have made unfortunate selections. If an honest man suddenly turns cut-purse, his political associates should not be held up to scorn. There is only one encouraging feature about the whole dirty business, and that is that the great majority of citizens are betraying a relentless anxiety to clean matters up. The people do not want crooks in public office, and there is a growing and bitter intolerance of the condition that makes their presence in such office possible.—Saskatoon Progressive.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Following the outbreak of bobbed hair bandits Detroit produces a new variety of holdup men who sing before they go into action. This sounds like the worst yet.

The big topic in the West is not the Budget, but the Hudson Bay Railway. The majority of Western papers continue to clamour for the completion of the work, while Eastern journals regardless of their political affiliations condemn the project.

R. A. Brown, manager of the Nashua Paper Co. at Peterborough, makes a statement to the Examiner of that city about busness conditions.

The output of his company is all used for the purpose of wrapping the goods of other concerns, so when that company is busy—and it is real busy—it means that business is moving.

Mr. Brown believes Canada's next big step as a producing country will be taken when Canadians have more confidence in themselves and in their ability to do things.

There are no "ifs" or "buts" in the remarks of Mr. Brown. It is a straight, unreserved message that business is good and prospects are bright. It's the kind of talk that is needed.—London Advertiser.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 5.—German election results and talk of enlarged German credit facilities in the United States were among the reasons given to explain wheat price upturns which took place to-day. The market closed unsettled at the same as Saturday's finish to 1-2c. higher, May $1.04 to $1.04 1-8, and July $1.06 3-8 to $1.06 3-8 and 1-2, with corn at 1-8c. decline to 3-8c. advance; oats at a shade lower to 1-8c. gain, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 5c. drop.

Although more attention was paid to assumed likelihood that an increase of business with Germany as well as with other European countries had been brought considerably nearer, wheat traders seemed to be impressed also with indications of improvement in the financial situation northwest. A bank merger at St. Paul was taken here to mean that no further selling of wheat need be expected to result from Saturday's failure there. A disposition to go slow, however, on either side of the market, was shown, pending action on farm products legislation at Washington.

Montreal—Market is firm. Receipts are heavy and the quality of eggs coming forward is reported as being excellent. Jobbing specials 32, extras 29, firsts 26, seconds 24.

Ottawa— Market firm. Jobbing extras 30, firsts 27.

Manitoba—Receipts light. Dealers quoting country shippers delivered extras 21, firsts 19, seconds 16. Jobbing extras 25, firsts 23, seconds 20.

MONTREAL PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, May 5.— Trade in cash grain in the domestic market to-day was quiet. There is a firm market for flour with a good undertone. The undertone to the millfeed market was easy but there was no change in prices. A steady feeling prevails in baled hay. The egg market was without new developments. Prices for potatoes are maintained at the recent advance.

Prices ruled a shade lower in butter. An easier feeling is reported in the cheese market.

HEART WAS SO BAD HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Mrs. O. E. Fitzgerald, 106 Ross St., St. Thomas, Ont., writes:—"In the Fall of 1921, I was taken ill with my heart, but I did not pay much attention to it. I kept on with my household duties, but seemed to become worse and worse, and finally had to call in a doctor. He said I was all run down and was a nervous wreck. I had a severe pain in my chest which would move over to my heart and it became so bad I could not lie down, as when I did I had such a smothering feeling I would have to sit up in bed till it passed away.

I tried reveral remedies, but with no good results. Finally, I was induced to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I took 7 boxes, and I am now as well as I was 30 years ago, and I am now 65 years old."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box at all druggists or dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

AMBASSADOR OF SOVIETS AWAITS GERMAN AMENDS

Will Be Recalled to Moscow to Consider Further Measures If Full Satisfaction For Police Raid on Russian Trade Offices Is Not Accorded.

Explanation Insults.

MOSCOW, May 6 (Canadian Press). — The Russian Government has instructed M. Kestinsky, its Ambassador in Berlin, that unless the German Government accords full satisfaction for the recent raid on the offices of the Russian Commercial Delegation, in Berlin, the Ambassador shall come immediately to osMcow to discuss with the Government the question of what steps should be taken to deal with the situation.

Discussing the raid by the Germans, Maxim Litvinoff, Assistant Commissar for Foreign Affairs, said last night that the explanation of Dr. Stresemann, the German Foreign Secretary, could not be taken iously, as the German version of the actual facts are ludicrous. Even if the facts were as related, Litvinoff said, the proper course for the Germans would have been to ask through the Soviet Foreign Office for the extradition of a prisoner who had taken refuge in the trade delegations' office.

Note is Insolent

"Everything," M. Litvinoff continued, "tends to show that the police acted on instructions from the central authorities. Dr. Stresemann's note, therefore, must be regarded as insolent. The action of the German police was audacious and insolent.

"The raid actually was undertaken with a view to pleasing M. Foincare, (the French Premier), who, with the German capitalists, is anxious to compromise the Anglo-Russian negotiations in London. This Franco-German plot is sure to fail, as the hope of the German police to find arms in the Soviet Trade Delegation's premises proved abortive."

Relations Strained

The Soviet Government considers the incident as impairing Russo-German relations, but it is not believed in official circles that the raid was intended to violate the Rapallo Treaty, which expressly states that trade representation is part of the Russian Mission and therefore should enjoy all the privileges accorded that Mission.

"We look to the German Government," declared M. Litvinoff, "to liquidate this unpleasant incident. Meantime we have instructed M. Krestinsky, if he does not get full satisfaction, to come to Moscow and discuss with us what futrher measures shall be taken to deal with the situation.

OMEMEE FARMERS BEGIN SEEDING

Operations Started On Higher Land—Timothy Fields In Fine Condition --Fall Wheat Disappoints

OMEMEE, May 3.—Seeding has commenced in this vicinity, while there is much low land that cannot as yet be cultivated, many farmers have now started operations on the higher land. Mr. Cecil Corneil, of Ops township, is making good use of his tractor these days.

Farmers report the fall wheat crop not as good as last year but many fields are beginning to pick up and the outlook for a good yield is becoming more promising. Clover and timothy fields are splendid, with very few places being killed by the severe winter.

The grass is very short and a warm rain would do much good.

Messrs. F. G. Sandy, Harold McConnell and Joseph Bradley turned about twenty young cattle out to pasture on Saturday morning to Mr. Wm. Corneil's ranch, in Ops.

Fire Exaggerated

Mr. Thomas Egglestone, who resides on Crawford's Hill, had a fire scare this week, when he excitedly sent in an alarm to the village for help.

Mr. E. H. Mitchell, manager of the Omemee Tanning Co., gave an alarm among the employees of this institution and immediately a gang of men rushed to the scene of the fire, but on arrival found it only a small chimney fire.

Suckers Plentiful

Omemee has always been noted for her famous fishing grounds and this year will be more elated than ever. "The suckers are up," as everyone in the village knows, and the boys, large and small, are glutting the market There seems to be no scarcity of the boney species and never were they known to be any larger in the Pigeon, some of them weighing three pounds.

FOUR INCHES OF SNOW WELCOMED BY FARMERS IN SASKATOON SECTION

Wet and Melting Giving Crop Favorable Start — Most of the Wheat In That District Has Been Sown — Winter Grains Wintered Well In Southern Alberta—Crop Acreage Heavy.

SEEDING ADVANCED.

SASKATOON, Sask., May 6. —(Canadian Press).—Farmers in northern and central Saskatchewan were jubilant when they arose Monday morning to find a heavy fall of wet snow beginning. At ten o'clock the fall was reported general over an area of several hundred miles in each direction, most points reporting three to four inches of snow already fallen, and the temperature just above freezing point.

With 75 per cent. of the wheat seeded in the Saskatoon district, the snow fall is declared by the farmers here to be the best possible to start the crop under the most favorable conditions.

Spring plowing, of which there is still a good deal to be done, will be held up for a few days. Summer fallow is practically all seeded in wheat in this district.

Lethbridge Report.

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., May 6. — According to the first weekly report of the Lethbridge Herald, yesterday, about 50 per cent. of the wheat seeding is completed. Conditions are splendid on the branches south, west and north of the city, but the eastern sections of the southern Alberta district are not so fortunate with regard to moisture conditions, and the seeding has been delayed. Winter grains and alfalfa same through the winter in splendid condition. Labor seems to be somewhat scarce. The acreage will be about ten per cent. higher than last year if the moisture conditions in early May are conducive to further planting. A large acreage is being prepared for corn, and some farmers will sow as high as 60 acres of this crop. On the whole the spring has been dry and cool and about on a par with conditions during the same period of 1923.

No Delay in Seeding.

REGINA, Sask., May 5. — Today's snow storm is not expected to delay seeding more than a few days in the Regina district. It is estimated that 20 per cent. has already been done. Half an inch of snow fell this morning.

Mr. Cecil McGill teller of the local bank of Toronto was surprised on Saturday evening when a number of his friends gathered at the bank and presented him with a gold watch before his depature on Monday for Sudbury having been transferred to that point. The presentation and following address was tendered by Mr. C. Staples:

Dear Cecil,—

It is with mingled feelings of regret and joy that we anticipate your removal from our midst. We are sorry to lose your companionship for you have always been ready with a cheery smile to do your duty as well as the many favors we all have received. On the other hand we are glad this new position is a step up in your profession and we feel that you are capable of filling any post creditably and we trust that your progress will be rapid. Your place will be hard to fill and as an assurance of the appreciation of your comradeship amongst us, the old friends of Bethany ask you to accept this small gift as a slight token of our high regard to you.

There is no friends like the old friend
Who has shared our morning days,
No greeting like his welcome
No homage like his praise.
Fame is the scentless sun flower,
With gaudy crown of gold,
But friendship is the breathing rose
With sweets in every fold.

(Signed on behalf of your friends).

The high cost of bread

The United States Senate has protested against the high price of bread. "Nine cents is too much for a loaf of bread," said one senator. This referred to white flour bread which does not contain the whole wheat grain—only the starchy centre of the wheat kernel. Shredded Wheat contains all the rich, body-building material of the whole wheat grain. You get twelve of the little loaves of baked whole wheat for a few cents. Two of these Biscuits with milk make a complete, nourishing meal.

Shipbuilding Trade Worse Outside Britain

LONDON, May 6. — (Canadian Press).—"Bad as the shipbuilding industry is at home," says the Technical Journal, "it is worse abroad. Actually we are constructing nearly half a million tons more than the rest of the world put together. Thus we have regained the lead and stand pre-eminent as tonnage producers."

RADIO NEWS

There are 25,000 radio dealers in the United States.

Eighty per cent. of the sales by radio dealers are made for radio parts.

Ten per cent. radio tax, say its opponents, will cost manufacturers $10,000,000 and the public $25,000,000 annually.

Five Element Tube.

A vacuum tube consisting of a filament, two grids and two plates is the invention of a German radio engineer. It is a step beyond the four-electrode tube invented by a Frenchman. The new tube is used for generating small waves of only two or three meters.

Solder Connections.

Every fan knows connections should be soldered to keep them secure. But it isn't necessary to solder all, especially those that can be screwed down tightly with pliers. These are, for instance, the lines to tube sockets, transformers and some binding posts.

Nightingale Radio.

British broadcasters are planning to try broadcasting the song of the nightingale in its native haunts, this summer. It will be caught by a microphone set near the bird's nest and transmitted by the famous station 2LO.

Radio Foils Police.

Since the police have been active in repressing betting on races near Cleveland, O., bookmakers and others gambling on the races have taken up radio for their activities. Race information is sent on low wavelengths by prearranged code from small transmitting stations near the track to the receivers.

To South America.

One of the regular innovations by KDKA, Pittsburg, is an all-Spanish program, transmitted for the particular benefit of fans in South American countries.

When the pastor of the Community Church in Hampden, Mass., had to attend an out-of-town meeting one Sunday, recently, he installed a receiver and loud speaker at the pulpit and let the pastor of one of Springfield's larger Congregational churches conduct the services.

Record Broadcasting.

Although Class B stations are not permitted to broadcast phonograph music, one of the largest record manufacturers is planning a station from which the songs and other selections of famous by-gone artists may be put on the air. AN AWFUL ATTACK OF PIMPLES ALL OVER HIS FACE

Pimples breaking out on the face and other parts of the body is a sure sign that the blood is not in proper shape.

While the skin is the object of the attack the real seat of the disease is in the blood on account of the entire circulation being poisoned.

Burdock Blood Bitters quickly and effectually banishes pimples and all other skin diseases as it goes right to the root of the trouble by cleansing and enriching the blood.

Mr. Conad Anderson, Kelfield, Sask., writes:—"A year ago I had an awful attack of pimples. They broke out all over my face and I could not get rid of them in any way. One day a friend told me about your Burdock Blood Bitters and let me have a bottle he had to spare. After using it I noticed a change, so I bought three more bottles, and now I don't know there is such a thing as pimples."

FUNERAL OF FRANK DARLING.

The funeral of the late Frank Darling took place on Sunday from his late residence, George Street, to Warsaw Cemetery, the service being conducted by Rev. W. Harold Young of George Street Church, at the house, and it was marked at the graveside by a service under the Order of Maccabees.

The funeral was largely attended, and the esteem in which the deceased was held was testified to by the many floral tributes.

The pall-bearers were: E. Wilson, W. Russell, A. Rose, and Sir Knights Drake, Morrison and Hall of the Maccabees.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

To the Editor:—

Under date of April 21—Easter Monday—Rev. T. Albert Moore, D.D., Secretary of the General Conference of the Methodist Church, received a letter from Rev. Father L. Minehan, parish priest of St. Vincent de Paul Church, making emphatic protest against any attempt to make Church Union a political question.

Preliminary reference is made in the letter to the moral and national decline of the Roman Empire consequent upon the Pontifex Maximus, the highest religious authority in Pagan Rome, becoming Emperor at the same time. Proceeding, Father Minehan says that, at the present time there is a minority who seek to have the civil power wreck a purely religious measure carried decisively after exhaustive deliberation by the sole authority competent to deal therewith.

"Church and State have each a well-defined and independent sphere of activity,' he says. "Tariffs and creeds are widely different. Synods are not supposed to make the former, nor Cabinets the latter. At the same time both alike receive their authority from God and are required by Him to respect His laws and aid one another by friendly co-operation."

"A Political Pawn."

Happily, the letter goes on, our civil authorities have recognized this to their own great advantage; but a departure from this wise and just policy is being advocated. "It is proposed to make Church Union a political pawn, to wreck it by denying to it the incorporation which is freely given to any body of private citizens .....to carry out a proposed industrial scheme."

In conclusion, Father Minehan says, "As one who realized something of the cost of religious liberty, I wish to register my emphatic protest against any attempt to make Church Union a political question."

FABLES ON HEALTH

BABY AND HIS BATH.

"Ain't it cute!"

Mr. Mann would almost purr as he watched Mrs. Mann take the first Mann baby over her knee for the regular bath.

Of course, Mrs. Mann had been well supplied with instructions on how best to bathe the baby.

For a short time the baby should be sponged with water at a temperature of 100 degrees. Be careful to have a special cloth for body and for face.

Watch out for the tender eyes. If there is any sign of inflammation, summon the doctor. Boric acid solution may be used if any sign of eye secretion is found. If the nose becomes stopped, a boric acid solution again is advisable.

After the first month the temperature of the water may be lowered to 95 degrees, and then gradually reduced to 85 degrees. After the bath it is well to sponge the child off with water at about 75 degrees.

Capital punishment prevails in all of the states of the Union except Arizona, Kansas, Maine, Minnesota,

CHAPTER LXII

A Morsel of Gossip

"The witch-hazel madam." Annette her clever maid interrupted Miss Virginia's day-dreams by plumping a bottle of astringent on the dressing-table.

"Where've you been Annette? You're never at hand when I want you" said her mistress irritably annoyed at the brusqueness of the interruption. "I don't want the witch-hazel just now. I want a face massage."

"Yes madam" replied the maid respectfully. "I'll give you one at once. Your face does look tired."

Virginia whirled around on her angrily.

"Nonsense girl! Whatever do you mean? I haven't looked as well in ages!"

Love was a beautifier wasn't it?

Or were the years really telling?

She wheeled back to the glass again examining herself carefully. What nonsense of Annette to talk that way!

Nevertheless she submitted to the operation and leant back in a low chair head pillowed on a cushion scarf round her hair while the maid placed a towel wrung out of hot water on her face.

Luxury! Jinny luxuriated in the relaxing warmth.

Then Annette's nimble fingers pinched and squeezed and kneaded the youth into her cheeks again.

"You've got an uncommonly dry skin madam. If you didn't do this every day you'd soon be wrinkled."

Virginia repressed a shudder.

Wrinkled?

"My young lady in Los Angeles only had a massage twice a week. But then if you'll excuse my saying so she was some years younger . . ."

(Oh confound the maid's impertinence! Whatever had taken the creature today?)

"She was about the age of that pretty Miss Page who lives at Green Gables" pursued Annette ceasing the slapping process and spraying her misstres' face with the astringent lotion. "But if you ask me I should say Miss Page has it all over the cinema queen for looks!"

Virginia glared in wrath at the tormenter but Annette won an unfair point in the game by squirting some of the lotion in her mistress' eyes which automatically closed until the spraying process ended.

"What interest have you in Miss Page?" queried Virginia sharply. (There was something at the bottom of all this. She knew Annette!)

"Oh none at all madam!" The woman was all respectful courtesy. "I hope I know my place. And of course you're the last person—begging your pardon if I'm making too bold but you've the right to hear it—you're the last person to know what's going on."

Virginia sat up smartly in her chair.

"Speak out you fool! What d'you mean?" She gripped the woman's arm.

"Ow! Ouch!" Annette's natural venom towards a mistress who was too exacting and invariably inconsiderate of her servant's comfort got the better of her. "I'll thank you not to call me names and to tear the flesh off of my arm even if I'm only a maid and not looked on as a human creature!"

That unexpected onslaught checked Virginia's rising wrath for Annette was much too useful to antagonize.

"I'm sorry if I hurt you but you shouldn't annoy me by hinting so at things" said Virginia ungraciously. "Now tell me what you mean."

Annette however wasn't to be deprived of 'getting a little of her own back.' She'd been baited often enough in this God forsaken hole . . . (to her the countryside was dreariness beyond belief) not to enjoy retaliation.

And Mr. Armstrong was a real gentleman bless him! If she—the snubbed, overworked Annette—could 'put between' him and this domineering lady (save the mark) why! she just would, and good luck to him!

And so she sniffed, and hummed and hawed, and then said, cryptically:

"T'isn't my business, madam, and I'm not one to make mischief, but if I'd a young man of my own . . and not likely to in this here place being as how I can't bear country hicks and Reubens, but liking the city chaps the best, with some life and go to them! . . . if I'd a young man of my own, I'd keep an eye on him, I would, and not let him go straviging the roads in the moonlight when the nightingale's a singing fit to bust his stummick, and it's courting time, and all, and a pretty young lady on the roads."

"Yes? Yes? Go on, girl!" An angry red had risen to Virginia's cheeks. She flung discretion to the winds. She'd question Annette to the very limit, and get the story straight. "You mean that Mr. Armstrong has been meeting someone, secretly . . . unknown to me?"

Annette pursed up her lips, moving her tongue as though some highly palatable morsel rested on it, and she must make the tit-bit last as long as possible.

"No harm in it, I daresay, but it don't look well for a newly-engaged young man, and him quoting poetry, and all, and looking at the moon, and then at her, as though he could eat her——"

"Gracious goodness! You'll drive me mad, Annette! Who was the girl?" demanded Virginia, beside herself with rage and curiosity and rising suspicion. "You're not referring to that Page child who stole Mrs. Vansittart's money and diamonds on the night of the dinner here?"

A crafty look came into the maid's eyes.

"None of the servants think she stole the money. We have a different idea," she said meaningly. "Maybe a certain gentleman we won't give any name to—and it isn't Mr. Armstrong, either—could tell. But it does seem as though Mr. Armstrong has a fancy for her, and I thought you'd better know, madam." (Anxiety for Miss Virginia's peace of mind was certainly not Annette's intention . . . but it sounded well!)

Virginia rose in a flurry, completed her toilette as rapidly as possible, and pretty soon might have been seen heading across the fields toward Green Gables.

"Quoting poetry to her in the moonlight, was he?" Her lips curled in an ugly fashion. "I'll soon put an end to that!"

SIR THOMAS WHITE PAID FOR SERVICE

Received a Cheque for $1,500 from Home Bank --Interesting Disclosures.

TORONTO, May 6 (Canadian Press). — A disclosure of unusual interest in connection with the transactions occurring during the last days of the Home Bank of Canada was made yesterday when it was ascertained that Sir Thomas White, former Minister of Finance, received a fee of $1,500 for services rendered as special advisor.

An interesting memorandum relating to Sir Thomas' connection with the Home Bank affairs appears in the directors' minute book under date of 15th August, 1923. It reads as follows:

"Resolved, that the bank do pay Sir Thomas White $1,500 on account of his fees for services as special advisor in connection with the present situation of the bank's affairs."

This payment was made by cheque and Sir Thomas cashed it before the bank suspended payment at the close of business on 17th August.

The bank directors carried their case to Ottawa, throwing themselves on the mercy of the Government, and through the Federal authorities on the Canadian Bankers' Association, on the eve of the collapse.

This no doubt was the deputation referred to by Premier Mackenzie-King in the House of Commons. At that time the Premier promised to make the details known later.

FABLES ON HEALTH

JUST USE COMMON SENSE

When Mr. Mann arrived at the gymnasium for the first time, he felt like a high school boy at his first dance.

It seemed silly that a lot of fat gents should be romping around in racing trunks.

So he called the physical director aside and asked him, rather timidly, where to begin and what to do at first.

"The first requirement is common sense," the director said tersely.

"It's just common sense that men should relax and rest; that they should bathe for stimulation of circulation as well as for cleanliness; that they should get exercise, and that they should learn how to work.

"Most people think exercise is just a matter of doing so many jumping jack stunts. You can take off weight, or you can put it on with exercise. You can actually get rest. Or you can tire yourself out.

"There are exercises for the muscles, for the bones of the body, and for the internal organs.

"Don't start out with any old kind of exercise, use common sense. Go to a physical director and get the kind of exercise that fits your body and your case."

Council that the water is still cold, and the June meeting will be early enough to discuss the annual problem.

The matter was re-opened at 11.30, when Alderman Phelan moved to open the bathing beaches on Sunday, and Alderman McIntyre promptly countered with an amendment, the purport of which was diametrically opposed.

The sponser of the motion maintained that the man without a car is entitled to swim just as the motorist can swim by driving to the lake. The motion carried.

Complains about Chief.

A communication was addressed to the Mayor and Council by Alderman Stocker as follows:

"On Thursday afternoon, April 10th, 1924, I was out with Street Commissioner Evans on city business. After we had finished we returned to the rear of the City Buildings. Leaving Mr. Evans outside I entered the building. On looking out a few minutes later I noticed a police officer talking to Mr. Evans. I went out and found tha they were discussing the motor license. The police officer wanted to know why the car had no license, and I told him that this car was on public service and that we had permission to run the car without a license for a few days until the new car was delivered. I suggested that he take the matter up with his Chief and find out if this statement was all right.

"I understand from a reliable source that he reported this matter and found that my statement was correct.

"Early that evening Chief Newhall called me on the telephone in his usual kindly manner. I could tell by his tones that he was very angry and was looking for trouble, so I just told him my address was 514 Weller Street and if he had anything to communicate to me to kindly do so in writing. If that was not satisfactory, my lawyer was G. N. Gordon.

"He replied: 'Is that so. You are nothing but a street corner bum. You will not speak to me; you always try to avoid me when you are on the street.' and a few other personal matters that I do not care to repeat. He wound up by stating that he 'would get me yet.'

"In reply to these statements, I said to Mr. Newhall: 'I have resided in Peterborough for over thirty-six years, that I have paid taxes for that length of time. I have been a free-holder for over thirty years, and my word was as good as my bond. As for trying to avoid you, who are you that anyone should try to evade? I am under no compliment to you or any other person in this city, and if you think I am going to eat out of your hand you are very much mistaken. As for speaking to you, if it were possible I would not be found dead with you. Every person is known by the company he keeps, and I choose my company. As for getting me, when you get me I think I am in a position to look after myself; I will not ask the taxpayers to contribute public money for my defence.'

"Mr. Mayor and Aldermen, I consider Mr. Newhall's remarks uncalled for. I also consider them an insult to me and the very large number of taxpayers that sent me to this Council for a second term.

"I will leave this matter for the present. I am looking for no favours—all I ask is a fair, square deal.

"I expect to have more to say on this matter later."

Alderman Maher: If the treatment Alderman Stocker has received is as he states, it is a matter that should be looked into.

Alderman Fife moved to forward it to the Police Commission.

Alderman Stocker: It is evident Chief Newhall is going to lose no opportunity to insult any member of the Council.

Aldermen Stocker and Maher moved: "That this Council respectfully ask the Police Commission to ask for the resignation of Chief Newhall, believing that his usefulness is past."

Alderman Fife: This has arisen out of a personal matter. We do not know the other side. I think we should not take this action.

Alderman McIntyre: If those statements are true we should not tolerate such treatment, but I would like to see it go to the Commission first.

Alderman Crowe: What, for a minute, do you think would be the outcome of sending it to the Commission? If this had never taken place at all, in my estimation the Police Commission would be doing a favor to the citizens by asking him to resign.

Alderman Maher: If this Council will not the Commission do something, but I have no faith that they will do anything.

Alderman Phelan: Can't we ask them to deal with the matter immediately and reply as quickly as possible?

Alderman Stocker withdrew his motion and moved that the communication be sent to the Police Commission with a request that it be dealt with promptly.

Painting Dispute.

In submitting the report of the Parks Committee, Alderman Turner said no agreement had been reached on the question of letting a contract for painting the buildings at Lake Street bathing beach. The tenders were:—George H. Duncan, $75; F. Crowe, $49.60; Sharpe & Sindon, $75; and G. E. A. Tedford, $55.

Mr. Crowe and Mr. Tedford, it had been reported, are not covered by workmen's compensation; and considering Mr. Duncan's long civic record, Alderman Turner thought any favors should be given him.

Alderman McIntyre and Crowe moved that the contract be let to the lowest bidder if he is covered by the workmen's compensation board, and, if not, then to Sharpe & Sindon. "It's not fair to give all the favors to one place," Alderman McIntyre said.

On Aldermen Phelan and Crowe moving to give the contract to the lowest bidder, without proviso, Alderman McIntyre withdrew his motion, and the contract was awarded to F. Crowe.

Alderman Turner: I absolutely refuse to certify to the work. I can't for the life of me, see why we should pass up a job like this to a man who is not covered by the workmen's compensation act for the sake of a mere $30.

Later, Alderman Turner refused to move the adoption of his committee's report as amended.

By-Laws.

Alderman Phelan introduced a by-law to provide for the borrowing of $11,065.48 on debentures for the construction of sewers, and a second by-law to provide for borrowing $5,200 upon debentures for the construction of concrete sidewalks.

Alderman Turner introduced a by-law to authorize an agreement between the city and D. Hayward for caretaking of Victoria and Central Parks for $375.

Alderman Morrison introduced a by-law to authorize the construction of certain paving.

Orange Celebration.

The use of Central Park for the Orange celebration on July 12th was requested by F. W. Burnham, representing the celebration committee of District L.O.L. 3.

On motion of Aldermen Crowe and Phelan, the request was granted, with a suggestion that all the speeches and activities be held there. The chairman of the Parks Committee was asked to supervise the placing of booths with a view to preserving the sward and flower-beds.

Says Council Shy.

G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., wrote: "I think it is quite apparent that the Council does not intend to give me the advantage of its views in matters such as the imposition of a tariff to protect the coal miners and save one hundred million dollars of Canadian money going to the United States. I rather had the impression that, in view of the fact that the Council passed a resolution giving me their views some time ago, they would not hesitate, if I so requested them, to give me their views on other matters; but I see that there is a certain amount of shyness when the situation is different."

Mayor Turner: His comment is not fair in view of the fact that we knew nothing about the matter, and wrote asking him for information. Received.

Suggest a Change.

Replying to the notification sent by the City Council of its intention to pave Water Street North, the Hydro Electric Power Commission suggested a change in the city's plans. "The Commission," the letter states, "is not in a position to make large expenditures on permanent track and paving in connection with the Peterboro Railway." The alternative suggested, which it is said would meet the city's needs for roadways, is to continue the paving up George Street, from Smith Street to Argyle Street.

The communication was not dealt with last night.

Wants to Tender.

G. E. Groombridge, president of the Canadian Tent and Awning Co. Ltd., wrote: "I beg to approach you on a matter which, under the feeling of justice to my friends and fellow citizens, needs at least a little thought. Looking on the face of things as one passed the polling booths, it appears the city has recently purchased a quantity of red flags for the purpose of marking out the booths. Being in the manufacture of this line, several people approached me to know whether or not I had been asked to give my estimate for these flags. My answer was in the negative. I think it is the duty of the City Council to ask for these estimates in order that they may spend the city finances to the best advantage."

A Million Big Flies.

Complaining of a rag assorting and washing establishment east of A. Barbeau's residence on Gladstone Avenue, J. Ozias de Laplante asks for protection for his client. The work is a nuisance and a menace, he says, and was condemned by the sanitary inspector. "In the summer months there are over a million great big blue flies drawn to this locality, and they stay right there till winter sends them where all flies go in the winter time. Last summer, Mr. Barbeau's children, and he has six of them, which is about as many as all you Aldermen can collectively boast of, developed sores on their hands and faces, and the doctor blamed it all to the presence of flies and the contaminating influences of the surroundings." It is requested that the business be conducted in a manner to comply with the regulations of health and cleanliness.

The letter was forwarded to the Manufacturers' Committee.

Claims Against City.

The City Clerk reported that the City has been served with writs in the cases of Emma Trotter, claiming $3,000 for personal injuries; and Jane Horsefield, claiming $500 on the same grounds. The City Solicitor has been instructed to protect the City's rights.

Gordon and O'Brien are acting for the plaintiffs in both cases.

The Legal Committee reported and recommended as follows:—

That the city solicitor be authorized to offer, without prejudice, to settle the case of Mrs. B. A. Gibson against the city for an amount up to one hundred dollars, and if it is settled the city treasurer be authorized to pay the amount settled for, up to the sum named, on the certificate of the city solicitor.

That, without admitting liability in the matter of the claim of W. Hutchinson on account of an accident to his daughter, he be paid the amount of her doctor's bill—twelve dollars—in full settlement.

That the city engineer be instructed immediately upon notice of an accident being received, to make an examination of the place where the accident is said to have occurred and make a report.

Claims Wrongful Arrest.

C. R. Harnett, writing from Carleton Place to the City Council, presents a claim for $200 for wrongful arrest and detention by the police on February 2 this year. "I was placed in the cell and was not permitted to get in touch with Peterboro friends or a lawyer until the afternoon of Monday. Though under age, I was not permitted to send a message home, although I offered to pay for it, and therefore my father was not able to come to my aid until Tuesday morning."

The young man says he was at the time still suffering from the effects of an operation, and was deprived of the medicine required. Not having blankets or other sufficient covering, he says, he contracted a cold and a nervous breakdown followed the trial, necessitating a rest for five weeks. His picture and finger-prints were taken and are wrongfully held by the Chief, he declares.

Expenses which he incurred include legal fees, his father's railway fare, his board which he had to pay at the police station, long distance messages, hotel bills, and other items. He lost, through this unwarranted treatment, he further says, the opportunity to complete his studies for matriculation. His letter concludes: "I hope that no son of yours will ever be compelled to undergo such a mental strain with the doors of the penitentiary apparently opening for him for a period of five years to life, though innocent and unworthy of such treatment."

Enclosed with the letter were photographs of the evidence taken at the trial which showed Harnett completely innocent of the charge of passing forged cheques. The real cheque artists were rounded up in Windsor and Stratford after slipping through the fingers of the Peterboro force while they held Harnett a prisoner.

The communication was referred to the Legal Committee, and a report will be asked from the chief of police.

Hunter Street Bridge Again.

Mayor Turner, representing Joe Longo, said the store at the west end of Hunter Street had been improved, but Mr. Longo had been put to some expense in the process. Then, too, before the street was raised, the eyes of the public were on a level with his show windows but now the windows were too low. During the fixing of the road he was inconvenienced by having having his store blocked.

Alderman Crowe: I move he get $100, because this council submitted to a steal of $1,100.

Alderman McIntyre: Two wrongs don't make a right. I move the request be not granted.

Alderman Morrison: There's no doubt he had some fruit destroyed and suffered some inconvenience.

The motion carried, granting $100 on condition of a full release.

Motor League Request.

D. Reed Wren, with an eight-man deputation from the Peterborough branch of the Motor League, asked aid toward erecting signs on the Kingston highway. Road signs are being put up all over the country, and safety signs in the city are being erected out of the League's funds. Aid was asked toward large illuminated signs on the highway to direct tourists to Peterborough. The total expenditure will be about $500, and the amount set aside by the Council last year, but returned unused, was $300.

Leon Frazer, secretary of the Motor League, explained that it has been decided to erect two signs instead of the one contemplated last year, in order to attract tourists from both directions.

Mayor Turner remarked that the Council was in accord with the aims, but, unfortunately, it had no money.

Alderman Morrison moved that the remnants of the old Hunter Street bridge that cannot be used by the board of works, be sold. His idea was to apply the proceeds on the signs.

Alderman Stocker suggested that one sign might be erected this year and the second next year.

Alderman Phelan thought it would be money well spent.

Alderman Morrison and Alderman Maher moved that the grant of $300 be made provided the signs were erected this year and illuminated.

Alderman McIntyre: Where is the money coming from?

Mayor Turner: I don't know. There must be no overdraft.

Utilities Investigation.

The investigation into the Campbell Milling Company's account, ordered by Council on facts brought to its attention by Alderman Meyers, chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, will open in the Council Chambers on Thursday evening at eight o'clock. Members of the city council will be present to give evidence and present their contentions.

Close City Hall Early.

The city hall staff petitioned the city council that the offices be closed on Saturday afternoons at 12 o'clock. Letters were attached from several cities in Ontario showing that all close early on Saturday.

Alderman Stocker: If they get three months' Saturday afternoons, with one or two on duty they are doing well. They come at nine or later, while in other offices they start at eight.

Alderman Phelan spoke favorably to the petition.

Alderman Crowe thought the fact that factories close on Saturday afternoons is an argument in favor of the city offices being open on that day.

Aldermen Meyers, Morrison, and Maher spoke in favor of the Saturday holiday, providing someone remained to transact business.

On motion of Aldermen Morrison and Phelan, the request was granted on condition someone remain to carry on business.

St. Lawrence Development.

Declaring that 370 municipalities of Ontario have invested $250,000,000 in the Hydro and additional supplies will soon be required, and the undeveloped water power in the St. Lawrence and Niagara Rivers constitute the most desirable sources, a resolution was passed protesting the passing of the interests of the people under the control of private interests or public interests other than Hydro.

Aldermen Meyers and Stocker fathered the motion.

Band Concerts

Aldermen Phelan and Stocker moved that the chairman of the Parks Committee be asked to arrange the concerts to be given inVictoria Park by the four musical organizations.

Appoint Dog Catcher

Alderman Fife moved that the appointing of a dog catcher to enforce the dog by-law be left to the finance committee chairman.

Camping Site

The Ontario Motor League, Toronto, asked about a camping site in the city.

On motion of Aldermen McIntyre and Crowe the request was sent to the Exhibition Board asking them if they could take care of the campers in the exhibition ground.

That Photograph

Alderman Crowe characterized the council photograph as frivolous and a means of throwing the people's money away. He moved against it. The photograph will be taken, Aldermen McIntyre and Crowe being the only members voting against it on a call for yeas and nays by Alderman Crowe.

Fire Chief's Report

There were 47 alarms during April, representing a loss of $325. This was divided into buildings, $225, and contents, $100.

Miscellaneous Business

Alderman Fife reported that unless some action is taken immediately action will be taken against the city in connection with the dumping ground. Mayor Turner promised to see the sanitary inspector.

The Colonial Hide Company drew the attention of the Board of Works to the condition of a ditch on Lansdowne Street. The ditch is filled with rubbish, ranging from tin cans to old wagons, and bad drainage and an offensive odor are the result.

The city engineer said he would see the matter attended to.

Oiling of Lafayette Avenue was requested by 18 residents, who declare in their petition: "It is a short street and no grass sides, a thick population and lots of dust."

Residents on Park Street from the railroad to Romaine Street petitioned for a sidewalk to be constructed as a local improvement.

A letter of thanks was read from E. G. Patterson, manager of the Canadian General Electric Company, Ltd., expressing appreciation of the goodwill and confidence evidenced in the passing of the by-law by a majority of 2,324.

W. C. Ford complained that when he asked for a sewer and sidewalk he received only a few loads of cinders.

W. W. Hiltz, mayor of Toronto, asked for suggestions toward helping the unemployment situation, and the council assured him of its co-operation.

Alderman Maher moved to prepare a by-law to regulate the location of garages to preserve the rights of contingent tenants. The motion carried.

Alderman Maher moved to request the city solicitor to report on the right of the city council to regulate the location of buildings.

The city will construct approaches to 197 Loudon Street and 116 Sophia Street.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

JACK OF THE BEANSTALK

"Names, please?" asked a footman.

The next place that Mister Muggs took the Twins in Once-Upon-a-Time Land was to see Jack and his mother. No, not Jack and Jill, or Jack Spratt, or Jack the Giant Killer, but Beanstalk Jack.

Oh, yes, of course Beanstalk Jack did kill one giant, but the other Jack killed seven.

Well, the little automobile whizzed along past seven mills and seven hills, and came to a fine city. And asking the policeman where Beanstalk Jack lived, they were told that the first house on the finest street was his, and they would have no trouble in finding it.

Soon they came to the finest street, but it was so full of automobiles all going in one direction that they had to take their place in line and move slowly with the crowd.

They soon discovered the reason for such a crowd. There was a party at Jack's house and the cars were stopping one by one to let the people out.

"We weren't invited, but I'm sure it will be all right," siad the little fairyman. "So you Twins go on in while I park the car."

A big fellow in gold braid and buttons opened the door of the magic car and helped them out.

Mister Muggs jumped after them two steps at a time and caught up to them at the door.

"Names, please?" asked a footman in a voice that seemed to come from his toes. At the same time another one stuck out a silver tray for their cards.

"My goodness! I forgot mine. We all did," said the fairyman, patting himself all over as if in search of his card case. "Just say 'Mister Muggs and Nancy and Nick, please'."

So they followed the man to the door of the drawing-room and there he stopped, calling loudly, "Mister Muggs, Nancy and Nick."

And then, with his nose sticking up in the air like the spout of a teapot, he marched off, leaving the three visitors in the doorway with everybody staring at them.

Jack saw them at that minute and rushed over. "Hello, people," he cried. "I'm ever so glad to see you. Come on over and meet my mother."

"But we're not dressed for a party," said Nancy. "We look perfectly awful."

"No, you don't," said Jack. "You look just right, the way I like you. I am tired of this fine house and all these servants. Mother and I were both happier before we got all the giants' money and became the richest people in town. We are going back to the country and build a little cottage and keep a cow again. If you will come and see us there I am sure we will all have a better time."

Jack's mother was as nice as Jack, although Nancy remembered that she had lost her temper when Jack sold the cow for a handful of beans, and threw them out of the window.

They all had a happy time and promised to return.

EXPLAINS PROBLEMS OF COMPULSORY INSURANCE

Assessment Is Advocated On All Users of the Highway to Pay Cost of Injuries—Writer Disputes Argument That It Would Lead to Safer Driving.

SPEED IS BLAMED.

By THEODORE D. PRATT,
General Manager, Motor Truck Association of America.

Is compulsory automobile insurance desirable or necessary? This problem is active in the minds of many; some from pure mental beneficence all the way down to pure selfishness. We can neglect the ethical side of those whose actions and agitations are purely selfish, though they require watching, but the arguments of those who believe in the righteousness of their cause must be considered. They must be met and reasoned with, because if we do not convince them and ourselves that compulsory automobile insurance is not desirable or necessary, we are going to face it within a short time.

In the first place, is it desirable? The reason urged for this is that there are many injuries to person and property which are never compensated for, because the owner of the motor car concerned in the accident is not financially responsible. As the economic loss because of this is great, and is in the last analysis borne by the people at large, they claim, and with some justice, that it should be borne entirely by those who cause it.

In their anxiety to bring about this just situation they overstep the bounds and go too far. They say it must be borne by the class to which those who cause the accidents belong. Let us examine this carefully. Should all who own cars join together and chip in to a fund to pay all damages caused by motor cars? If this thought is correct in this case, why not in other cases? Then all who own staircases must join together to create a fund to pay damages to those who fall downstairs; all who own suspended signs must likewise join together to reimburse those injured by falling signs. These parallels could be carried on indefinitely, and to absurdity, but it is not necessary.

From the point of the public is it desirable? There are many who believe that carrying insurance tends to make the operator of a car careless, and there is much ground for this belief. The insurance companies believe it, and back up their statement with a big increase on collision insurance premiums unless the owner will agree to assume the first $50 or $100 loss. They state that it is their belief that putting the vast aggregate of small losses on the owners' shoulders will tend to cause them to drive more cautiously and thereby avoid accidents. It does not appear that many accidents are caused by deliberate disregard of others, but there is another underlying cause. While it may seem to many to be the same psychologically, it is not. The reason for most accidents, minor and otherwise, in which the car driver is to blame is evidently due to the desire "to get along."

Furthermore, the driver of a car realizing that he has a powerful instrument under his control and direction, but which is subject to greater limitations than a pedestrian's power and control, subconsciously expects the pedestrian to recognize this fact and give him the right of way. Compulsory insurance is likely to intensify this feeling rather than decrease it.

"I Suffered Terribly With Sore, Aching Back"

Mrs. Roland Ferguson, 194 Lake St., Peterboro, Ont., writes:

"For over two years I suffered terribly with sore back. I was almost mad with the pain, and had doctored with it until I was discouraged. Then my father, who is a firm believer in Dr. Chase's Medicines, advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I followed his advice, and am glad to say I was completely relieved of that torturing pain in my back. It is over a year since I used these pills, and I have had no return of the trouble, but always keep them in the house."

LAKEFIELD AND DISTRICT NEWS

Village to the North Is Ahead of Peterboro In Oiling Streets.

LAKEFIELD, May 6.—The announcement that a carload of road oil has arrived in the village and will soon be put on the street visited by the oiler. These naturally are the most travelled streets and the high winds of the past week have carried clouds of dust into many fresly cleaned houses. The oiled streets have good boosteds in the local housekeepers.

The Salvation Army Band of Peterboro have very kindly offered their services to the Citizens' Band to give a concert in aid of the local band funds on May 15th. This will be a real treat and will be a benefit to the boys who have been working faithfully all winter to bring the band up to the statue of a first rate organization. The success of the concert is a foregone conclusion.

The Citizens Band, which was recently re-organized is making decided progress. A number of recruits signed up and the older members have been assisting the leader in training them. The municipal grant of $200 made possible the purchase of new instruments which are being assigned to the players. G. G. Connell is the latest recruit and is practicing assiduously. The band will very soon be in a position to given open air concerts which will be very much appreciated in the summer evening.

The busy housewife has been indulging in an orgy of house-cleaning which apparently at once her delight and despair. Curtains, freshly laundered appear in many clothes yards to be replaced by heavy hangings, quilts (many of these are splendid specimens of a neglected art) and rugs. The cheerful sound of the carpet beater has replaced the hum of the sawing machine which has gone into summer obscurity. Windows are cleaned and are shining, double windows are being put into their summer quarters and verandahs and porches are being made ready for the summer days which are nearly due.

Owing to the extremely backward spring, gardening is progressing slowly, there have been very few warm days and the lowered temperature of the past five days has retarded growth. Gardens are being plowed or dug however and flower beds laid out in readiness for the time "when summer comes."

There is a considerable increase in the interest shown in tennis this season and the club are making good progress in their plans for a very successful season. The ladder system, which was found effective last year is being used.

FARMERS ARE HOPEFUL DESPITE BAD WEATHER

LAKEFIELD.—The late spring and continued cold weather has impeded the farmers' progress this season as growth is at a standstill. After the heavy rain of Saturday night a few day of warm sunshine would make a great difference. The farmers are not as pessimistic as last year a sthey found good crops follow the late spring.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

A Domestic Drama in Four Acts Produced Many Laughs.

MILLBROOK, May 5.—The play, "The Plot that Failed," given by the Dramatic Club of the Methodist Church in the Town Hall on Wednesday and Thursday evenings, drew a pleased and appreciative audience each night, though the wet weather on Wednesday considerably lessened the attendance for the opening performance.

The play, which is a domestic drama in four acts, has a plot that sustains the interest throughout, and the choice of roles in every instance appeared to fit the one impersonating the character admirably. The music furnished by the Millbrook orchestra, under the leadership of G. A. Duncan, before the entertainment and between the acts, added greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion, and eliminated any tiresome waits while the stage setting and the costumes were being changed.

The committee received many compliments on the attractive stage arrangements, the opening scene in the yard of "Valley Farm," the home of Silas Holcomb (Mr. G. W. Sayles) and his sister, Miss Alvira (Miss A. Hampton), with its evergreen hedge, rustic seats, and well of the "old oaken bucket" variety, proving most attractive. For the other three acts, an interior setting was necessary, first at the Rutledge mansion in Chicago, and finally the living room at the farm, and these, too, were carried out in appropriate detail.

The Dramatic Club is under special obligation to Rev. S. T. and Mrs. Tucker, who added much to the comfort and pleasure of the rehearsals by opening their home two evenings each week for practically all of the practices, and who also assumed the major share of responsibility for the stage settings and other details, which added greatly to the success of the performances by being so thoughtfully worked out.

Briefly told, the story is mainly concerned with the love affairs of Hetty Holcomb (Mrs. P. Stinson), a "country flower transplanted to city soil," and Harold Rutledge (Mr. B. R. Richards), a wealthy young man from Chicago, who comes as a summer guest to "Cumps' Corners," and marries Hetty to the disappointment and anger of Perry Deane (Mr. F. N. Alcorn), a "son of the soil," who has been her playmate and lover from childmood.

Mrs. Rutledge (Miss Pearl Burnham), Harold's "proud and heartless mother," is also enraged at her son's choice, her desire having been that he should marry Isabel Carney (Mrs. B. R. Raper), a city girl as proud and unscrupulous as herself. Together they plot to poison Harold's mind against his country bride, and so ill-treat and hurt the young wife that in desperation at being being so unhappy and misunderstood she leaves for her former home with Perry Deane, who had secretly followed her to Chicago after her marriage, fallen into evil habits and company, and at last, in dire trouble, appeals to Hetty to help him "get away from the officers."

But this was playing right into the enemy's hands, for it is Isabel Carney who finds the note left by Hetty for her husband and gives it to the latter, making him think that his wife has eloped with a former lover. Humorous situations are created throughout the play by a number of local hits and in other ways, some of the most laughable being the frequent visits of Azariah Keep (Mr. P. Stinson), "a clock tinker, who is a little hard of hearing, and who has something to say to Alviry," but who never gets the fateful question asked until just before the curtain is rung down for the last time, when, emboldened by the happy re-union of Hetty and Harold, he hands his carefully written proposal to "Viry," at the same time giving her a bright red flower.

The visit of Silas and Alvira Holcomb to Chicago to see Hetty, who welcomes them warmly, though her mother-in-law and her guest, Miss Carney, receive them coolly and scornfully, their ludicrous mistakes, and old-fashioned clothes their eagerness each to out-talk the other in giving Hetty the home news, as well as their independence in face of Mrs. Rutledge's disapproval, call forth repeated peals of laughter from the audience.

Jennings (Mr. C. Garside), the butler at the Rutledge mamson, took his part admirably, his unbending dignity and unmoved countenance when Silas, "showing off his greenness," as Alviry says, wants to shake hands with him thinking he is "some big bug," creating a good deal of merriment. Verbeny (Miss Phyllis Richards), the "hired girl at the farm," who has a weakness for love stories, and breaks in at the most inopportune moment when Harold and Hetty are enjoying a tete-a-tete, with the promise, "Go on, I won't peep, might get caught some time myself," brought smiles many times by this and other asllies.

The borrowing propensities of Lizy Ann Tucker (Mrs. G. W. Sayles), who "never gossips," but who is, nevertheless, ahead of any one else when any news is to be broadcasted, constituted another amusing element relieving some tense situations as the play advanced.

Prompted by remorse for past folly, Perry Deane, assisted by David Hildreth (Mr. W. G. Hetherington), a Chicago lawyer, who almost quarrels with his neice, Miss Carney, over her connivance with Mrs. Rurlegde in ill-treating Hetty, becomes the chief agent in making the final understanding between Harold and his wife a happy and accomplished fact. Hildreth also helps Perry out of his own difficulties and encourages him in a restored self-respect and a fresh start.

Miss Ella Elson presided at the piano, the other members of the orchestra besides the leader, Mr. Duncan, being: Misses May Byam, Kathleen Isbister, Messrs. J. Isbister, J. L. Byam, G. E. Burnham, Lloyd Byam, Ernest Burnham, and F. Rowe.

The proceeds were in the neighborhood of $180.

FOR IRONING BOARD

If you live in cramped quarters and have no place to put an ironing board, you will find this plan helpful: remove the upper drawer of your bureau, and put it back upside down, with a Turkish towel or pad over it. You will have a good surface upon which to press.

TRIPLE PROGRAM ON SINGLE WIRE.

To Release Radio Waves All the Lighting Customer Needs Is a Small Receiving Set.

STATEN ISLAND, N. Y., May 6. Radio programmes will be switched on and off like electric lights in millions of homes within the next few years. So promise engineers who are working here on wired wireless.

For four months last winter, an engineering staff under the direction of R. D. Duncan Jr. gave Staten Island a daily radio programme over the city electric lighting system loaned to them for their experiments by the light company. Only one programme could be sent at a time.

Now they have perfected apparatus enabling them to send two programmes simultaneously, and before long they expect to transmit three simultaneous programmes over the same wires without in any way interfering with the ordinary light and power current on those wires!

The plan is based on the discoveries of Maj.-Gen. George O. Squier and others that high frequency radio current can be superimposed without interfernce on wires carrying the low frequency current for lighting and power.

Works Easily

"Some 12,000,000 homes are wired for electricity," says C. W. Hough, who is in charge of the experiments. "These wires furnish a pathway terminating at every lighting socket.

"Suppose we cause songs, lectures, news dispatches, orchestra, music and other features to run along this path. To release the radio waves, all the lighting customer needs is a small receiving set which he plugs into a light socket the same as a fan or a toaster.

"He requires no aerials, no special wiring, no batteries; nothing, in fact, but a neat little case with a single dial. Once the dial is placed in position, no further attention is necessary."

Star Talent

Because wired radio is still in the experimental stage, the cost to the consumer has not yet been determined. Hough believes, however, that a three-programme service can be supplied for a monthly rental of about two dollars.

"Wired radio offers the solution to the broadcasting station puzzle," said he. "When we get into actual commercial operation, the artists and musicians will not be asked to work for nothing. They will be paid.

"If the public demand turns out to be as large as we hope, the income from monthly subscribers should be large enough to permit us to engage the foremost stars."

NATIONAL RADIO SERMONS

Rev. James E. Freeman, famous Episcopalian bishop of Washington, has been working on a plan to broadcast sermons by eminent clergymen and laymen all the way across the country from the National Cathedral at Washington.

Doctor Freeman has been conferring with Marconi, Lee De Forest, William Jennings Bryan and others on this plan. He believes radio some day may be the means of bringing about something like spiritual unity in this land of many creeds.

METHUEN FARM YIELDS LUMBER

Property of 600 Acres Developed Half Century Ago By An Englishman Has Wealth of Maple.

APSLEY, May 5. — A new lumbering industry is being started in Methuen on what is known as the Big Farm, comprising about 600 acres and containing some of the finest maple in the country. This farm was originally owned by Mr. A. J. Wright, an English gentleman, a pioneer of the township 50 years ago, and the first churchwarden of St. George's church, Apsley, and who at the time offered one hundred dollars annually on condition that a clergyman be appointed. Mr. Wright employed a number of farm hands, and cleared up a lot of the land. A big field now covered with boulders, 50 years ago grew the finest crop of wheat ever seen in this part of the country. A barn 100 feet long and 50 feet wide, long since demolished, would hardly contain the fruits of his industry. A mill has been erected on the property by a Mr. Armstrong and lumbering operations will be in full swing in the course of a few days, logs being "trucked" to the mill, and the lumber [illegible] by motor truck across the Long Swamp to Coe Hill, according to local gossip.

Religious Movies.

Motion pictues of the life of Christ, were shown by Mr. Stanley Windsor accompanied by Mr. Spence, at St. Paul's church, Lasswade, on Saturday, and at St. Andrew's church, Owenbrook, on Monday, and were intensely interesting and educative to the fairly large congregations present, many of whom had never seen a moving picture before. Owing to numerous requests from those who missed seeing them the series will probably be repeated in the near future.

Two New Houses.

Apsley continues to grow. Building operations have commenced on Vernal Windsor's new house and Archie Downing is excavating the cellar of his new residence. No move has yet been made for the building of additional sidewalks.

Gift to Library.

Mr. Gordon Fraser has presented the library of St. George's Institute with a splendid gift in the shape of a large number of volumes of first class fiction. His kindness will be very much appreciated by the patrons, and Rev. C. Spence is delighted with the addition thus made to the library which is used all over the Mission.

Log Drives Moving.

Eel's Creek is again free of logs, the four drives going from Apsley, are all well on their way to their destination. Archie Whitmore has charge of Purdy's drive on Jack's Lake.

Miss Myrtle McFadden and sister from Bermuda are visiting at their parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. McFadden.

License Inspector Stewart was in the village on Tuesday.

Mr. W. Collins returned by motor on Monday from Athens, where he spent the Easter vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Windsor motored to Peterboro on Friday.

Mrs. Ben Coones attended the funeral of her nephew at Peterboro this week.

Mrs. Norman Wilson gave a dance on Thursday, which was largely attended by the young people.

Born: On Tuesday, April 29th, to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Scott, Chandos, a daughter.

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS SHOULDER NEW BURDENS

TORONTO, May 6.—(Canadian Press.)—With only two dissentients, a meeting of the daily newspapers of Quebec, members of the Canadian Press, held here yesterday afternoon, decided to adopt the recommendation of the board of directors for absorption by papers throughout the country of the $50,000 annual grant hitherto made by the Dominion Government for wires to bridge the gaps between east and west, but cancelled at the last session. The newspapers of Canada have thus decided as a whole to carry on at their own expense the transcontinental leased wires linking the people of the Canadian east and west.

HIGH POINT IN TIRE PRODUCTS IS 43,000,000

Production and Sales of Tires Last Year Touched a New High Point—Five Standard Sizes Adopted--New Developments.

Manufacturers Lose.

By JEROME T. SHAW,
Editor of Tires.

New records from the standpoint of production and sales in units were established by the automobile tire industry in 1923. It is estimated that approximately 43,000,000 casings were passed on to automobile owners. Few, if any, companies engaged in the manufacturing branch of the industry have come through the year with profits commensurate with sales developments, and only three are paying dividends on their common stock. Back of this situation is an overproduction during the first six months of the year and subsequent price reductions which were generally held not to be warranted by conditions in the raw material markets or in labor costs.

Tire users have benefited by the keen competition among manufacturers for the available business, for never before were tires purchased at so low a price. The records of the Rubber Association of America show that while the prices of food, clothing fuel, house furnishings, and building materials are about 64 per cent. higher than before the World War, tire costs are now 30 per cent. below those of pre-war days.

While last year was disappointing to many who were willing to admit in January, 1923, that the industry had assumed a stable position, it is pointed out that the business is fundamentally sound. With 14,000,000 motor vehicles registered, and with the prospects of the car manufacturers maintaining a representative production schedule during the coming year, there is reason for sound optimism prevailing in the tire industry.

The outstanding development in the tire business has been the introduction of what is known as the balloon tire. Apparently all doubts about the superiority of this type of casing over the former standard construction have been removed. An inspection of the cars at the show will disclose the extent to which the balloon tire has been accepted.

The balloon tire is designed to carry low air pressure. It contains fewer layers of fabric and is considerably larger in cross-sectional size than the standard tire. Recently adopted standards provide for five balloon tire sizes on 20 and 21-inch rims, the balloon casing with a 4.40-inch cross-sectional diameter and that with the 5.25 inch diameter being made only for 21-inch rims. The 6.20 is made for both the 21 and 20-inch rims and the 7.30 for the 20-inch rim only. The size of these tires will be appreciated when it is understood that the standard 3½-inch "high-pressure" tire will be replaced by the 4.40-inch balloon, and standard 4-inch section by the 5.25, the 4½-inch section by the 6.20, and the 5-inch by the 7.30. Inflation pressures necessary for the most efficient operation of these tires range from twenty-four to forty pounds and vary, of course, with the size of the tire and the load carried.

One tire company has placed upon the market balloon tires which, after certain essential adjustments, can be applied to cars with 23, 24 and 25 inch rims, and it is expected that other manufacturers will follow suit.

Balloon Tire Advantages.

Development men of the rubber companies agree on the fact that the new type of tire gives exceptional cushioning, permitting a degree of comfortable riding that motorists heretofore have never experienced. Surface irregularities are toned down and everything is cushioned so that there are no sharp jolts or shocks and drivers do not need to slacken speed, because the average rough road can be taken at the same speed as pavement. It is also claimed that cars equipped with balloon casings have less tendency to skid, due to the greater amount of ground contact area they provide. One company's tests have shown that the increased tractive efficiency of the larger, thin-walled tires is very marked, and that under ordinary driving conditions it is probably sufficient to make the use of chains unnecessary. There is a marked difference of opinion regarding the advantage of the balloon tire in connection with gasoline consumption.

Many reasons have been advanced for the over-production of tires during the first six months of the year, one being that the manufacturers did not take into consideration the exceptional mileage that was being returned from the tires placed in service during the last few years. Whatever the cause, the industry found itself burdened with a record-breaking inventory of cord tires during June and July. The Rubber Association report shows that at the end of June there were 4,096,145 pneumatic cord tires in the hands of the manufacturers participating in the compilation of its figures, which does not include one of the largest producers and many companies with small outputs.

Through the activities of tire dealer organizations in various parts of the country and the National Tire Dealers' Association, merchandising conditions in the tire business have been appreciably improved. The associations have been responsible for the development of a spirit of co-operation among the manufacturing and distributing branches of the industry, with the result that relations between the motorist and the tire dealer are likely to be improved to the advantage of the former.

Much of the condition in the retail field is charged to the fact that there are too many dealers handling the retail sale of tires. It is said that there are more than 125,000 tire dealers, whereas the business could be adequately handled by not more than 25,000. It is also estimated that the production facilities of the manufacturers will permit the turning out of about 60,000,000 tires a year, while last year's record-breaking shipments are estimated at 43,000,000.

An idea of the size of some of the big tire plants will be gained when it is understood that one company which operates factories in Akron, Los Angeles and Canada turned out a total of 64,013 casings at its three plants last summer. At the Akron factory alone it made 48,953 tires. Another Akron company in its annual report stated that its daily average production for the twelve months ended October 31 last, was 26,000 tires.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Relieved of Nervousness and Other Distressing Ailments by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brooklyn, N. Y. — "I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound four years ago, and am taking it now for the Change of Life and other troubles and I receive great benefit from it. I am willing to let you use my letter as a testimonial because it is the truth. I found your booklet in my letter box and read it carefully, and that is how I came to take the Vegetable Compound myself. It has given me quiet nerves so that I sleep all night, and a better appetite. I have recommended it already to all my friends and relatives." — Mrs. ENGLEMANN, 2032 Palmetto St., Ridgewood, Brooklyn, N. Y.

For the woman suffering from nervous troubles causing sleeplessness, headache, hysteria, "the blues," Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will be found a splendid medicine. For the woman of middle age who is passing through the trials of that period, it can be depended upon to relieve the troubles common at that time.

You should give it a fair trial now.

Her Health Is Now Good

New Brunswick Lady Praises Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Madame J. Theriault Completely Relieved of Pains in Her Kidneys.

Burnsville, N. B., May 5.—(Special).—Once more Dodd's Kidney Pills have proved their inestimable value to suffering women. Madame J. Theriault of this place suffered from kidney trouble. She writes: "I used two boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and have been relieved of severe pains in my kidneys and my health is now good."

The reason Dodd's Kidney Pills have come to occupy such a prominent place in the family medicine chest is that so many of the ordinary everyday ills come from sick kidneys. Rheumatism, urinary troubles, backaches, diabetes and heart disease can be traced directly or indirectly to sick kidneys.

To be assured of good health the kidneys must be kept in good working order all the time.

Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills are not the best remedy for sick kidneys.

CITE MINISTER TO DEFEND STATEMENT

Claimed He Intimated Presbytery Had Been Manipulated in Favor of Union.

TORONTO, May 6 (Canadian Press). — The Presbytery of Toronto in session to-day decided to cite Rev. C. Stuart Parker, minister of New St. Andrew's Church in this city to appear before the Presbytery to defend the statements which are said to have been made by him at an anti-unionist meeting, intimating that the Presbytery had been manipulated in favour of church union.

Mr. Parker came to Toronto from Glasgow, Scotland, last spring, and recently has been a prominent speaker on behalf of those opposed to church union.

SERVICES AT THE CATHEDRAL

At St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday, the various eexrcises in connection with Womens' Mission Week were well attended. Last evening, to a filled church, Rev. Charles Crowe, C. SS.R., of Boston, addressed a special discourse on Sin, which is any iwlful thought, word, deed or omission, contrary to the law of God.

Written large on the heart of every man is the great moral principle: "Avoid evil and do good." When a man does that which is good, he experiences a sense of self-approval and happiness. He may not boast of his good deed, but he is pleased if his neighbor hears about it. On the other hand, when a man does that which is evil, he feels a sense of self-reproach and shame; he is anxious to conceal his deed from his neighbors, because in sinning he fails as a man, and his failure is of a different nature than if he had failed as a scientist, a chemist, or a mathematician. The instruction last night was a well-studied, clear exposition of the evil of sin.

After remarking how pleased and encouraged he and his co-workers were at the splendid attendance, Rev Father Crowe took as his text: "They who commit sin and iniquity are the enemies of their own so ls," from Tobias 10:12, and said in part:

"There is sin, there is abundant and manifest evidence of sin all about us. Why do men sin? Is it because they desire to be deliberately malicious? No, I think not. Men sin because they become careless and indifferent to God's positive law, the ten commandments. As said the Prophet Jeremias: "With desolation is the land made desolate, because no one considereth in his heart." Man is made to the image and likeness of God and must guard the welfare of his soul in time and for eternity.

"Sin entered the Garden of Eden, and our first parents fell through the sin of obedience; and thus sorrow, affliction, pain and death entered this world. "Cursed, said Almighty God to Adam, "is the earth in thy work, and thistles and thorns it shall bring forth to thee. In the sweat of thy face thou shalt eat b..ad, till thou returnest to the earth, out of which thou was taken, for dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return.' We have but to look about us to see the effect of God's offended justice, in pain, affliction, sorrow, wars, death."

"After the cleansing waters of baptism, the soul possesses supernatural life and lives in intimate union with God. It is really the temple of God. "If any man love Me," says Christ, "My Father will love him, and we will come and make our abode with him. By grievous, actual sin, man destroys this union. God and sin cannot dwell together in the soul. God is light, sin is darkness; God is truth, sin is error; God is sanctity, sin is malice; God is love, sin is hatred. The malice of sin may be in part understood if we meditate on the tremendous price paid by God the Son for man's redemption."

Here the reverend preached pictured feelingly the life, passion and death, voluntarily endured of Jesus Christ. In conclusion, he made an earnest appeal to his hearers to purify their souls and fear sin.

"Go out to the cemetery," he said, "stand by the graves of your forefathers, and if these mouldering bones could speak to you, they would say: "As you are now, I was once. As I am now, you shall be, for the wages of sin is death." "If you would enter into life, keep the commandments and think seriously, and often of your soul's welfare."

ST. ANDREW'S CHOIR CONCERT

The annual anniversary concert given by the choir of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church had a very good attendance last evening, and the choir once again proved its pre-eminence as a musical organization. St. Andrew's church was well filled with an appreciative audience, who were entertained to a diversified well-timed programme of choral numbers, vocal quartettes, duos, and solos, a novelty in an organ and piano duet, and readings by Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland Choir members provided the entire entertainment assisted by Miss Muriel Bridge, playing piano accompaniments, with her usual proficient ease.

In the quality of their work, the choir of St. Andrew's church is outstanding. They convey an impression of artistic finish and technical ease in their ensemble singing that is delightful. There are no individual efforts noticeable. The choral numbers are given as with one rounded, swelling voice, compact and well-balanced, with a smooth perfection that is absolutely at ease, either in their fine, pianissimo efforts or in the deep, swelling volume of tone that fills church with melodious sound in their forte passages. A minute attention to detail in tone production and phrasing makes their delivery of noble music pleasing and extremely effective. Under the direction of Mr. John Crane, their organist and leader, they have reached a very high standard in choral music, in a degree that is at once a tribute to their own apparent love of music and the notable skill of their conductor.

A revelation of the choir's attention to nuances in shading was apparent in the magnificient "O Day of Penitence," one of Gounod's incomparable efforts in sublime church music. As the programme phrased it; "This very effective tone picture is based on the suffering, trial and death of Christ, its dramatic passages depicting the cry of the mob to "Crucify Him' 'and "Beat Him with scourges", which are typical of the style of the great French writer, while ever and anon the plantiffive prayer "Come, let us kneel with sorrow and contrition," affords a striking contrast to the daring chromatic treatment of the historic narrative." The demands of this exacting number were adequately met by the choir, whose handling of their theme was memorable. Sung in "a capella" style, without accompaniment, this was a test of the manifold excellences of the concerted voices, the deep tones of the basses forming a wonderful background for the thread of high-pitched melody, and receiving much prolonged applause.

The choir gave, as an opening number, "Doth Not Wisdom Cry," once again, as in all its numbers, keeping within the range of church choral music. The fine baritone of Mr. Douglas Carlisle in solo work was effectively used in this selection Mrs. Ford Turner's rich, deep contralto was heard in the difficult role of Narrator in "The Christmas Song", another very artistic choral offering. "In this dainty morceau, by Peter Cornelius, the narrator tells the story of the coming of the wise men to Jerusalem in search of the infant Christ. In accompaniment, the choir is heard in a beautiful chorale." This number was given without accompaniment, the choir once again demonstrating its facility in difficult movements without instrumental support which the interpretation of an exacting obligato was given excellent treatment by the narrator.

With piano accompaniment, the Jubilate "Amen" was given, in which Miss Dorothy Engel had the soprano solos. Her clear, high tones were very effective in conjunction with the reverent, hushed work of the opening bars that merge later into a majestic, echoing outburst of full voiced melody, with final, instant release.

In the last selection, the choir repeated a Motet from "Gallia," a Gounod's composition, which was a portion of their last year's programme. This is a splendid, dramatic tone poem, a lamentation over the ruined city of Jerusalem, into which the singers entered with full appreciation of the inner meaning of the superb music. The interpretive phrasing, the soft intervals leading up to a magnificent finale, made an effective close to a fine programme of choral music. In this selection, Miss Engel took the solo work.

The Male Quartette, with members in Messrs. E. Humpage, N. Niven, D. Carlisle and D. D. Brown, gave two well-received selections. The four fine voices blended beautifully in the lovely number, "O Peaceful Night," sung with excellent interpretation, and were also heard to advantage in the popular selection, "Po' Little Lamb."

A mixed quartette, with Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland, soprano, Mrs. Ford Turner alto, H. Niven, tenor, and D. D. Brown, bass, was accorded much repeated applause for their rendition, in very attractive style and tones, of the pretty Scotch song, "Lassie o' Mine." An excellent contrast in vocal range, suited to the selection, was afforded in the duet, "Tenor and Baritone," of Messrs. E. Humpage and J. Smith, in which the "sweet, melodious tenor" and the "rich, resounding baritone" of the song were well typified in the two good voices.

Miss Dorothy Engel gave a double solo number, her charming rendition of two songs winning much applause. "My Ships" and "Brown Birds Singing" were two dainty selections, in which the singer's high, sweet tones and clear enunciation were well demonstrated. The vibrant, lyric quality of the vocalist's bright soprano voice was very effective in the second number, ending on a high pitched, sustained final.

Mr. R. A. Brown's rich-toned, sonorous bass had effective scope in two solos. Choosing sea songs, Mr. Brown received repeated encores for his efficient handling of his selections; the difficult, "Sea Fever" with its tricky, semi tones, and Sanderson's "Shipmates o' Mine." The clear, clean-cut enunciation, the confident delivery and smooth quality of tone which characterize Mr. Brown's singing make his work very pleasing.

Mrs. Hazel Davidson McClelland, as usual, contributed much to the success and the lightening of an almost distinctively church programme. Her readings were received with the applause which always follows the appearance of this popular entertainer, whose un-self-conscious demeanor and admirable style add so much to the interest of her work. A dramatic presentation of the wrongs of the red man, in "The Cattle Thief," by Pauline Johnson, was Mrs. McClelland's first contribution to the programme. Her second number was one of her inimitable "kiddie" bits, in which her powers of mimicry and meorization were demonstrated to the echo of much applause. "A Good Little Girl and a Bad Little Girl" was the title of this effort, which was followed by the huomorus encore, "A Scotch Sermon," that deals in detail with the meaning of the word "circumspectly."

Last in mention, but decidedly not least in the way of interest and attraction, was the instrumental duet by Miss Muriel Bridge, pianiste, and Mr. John Crane, at the organ. This was a charming interlude in the presentation of vocal music ,and the artistic playing of the two fine musicians brought a repetition of enthusiastic applause that called forth a second number. The first selection was a "Serenade," the music of the two instruments blending beautifully in a pleasing duet. The melody was carried in turn by the organ and piano, the flowing, smooth, sustained music of the former outlined by the accented beat of heavy, repeated chords on the latter. As an encore, Mr. Crane and Miss Bridge played "In a Monastery Garden," its descriptive measures admirably suited to the instruments used. The bird notes of the initial movement were simulated by the piano, with the organ carrying the pretty melody, repeated later in a higher key. In the third movement, "The Chant of the Monks," the shimmering "tremolo" stop on the organ was used with excellent effect.

At the conclusion of the programme, the choir was entertained in the Ladies' Parlor of the church.

VACANT LOTS ARE OFTEN UNSIGHTLY

Littered Vacant Spots are Menaces to Health and Make Poor Appearance

Take a look around the city and note the appearance of the lots not built upon or incorporated within the yard of some home. Unless something recently has been done about it every such lot is a fright to behold, and it is a menace to health.

It is a sad sight to see a well-kept home, with lawn and flowers, and right next to it a lot grown up to weeds and harboring cans, old newspapers, and junk of all kinds. It usually belongs to some owner not living in the neighborhood, but occasionally the owner of such a lot actually lives next door and has not the sense of neatness, the love for beautiful surroundings nor even the knowledge that such a state of affairs is a menace to the health of his family, that will prompt him to convert it into a lawn or playground, or at least to keep the weeds cut and the refuse cleaned up.

Citizens accustomed to seeing such eyesores in the vicinity of their homes generally soon cease to notice them, but strangers passing by do not fail to note them and charge their ugliness against the whole city. More than that, persons thinking of moving into the neighborhood or buying a home there are repelled by such ugliness and are moved to go elsewhere. In that way the vacant lot is a detriment to all neighboring property and many a house is sold for enough less than it is worth, because of such surroundings, to have paid for keeping such lots like a city park for years. Property owners in neighborhoods where such lots exist are penny wise and pound foolish when they do not put an end to their ugliness. It costs them real money when they want to sell their property.

Menace to Health.

But loss of reputation for the whole city and loss of property values for the immediate neighborhood are not the only injury that refuse-strewn lots do to their neighborhood. They menace the health of all who live there. They are the breeding places of countless flies and mosquitos, the most deadly germ carriers that medical science now knows as a part of our daily lives. Rats carry disease germs also, and rats are harbored by such places and in old buildings and dirty basements, though they do not do the deadly work of the house fly, which breeds in refuse.

Most cities have weed cutting ordinances, but they are so hedged about with red tape that they do not result in the cutting of weeds, if they do it at all, until they have grown tall and gone to seed. Whatever menace to health they bear is not cured by such cutting of them as the municipality does. Unless the property owners or some neighborhood association looks after such places, they are not looked after at all.

Here is where the clean-up and paint-up campaign does some of its finest work. It not only cleans the streets and alleys, the back yards, basements and ashpits, but it seeks to remove the vacant lot's ugliness and its menace to health. The weeds are kept cut, all refuse is removed and, if possible, the lots are converted into playgrounds for the children of the neighborhood, instead of letting them play in the streets and run the risk of being run over by vehicles. If not made into playgrounds, and very little equipment is necessary for that, then these vacant lots should be converted into thrift gardens. A neighborhood club could allot to each boy and girl a garden plot and offer prizes for best results. It is wonderful what results can be procured in this way, with benefit to the whole surrounding property and people and especially to the boys and girls who are thus given an opportunity to employ their spare time and energy in learning some of nature's ways.

The problem of the vacant lot is one that the clean-up and paint-up campaign solves admirably, and is a feature that Peterboro will do well to develop.

LIVING ROOMS SHOULD NOT BE OVERCROWDED

Simplicity in Arrangement of the Furniture Should Be Keynote — Well-Appointed Room Is Not Ornate.

IDEAS ON GROUPING.

An over-furnished room reveals the same lack of taste expressed in the appearance of an over-dressed individual. The keynote of the successfully furnished room is simplicity in the selection and placement of the articles going into it.

It was once thought that the instinct that was an adjunct to motherhood was sufficient to guide the young mother in the care of her baby, but the Well Badies' Clinic in Peterborough ,and similar institutions in other places, indicate that this is conceded only up to a point. In the same way every woman used to furnish her home according to her housewifely instincts, but now the most progressive women read and study the works of trained and experienced decorators, even as to the placing of furniture in the rooms after it has been selected to give the best effect.

One of the cardinal rules in furnishing a room is the avoidance of using furniture that is ornate to the extent of appearing out of harmony with its surroundings. In this manner one ill-chosen article can cheapen and mar the effect of an otherwise attractive setting. Never purchase or retain an article of furniture whose contribution to your room is solely decorative. In selecting new pieces always visualize how they will conform to your present scheme of furnishing.

The well appointed room is composed of permanent pieces ot establish balance, and movable articles which form groupings. Permanent pieces in the living-room usually consist of davenport, large chairs, piano and desk or secretary. The movable articles may be end-tables, floor lamp, eccentric tables, smoker, small chairs, and book trough.

Arrangement of the room is, of course, contingent upon its size in proportion to the amount of furniture to be put into it. In the event that permanent pieces are too large for the living-room, use a large plain-colored rug, and place the furniture as far from the center of the room as reasonable with ample space between the objects, and avoid using small articles. Should your present pieces appear inadequate to properly fill the size room you have, remember that if you group them attractively the seeming bare places will have a tendency to accentuate the perfect and naturally pleasing balance you have established.

Choosing Rugs.

The choice of rugs for a living-room is largely a matter of individual prerence. The only point to considerd is that if your furniture covering and drapes are of plain material, a figures rug should be used. A floor coverings purpose is to furnish softness and comfort as well as to afford a background for furniture. Naturally, when completely furnishing a room with new furnishings, the rug should be decided upon first, because it constitutes the basis of your color scheme. A rug whose dominant colors are mulberry, blue and grey, prompts the employment of those or harmonizing colors in the balance of the room.

Movable pieces then complete the ideas of grouping. When it is borne in mind that the living-room is in reality a gathering-place, skilful arrangement of davenport and chairs must be made to prevent the necessity of rearrangement when several people wish to converse. The desk should be placed to gain natural light from the left and to escape the direct glare of overhead lights. A floor lamp standing at the left of an arm chair, with a small table on the opposite side, suggest a congenial spot for reading or sewing. Place a smal chair near the piano, and also see that a comfortable chair is adjacent to the bookcase, with ample light from the right direction. The disposal of the davenport depends upon the size of the room. An ideal arrangement when space permits, is to center it in the room with a full length davenport table behind it.

Avoid Overcrowding.

If the living-roo m has a mantel, care should be taken in how it is used. Unfortunately, the mantelpiece often constitutes a catch-all for various articles of bric-a-brac, which gives the entire room an untidy appearance. This practice is probably an hereditary throw-back to the days of the "what-not" cabinet in the parlor, but it is decidedly out of keeping with the modern idea of beauty. At the most, three articles, preferably a clock flanked by two candlesticks, should be placed upon it.

In furnishing a room, the same thought should be given to open spaces as that which applies to hanging pictures. Do not try to utilize all the furniture that may come into your possession just because of it. Rather store some of it away for future use. Your home will be more artistic and more comfortable to live in.

SHOULD HAVE A BUDGET

"Every man should have a budget, whereby he definitely puts aside cerproportions of his income for rent, food, education, pleasure, savings, and other things that go into the average family life. Thus he can soon see whether he ought to have an auto.

"If he can continue to save a reasonable amount for a rainy day, not cut down his standard of living, and still have an auto—fine.

"But to give up savings or cut down the standard of living for an automobile is unwise and unsafe.

"It just resolves itself into the matter of keeping a budget. By this means any man can answer the question himself."

A GREAT FEELING TO OWN YOUR HOME

"It's the greatest feeling a man can have," a laboring man told The Examiner when asked about the little house he had just built. "For forty-seven years I've been paying rent in the Old Country and here, and while I have been saving a little money I have not got anywhere. Now I've built this house—it's not much of a mansion, but I can add to it as I get on—and it's all my own from the cellar floor to the top brick in the chimney. It's a good investment, too, for I've been offered more for it already than it cost me, even charging for my own time. I'll tell you, I never made so good a move in my life as when I started this house."

This man had worked in England for many years and had worked in Peterborough several years in factories at unskilled labor. He had been frugal—as he must have been to save money—had educated his family and launched them on life. Last year he was left alone with his wife.

In spring the great idea seized him, and he bought a piece of land in the south end. With the assistance of his stalwart sons and occasionally a skilled carpenter, he built a little four-roomed house, designed on lines that permit of additions without alterations.

Last winter he lived for the first time in his own home, and celebrated his emancipation in a house-warming on the day he passed his sixty-first birthday. Today he is one of the proud home owners of Peterborough.

BANK HEARING OTTAWA TODAY

Sir Thomas White Will Appear Before the Commission Again.

OTTAWA, May 6. — At the opening of the hearing of the Home Bank Commission here this morning, T. A. Reid, counsel for shareholders, drew the attention of commmissioner McKeown, to an item in the morning papers referring to the payment of $1500 by the Home Bank to Sir Thos. White as a fee for acting as special adviser a short time before the bank's failure.

Mr. Reid suggested that Sir Thomas be recalled to explain this to the commission.

Eugene Lafleur, counsel for the government, said that he had received a telegram from Sir Thomas relative to the news item this morning The telegram stated that "Owing to insinuations in the press," Sir Thomas felt it necessary to make a statement to the press. This was not disrespectful to the commission. He desired to appear before the commission to present the facts.

Commissioner McKeown said that the commission might go to Toronto next week, in which case Sir Thomas would be heard there; or if the counsel wished, Sir Thomas could be be heard in Ottawa.

It was decided that Sir Thomas would be told that he could either come to Ottawa this week, or appear in Toronto later on. It was also determined that he would be given an opportunity to make his argument in answer to complaints of depositors at that time.

The circumstances under which the United Grain Growers of Winnipeg, sold approximately 1000 shares of Home Bank stock to H. J. Daly, who was president of the institution when the crash came, were dealt with by Hon. T. A. Crerar before the McKeown Royal Commission this morning. Mr. Crerar explained that the stock was sold in June, 1918, when he was Minister of Agriculture in the Union government. Mr. Daly had come and asked for proxies on this stock because he thought M. J. Haney was trying to get control of the annual meeting. The stock was finally sold to Daly at a loss of approximately $30,000.

Mr. Crerar gave absolute denial to the charge that he had unloaded his personal stock in the Home Bank because of inside information in regard to condition of the institution. In answer to questions by T. A. Reid, representing the shareholders of the bank, he stated that he had held 86 shares of Home Bank stock in his own name.

"In 1918 you did some pretty quick selling?" inquired Mr. Reid.

Mr. Crerar replied that he had hold some of the stock in 1918.

"Because of inside information?" asked Mr. Reid.

"No, because I needed the money," insisted Mr. Crerar.

Mr. Reid referred to the grave condition of the bank in 1915 and 1916 and asked whether his knowledge of this had not influenced Mr. Crerar in getting rid of his stock but the former director insisted that his only reason for selling was that he wished to obtain money.

THIRTY-EIGHT CHINESE WERE SHOT FOR PIRACY

HONG-KONG, May 6.—(Canadian Press).—Thirty-eight Chinese, convicted of piracy of the steam launch Kwongtak, were shot to death today by the Chinese authorities. Representatives of the Hong-Kong police department were present at the executions.

The pirates recently seized the Kwongtak in Hong-Kong waters and attempted to escape with their prize. A Chinese Customs cruiser pursued, attacked and sank the vessel and captured the pirates.

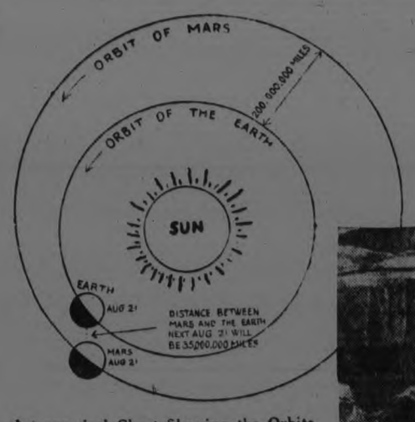
Science's Newest Daring Attempt To Probe the Mystery of Mars

Huge Light Beams, Reflected from Dazzling Mountains of Snow, to Be Used in Signaling to the Planet



Astronomical Chart Showing the Orbits of Mars and the Earth During 1924, and Their Relative Positions Next August 21, at Which Time, It Is Expected, the First Signals Will Be Projected Toward Mars.

A Martian Landscape, by Prof. Scriven Bolton, F. R. A. S., Adapted from Telescopic Studies of the Planet. This View Is Declared to Show the Ice Mountains and Bergs in the Region Surrounding the Martian South Pole.

Reproduction from an Actual Photograph of the Planet Mars, Showing Its Canals, Made by the Late Prof. Percival Lowell at the Arizona Observatory.

USING the snow-clad slopes of the Alps as a giant reflector, scientists will attempt next August to flash signals from the earth to Mars.

They are already installing on the top of the Jungfrau a gigantic electro-heliographing apparatus which will concentrate the rays from the dazzling snow-fields and hurl them in a super-search-light beam millions of miles through interstellar space.

The plan is the most stupendous, for its purpose, that the human mind has conceived since the days of Jules Verne.

Yet it is comparatively simple.

To understand the idea, it is only necessary to think of an ordinary search-light, or the even more familiar headlight of an automobile, and then imagine it multiplied to the size of an enormous mountain.

The familiar auto headlight consists of three things—a glass lens concentrating the beams, an electric bulb and a concave mirror, which serves as a reflector.

In the case of the giant searchlight which is now being set up on the Jungfrau, an enormous double lens, capable of being pointed like a cannon, will be set in a steel structure on the topmost peak. The electric bulb will be replaced by innumerable huge calcium flares; and the reflector, instead of being a small circular mirror, will be the enormous concave shining slope of a neighboring snow-clad mountain.

The gigantic flares, reflected from the great snow-fields, and concentrated in one enormous sky-piercing ray, will make the Swiss mountains as bright as day for a radius of thirty miles, and will be visible, like the Aurora Borealis, from towns and cities of other countries hundreds of miles distant. Ten thousand giant calcium flares, backed by the great shining reflector more than three miles in diameter, which is the whole snow-slope of a mountain, will develop a light roughly estimated at two million billion candle-power!

This is the plan, reduced to its simplest form, but an enormous quantity of apparatus will be set up, and a number of variations will be tried—including perhaps a daytime effort to use the diverted rays of the sun with a monster heliograph.

Mars has been chosen as the planet to which the signals will be sent because astronomers agree it is the one on which there is most likely to be life.

August of this year has been chosen as the time, because then Mars, in its travels through the skies, will be as close as it ever comes to earth.

Both the earth and Mars travel in enormous elliptical orbits around the sun. At times they are as much as 200,000,000 miles apart, but in August of this year the actual distance will be only 35,000,000 miles, and the visual distance, as reduced by high-powered telescopes, will be only about 50,000 miles.

The speed of light (one of the few facts of its kind that science knows with absolute certainty) is exactly 186,000 miles per second. As Mars will be 35,000,000 miles distant from the earth next August 21, at the time these signals are sent, it will take just three minutes and eight seconds for each flash to travel from the earth to Mars. If the Martians are capable of flashing back an immediate answer, the sending and returning of the signals would take less than seven minutes for the "round trip"—less time, counting switchboard connections, than it usually takes for a long distance telephone communication between New York and Chicago — much less than it takes to cable Europe and get an answer.

The telescopes show Mars not as a mere point of light, but as a globe, much like the earth, with snow-caps at its north and south poles, with visible changes on its surface which indicate that they have Summer and Winter there, with two moons revolving around it as the moon revolves around this earth, and with indications that it probably possesses an atmosphere.

The chief thing, however, which leads many astronomers to believe there is intelligent life on the planet is the fact that parts of its surface are criss-crossed with geometric lines which suggest by their form and regularity that they were traced by thinking beings. It is believed by many scientists that these are enormous irrigation canals.

The late Professor Percival Lowell, famous American astronomer, was of the opinion that practically all the water on Mars was frozen up into ice at the polar caps; he believed that when these melted on the edges at the coming of Summer, the inhabitants drew them off to the thirsty land in enormous sluices or canals; and that banks of vegetation, which he believed he could see, would then spring up along the banks of the sluices. It is these strips of vegetation, rather than the canals themselves, which astronomers believe they see through the telescope. These lines wholly disappear at times, when, according to Professor Lowell, "there is little or no water in them and the surrounding country is dry and bare. The polar cap melts a little, the water is drawn into the sluices, the crops spring up on the banks."

If conscious, thinking life exists on Mars, there is no reason to suppose that the thinking creatures who exist there resemble men in physical appearance. What they do look like is a subject for purely fantastic speculation. H. G. Wells imagined them as gigantic brains, almost without bone structure, shaped like giant octopi, with long feelers in place of arms and legs. Others have conceived them as a sort of combination of higher insect and human being. It is quite possible, however, that instead of being grotesque and repellant in appearance, they are more radiantly beautiful and more symmetrically formed than any life known on earth to-day.

The idea, however, that they are super-human monsters who might destroy the human race if they ever came in contact with it, has been expressed by many writers, notably Mr. Wells, in his famous "War of the Worlds," who describes the hideous fate of a world-born woman in the clutch of a Martian.

Most scientists are agreed, however, that if they do exist as thinking beings, their thinking processes, if not their physical appearance, must be very much like those of human beings.

There are certain simple facts, arrived at by reason, which science believes are equally true everywhere in the universe. A fact of that kind is that two and two make four, and that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points, and that any two sides of a triangle are greater than one side of it.

The signals it is proposed to send by the gigantic reflector from the top of the Alps, which will consist of dot-and-dash flashes, like the Morse telegraphic code, will take into consideration this fact:

First of all, they will send simple axioms of arithmetic. For instance, they will flash two quick dots, then two more quick dots after a short interval, and then after a slightly longer interval they will flash four dots. This message will mean "two and two make four."

By repeating signals of this kind, if there are any observers on Mars to get the signals, they will know that the flashes are not accidents of nature, but are being sent by thinking beings.

After this has been done for a time, they will then send simple code messages, saying, "try to answer," or "try to communicate with us."

It is not supposed that the Martians will have a language similar to our own, but human ingenuity is capable of decoding practically any secret code in any language, and in some cases even in an unknown dead language. If the Martians are as intelligent as human beings—and there is reason to imagine that they may be infinitely more intelligent—there is a good chance that they will be able to study out the meaning.

After these signals have been sent, then all the great telescopes in the world will be on the look-out for months to see whether there are indications of anything like return signals.

It is a very strange thing, and one of the most wonderful achievements of the human mind, that if any sort of dot-and-dash flash signaling can be exchanged across space, it would then be gradually possible for experts to work out talking codes by which ideas can be communicated, quite regardless of whether there is any language like our own on Mars or not.

If the Martian actually exists and gets these messages, he should have little difficulty in responding. Nothing would be necessary but to send any sort of signals at fixed intervals.

Looking for return signals will be as exciting as sending them. All available telescopes will be trained in that direction—and, most interesting of all, Camille Flammarion, the great French astronomer, will be at the bottom of a mine-shaft in Chile, South America, watching through a huge telescope, which will utilize one of the mine-tunnels for a tube.

STIFF SENTENCE COONEY BANDITS

Ten to Twenty Years Each in Prison and Lecture From Court.

New York, May 6. Canadian Press —Mrs. Celia Cooney, the famous bobbed hair bandit and her husband and partner in crime, Edward Cooney were sentenced to serve from 10 to 20 years each in prison by County Judge Martin of Brooklyn, to-day.

Mrs. Coonty was sentenced to the Auburn prison, and her husband to Sing Sing. They had pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and robbery.

The young woman, who was arrested at Jacksonville, Fla., with her husband, on April 21st held her head high as she walked into the court-room to hear her sentence.

Cooney was sullen and watched his wife closely as the pair stood before the judge.

Judge Martin addressed his remarks to the girl, saying: "I have discussed your case with you in my chambers and you have told me about all the jobs you committed. You must be taught that such acts cannot be committed in this community and go unpunished."

FOUR DEAD AT TRAGIC END OF MOTOR TRIP

NEW YORK, May 6 (Canadian Press). — Four persons, two young women and two young men, were dead last night, the toll of a joy ride motor smash up early yesterday, when an expensive automobile, appropriated from an employer by his chauffeur, was driven into a tree on Riverside Drive.

More than twelve hours after they had been killed, the two women were identified as Mrs. Anna Paul and Miss Peggy Carroll, each nineteen years of age, and telephone operators.

One of the men, Hugh McNamee, was killed instantly, and Alfonso Marcoux, the chauffeur, died last night.

POLICE COURT HAD FIRST MOTOR CASE

Driver's License Suspended -- Alcombrack Discharged on Second Charge--Edwards Case Recalled.

Arthur Brown, charged with driving his car recklessly or negligently was fined $10 and cents $5.80 and had his permit suspended one week. Mr. Brown drove on the wrong side of a street car on Reid street, the police claimed at a faster rate of speed than 20 miles an hour. He pleaded guilty.

This is the first case of suspended license under the new Highways' Traffic Act, which provides that persons found guilty of its transgression must not drive their cars for certain specified periods. The suspensioned is endorsed on the permit for reference in future cases.

Stole Firewood

Roland Edwards, 23, of Havelock, born in Dummer, was charged with stealing in March and April wooden fence posts, the property of the C.P.R. He pleaded guilty, saying he only took 25 posts from the cattle yard. He needed them for firewood, being unable, he said, to obtain work. He was arrested by Constable John Evans of the C.P.R. He received his one month sentence with a nod of his head.

Roland Edwards is a son of the Mrs. Emma J. Edwards who was charged on May 9, 1922, with murder of her son, Ernest Edwards, and acquitted on October 18. To-day's prisoner gave evidence at that time regarding the death of his brother.

Case Dismissed

Edward Alcombrack, in jail on a charge of having drugs illegally, did not appear this morning on a second charge laid against him. His counsel J. A. O'Brien waived production and Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton withdrew the second charge. It was practically the same as the one on which Alcombrack was sentenced, he said.

FINE IMMIGRANTS LAND AT TORONTO

A Party of 180 Men and Women From the Hebrides in Charge of Dr. A. C. McLeod Arrived This Morning.

QUEBEC, May 6. — Among the third class passengers on the C.P.S Marloch, from Glasgow and Stornaway, which docked here at 1.15 this morning, was a party of 180 men and women from the Hebrides, in charge of Dr. A. C. McLeod, conducting officer of the Ontario government.

In an interview, Dr. McLeod said he felt a sense of pride in having the honor of conducting the party from Stornaway to Toronto.

"I have no hesitation," he said, "in stating that this party is one oi the finest, if not the very finest, party of immigrants that ever came to Canada. These young men and women come from God-fearing and devout Christian homes. They cherish in the highest degree the British and Canadian ideals, and they are loyal to the old home and the British empire, as only Highlanders can be."

Dr. McLeod also stated that another party of Hebrideans will come over during the present season, probably in June or July.

The complete list of passengers included 78 cabin and 612 third class passengers, the latter all being sent off on the C.P.R. 11 o'clock special for Toronto and Western points.

The Marloch left for Montreal at 8.25 in the morning, by which time all her third class passengers has been transferred to the immigration building.

ULSTER CABINET TO MAINTAIN POSITION

BELFAST, May 6. — (Canadian Press).—The Ulster Cabinet has decided to maintain its position and refuse to appoint a representative on the commission to de-limit the frontier between the North and South.

The Cabinet's decision was taken at a meeting under the chairmanship of Premier Sir James Craig, who returned yesterday from London.

Difficulties are forecast in many quarters in consequence of the Government's refusal to modify its attitude on the boundary question.

COMMISSIONER WHEELER DISCHARGED RAY CASS

BOSTON, May 6. — (Canadian Press).—Ray Cass, whom the Canadian Government sought to have extradited to Nova Scotia for trial on piracy charges, was discharged by United States Commissioner Wheeler to-day. Cass was arrested in connection with the raid on the British rum-running schooner J. Scott Hankenson off Cape Ann last August.

INDIANS HAVE COMPLAINTS.

John Jacobs, Indian constable at Mud Lake reserve, is launching another appeal on behalf of the Indians. He claims the Indians have a grievance and for that reason he is presenting this grievance to "the fair-minded citizens of the province." Just what this grievance is Constable Jacobs did not disclose. After thumping the desk a few times and shouting at the top of his voice, Constable Jacobs proceeded to explain that some time ago Mr. Duncan Scott, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, was invited to come to Peterborough and hear what the Indians had to say. Mr. Scott, it is claimed, did not accept the invitation and for that reason has incurred the wrath of Constable Jacobs and others on the reserve.

GOVERNMENT TO HELP HOSPITALS

Nurses' Training Schools Taken Over From the Provincial Secretary's Department.

TORONTO, May 6. — (Canadian Press).—The first step on the Ontario Government's consolidation of its health departments under its newly created Ministry of Health was taken yesterday when Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, Minister of New Portfolio, took over the nurses' training schools from the Provincial Secretary's Department. With the announcement of the change came also an announceemnt of the new head for nurses' training school work. Miss Dixon, who has been temporarily in charge of the work since its inception over a year ago, now leaves it to return to her duties at Weston Sanitorium, and her place is taken by Miss A. Munn, for five years superintendent of the Stratford General Hospital.

The transfer of the nurses' training schools department is the first change which has been announced since the legislation of last session establishing a separate Ministry of Health and appointing Hon. Dr. Godfrey to be its head and to carry that portfolio in addition to the Labor one. The idea of the Government as explained by Premier Ferguson to the Legislature was to ultimately consolidate all health services under this Ministry, transferring several which are at the present administered by the Provincial Societies' Department. Gradually, accordingly, hospitals and asylums branches will also come under Hon. Dr. Godfrey's charge. The move is being delayed, it is understood, by the Government audit in these departments.

The Messrs. Willard, Brennan and Firpo, among others, are quite willing to admit Jack Dempsey is a slugger of no uncertain power.

At present the heavyweight champion is doing some slugging of a different sort out on the coast, where he keeps in training working out at intervals with the Los Angeles players in the Pacific Coast League.

'Tis said the champ takes a mean cut at the ball.

PETERBORO CRICKET LOST IN CRICKET GAME

LAKEFIELD, May 6.—A number of men from Peterborough were in the village on Saturday and played a friendly game of cricket with The Grove team, of which R. T. Barnard is the captain. The afternoon was damp with something of a Scotch mist which made the game rather difficult to play. The Grove.

The Peterborough visitors were: Messrs. DelaFosse, Thorpe, Kingsford, Foster, Langley, Stuart, Manning, Coutts, Johnston, Stratton and Young.

The Grove team were: Barnard (captain), Rainnie, Roper, Fawcett, Massie, James, Howe, Christmas, Pedlar, Loosemore, Pullen.

The Baseball Club.

The entertainments given last week under the auspices of the Lakefield Baseball Club were very successful from every point of view, the financial returns being even more than was anticipated and the audiences, which filled the theatre almost to capacity on both nights, were enthusiastic in their praise of the picture, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," dramatized from Charles Wagor's novel. The Baseball Club appreciated very much the support given this, their initial effort (aside from their regular games) to raise money. The season will open at Campbellford on May 23rd.

LAWN BOWLERS INVITE LADIES

Opportunity Extended of Forming Club and Using Greens — R. M. Glover Donates Trophy and Dr. Hammond the Doubles Prize.

At the meeting of the Lawn Bowlers' Association held last night, the new president, Mr. D. H. Moore, made his appearance and handled the meeting in good style.

The formation of a ladies' bowling club which was discussed at the last meeting was once more threshed out last night, and it was decided that the wives and friends of the present male member of the club be given the first consideration, and that the number of ladies do not exceed 40 and be not less than 20.

The ladies are to be allowed two afternoons a week, Tuesday and Friday being mentioned, while Saturday afternoon was also discussed.

T. E. Curvin, who was appointed at the last meeting to look after the proposed ladies' club, said that he had got in touch with the Business Girls' Club of this city, and that about 20 of them were willing to join the Ladies' Club if they could be allowed to use the green on Saturday afternoons, as it was their only afternoon off.

It was decided that the wives and friends of the present members are to have the first chance for application and to be given a week to hand in their applications or let Mr. Curvin know whether they want to join the club or not, so that he would be able to make his report to the club, and if he did not have enough members he could round up some of the business girls or any others wishing to join.

Prizes Donated.

Mr. George Cairns said that he had been authorised by Mr. R. M. Glover to announce that Mr. Glover was going to donate a challenge trophy to the club this year, and that the cup is to be competed for, all summer. He also is to be the donor of individual prizes accompanying the cup for the year.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Glover.

Dr. E. A. Hammond also expressed his wish to be the donor of prizes for the winner of the doubles this year. He was also tendered a vote of thanks.

A Dunhill pipe was a presentation to Mr. M. B. Chenhall by the club for the faithful work he did la year, and for which he would take no pay.

The by-laws which were made a few years ago are to be changed by the executive committee to meet with the latest resolutions passed. Copies of these by-laws are to be printed and posted in the club house.

Caretaker Engaged.

Mr. J. Sedgwick, of the Green Committee, said that a caretaker had been employed, and that he was doing wonderful work in sodding the green. He said that the sod had been laid perfectly, and that the members should be pleased with the work Mr. Carr had done.

It was decided that Mr. Carr be made an honorary member of the club.

Mr. Sedgwick also spoke very highly of the splendid work done by Mr. J. N. Bacon on the green last year.

Mr. D. H. Moore, president of the association, said that he had been elected president and that at his first knowledge of being president he did not think he was the right man, and that he could not fill the position in the way that it should be filled, and that he was ready to resign at the first notice, but before the meeting ended his work had met with such an approval of those present that he stated that he would do his best to fill the position for the coming year, and tha the thanked his fellow-members or the club for electing him.

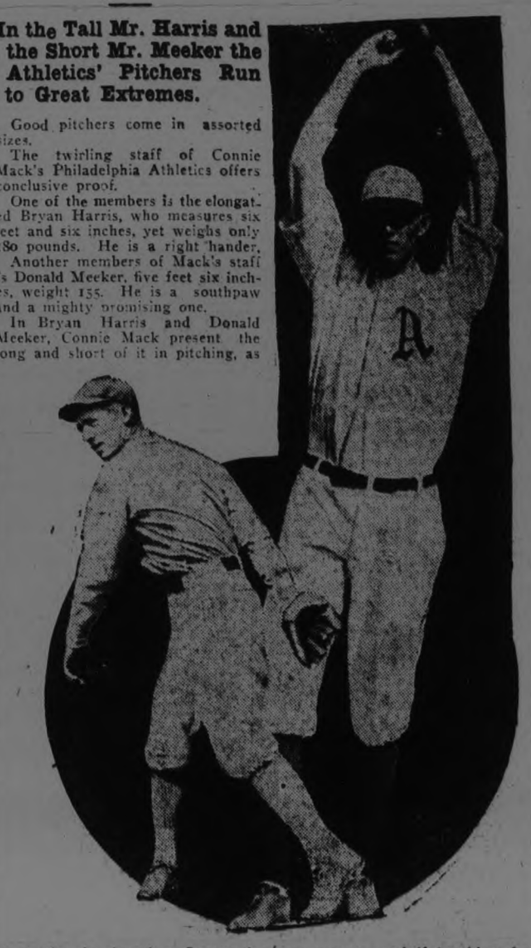
ATHLETIC PITCHERS IN ASSORTED SIZES

In the Tall Mr. Harris and the Short Mr. Meeker the Athletics' Pitchers Run to Great Extremes.



Good pitchers come in assorted sizes.

The twirling staff of Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics offers conclusive proof.

One of the members is the elongated Bryan Harris, who measures six feet and six inches, yet weighs only 180 pounds. He is a right hander.

Another members of Mack's staff is Donald Meeker, five feet six inches, weight 155. He is a southpaw and a mighty promising one.

In Bryan Harris and Donald Meeker, Connie Mack present the long and short of it in pitching, as far as the American League is concerned.

There is just the matter of one foot difference between the two from a perpendicular standpoint, with Harris holding the edge.

Considered horizontally, the diminutive Meeker has much the best of it. He is stocky, well set up recruit.

Husky Pitchers Are in Demand

Fifteen years ago a pitcher built along the lines of Meeker wouldn't have been given the slightest consideration as a big league possibility. Too light to stand the grind, would have been the unanimous verdict of the experts.

While the big pitcher is still regarded with favor, lack of size no longer prevents a promising recruit from getting the big opportunity.

Meeker reminds one of Dick Kerr of Chicago White Sox fame. He goes about his work in much the same manner, and if anything, has more stuff. His curve ball breaks fast and his speed is surprising for one so small.

"He has promise," says Connie Mack. "Seems to grasp what a pitcher needs to get along in the majors. If he should come through he would be a big help. A dependable southpaw means much to a ball club."

High Praise Fromy Cy Perkins

Cy Perkins, star catcher of the Athletics, says he has the makings that he has improved with every game.

The pitching that I have seen him do, as umpire, impressed me most favorably. He has more than a mere chance.

Size is no longer essential to success as a big league pitcher. Lack of it is no longer a serious handicap.

Courage, brains an control are far more necessary than physique.

DO YOU KNOW BASEBALL?

By BILLY EVANS

QUESTIONS.

1. If a batter is hit by a pitched ball that goes directly over the plate, what is the ruling?

2. What was the ruling made by the major leagues relative to spitball pitching?

ANSWERS.

1. If in the opinion of the umpire the delivery was up to the specifications of a strike, he would so rule it whether or not it hit the batter.

2. The major leagues ruled that the pitchers who used the spitball in 1920 would be allowed to continue it during their career.

ASH AND VILLA SIGNED.

NEW YORK, May 6.—(Canadian Press).—Frankie Ash, of England, Monday signed articles to meet Pancho Villa, world's flyweight titleholder, in a 15 rounds championship fight at the Nostrand A.C., on May 27. Villa had previously signed for the bout.

ALDERMAN PHELAN WOULD FIX FIELD

Wants a Good Job Made of Infield at Riverside Park — Dump Twenty-Five Loads There.

That street commissioner Evans' efforts in baseball diamond rebuilding as authorized by the Council did not meet the whole-hearted approval of the players was evident in Alderman Phelan's request to the City Council last night, and Alderman Phelan being recognized as the expert in such matter, steps were taken to rectify the plans originally laid down.

Alderman Turner's committee recommended "that the skinned part of the infield at Riverside Park be filled in and built up." Alderman Phelan considered this insufficient and pressed for a specified twenty-five loads to be placed there to restore the former perfection of the diamond. Alderman Turner countered with a proposal to make the recommendation read "what is necessary", but Alderman Phelan contended strongly for the twenty-five loads.

Mayor Turner—"The chairman doesn't want to be tied down to any number. He will use thirty loads if needed."

Alderman Phelan—"Well, thirty then."

His eagerness was repressed and the clause was amended to read "up to 25 loads."

His Worship Mayor Turner did not think the city should pay for the maintenance of the park, the Baseball Association's agreement binding the lessees to keep it in good repair. "With this Alderman Phelan did not agree, saying the improvements now contemplated are permanent, and the association is only liable for incidental repairs. "In view of the fact," he said, "that the city is taking $1,000 rental from the Baseball Association for the park for the purposes of a ball ground, while other cities give the players a park and a grant of a coupe of hundred dollars in addition, it is too much to ask them to fix up the infield too."

One Alderman suggested that the earth could be obtained for $1 a load, but His Worship declared if he job was done for $100 it would be a fortunate thing.

SOCCER NOTES

The Vets and Woollens meet in a league game on Thursday evening at King Edward Park. Kick-off at 6 o'clock. Referee, J. L. Howarth. This game will start prompt on time.

Quakers will meet Thistles in a league game on Saturday afternoon at the Oval. Kick-off at 3.00 prompt. Referee, J. C. Russell.

Canadian Woollens are on top of the league with a win—2 points—one game; then Thistles and Vets, 2 points each for two games.

Lauchlin, who played for Canadian Woollens last year as a senior, turned in a good game at inside right for the Massey juniors on Saturday.

Three prominent soccer enthusiasts in the person of Jack Cairns, ex-President of association, Wm. Johnstone and Adam Smith, in the interest of the new soccer team, were given permission by the association to enter organized football in the city.

The official opening of the Oval takes place on Saturday, and Mr. Kitpey reports the grounds in good condition.

The Canadian Woollens players report an excellent trip to Campbellford. They defeated the Trent Valley boys to the tune of four goals to one. Everyone of the Peterborough boys speak of the sportsmanship shown, and with some more practice they have the makings of a good team and will without doubt prove an attraction to rest of local clubs who contemplate the journey.

After hearing both parties in the case of McFadden of the Vets, the Executive decided that the said player be repremanded and this case shall not be a precedent, also that the club Secretary be notified of some of the supporters on the line.

The Thistle F. C. are holding a dance in Victoria Hall on Friday evening, May 9th—not May 8th as printed on the tickets. Remember Friday evening, boys!

The goal-scorers in the league up to date are:

T. Wyllie, Woollens, 6 goals.
A. Mitchell, Woollens, 3 goals.
J. Chambers, Woollens, 2 goals.
J. Wade, G.W.V.A., 1 goal.
Burgess, Thistles, 1 goal.
Craig, Quakers, 1 goal.

McCrone, who played with the Caleys two seasons ago, signed up with one of the senior teams in Toronto last week. Toronto papers consider him a good one.

A special meeting of the G.W.V.A. soccer team and Executive will be held on Wednesday evening in the G.W.V.A. Hall at 7 o'clock prompt, so as to pick the team for Thursday evening.

A few weeks ago a number of soccer enthusiasts at a game commenced picking a team of "hasbeens" to enter the cup tie games, all in the matter of a joke, but now it is serious. Some of the old Executive members of clubs have now gathered together nearly 40 players who contemplate getting behind the new club. The versatile Billy Gatfield and Jack Cairns have never failed yet.

DO YOU KNOW SOCCER.

Law 9—Neither tripping, kicking, striking nor jumping at a player shall be allowed. Tripping is intentionally throwing or attempting to throw an opponent by the use of the legs or by stopping in front of or behind him.

This is an important law, as by enforcing it and taking the initiative where he sees necessary, a referee can prevent rough play developing. He can stop the game at any time and give a free kick, or caution, or both, against any player whose conduct or play is dangerous or likely to cause injury, or he may order him off.

Charing behind.—A play shall not be charged behind unless he is intentionally obstructing an opponent. If a player turns so as to face his own goal when he is tackled or is obviously aware that he is about to be tackled by an opponent, he is intentionally obstructing, and may be charged. A player may be charged from behind when he is intentionally obstructing an opponent, whether facing his own goal or not, but must not be violent or dangerous.

IRISH CHAMP!

Mr. Gilmore of Dublin Confounds Reporters By Spurning Corned Beef and Cabbage, to Say Nothing of "Begorra."

BILLY GILMORE

BY JOE WILLIAMS

NEW YORK, May 5—The trouble, if any, with Billy Gilmore, recently arrived from Dublin with the lightweight championship of Ireland, is that he fails to sustain any of the popular illusions which fictionists have associated with that country, and its picturesque citzenry.

For instance, Mr. Gilmore does not smoke a clay pipe. On greeting reporters and other undesirables, he does not say, "Begorra, I'm glad to meet you, bye." He expresses no uncontrollable passion for corned beef and cabbage and mention of the king of England does not bring the flush of anger to his face.

It is going to be hard for those of us who take our romance from printed pages to warm up to Mr. Gilmore as a legitimate representative for the park for the purposes of a ball ground, while other cities give the players a park and a grant of a coupe of hundred dollars in addition, it is too much to ask them to fix up the infield too."

One Alderman suggested that the earth could be obtained for $1 a load, but His Worship declared if he job was done for $100 it would be a fortunate thing.

Chauncey Depew announces he will take up golf when he is 100 years old....Probably on the theory that the second 100 years are the easiest.

Beat one of the Maloney Boys

Mr. Gilmore is here looking for digital business. He thinks he would like to take on Charley White or Pal Moran as a starter and then advance by easy stages to a championship match with Benny Leonard.

Mr. Gilmore admits considering Leonard an excellent fighter. "Most of the Jewish fighters are for that matter," he adds, by way of further astonishing you.

Gilmore won the Irish championship last October by defeating Tommy Maloney—and sure you've heard of the Maloneys!—on points in Dublin. Apparently the newcomer runs largely to science as distinguished from walloping, a characteristic acquired from the Britishers with whom he got his early fistic training. His unmarred features attest to his fine defensive skill.

Midland League Opens In Cobourg.

The official opening of the Midland Baseball League will take place on Saturday, 24th May, at Victoria Park, Cobourg.

Arrangements have been made to have the Cobourg Kiltie Band head the parade followed, by the town and league officials and the players of the four teams.

The opening games are as follows:

2 p.m.—C.G.E. vs. C.N.R.

4 p.m.—Raybestos vs. Cobourg Dyeing Company.

Mr. A. F. Kimmel, of Cobourg, has kindly offered to provide the League with a championship trophy.

Timely Tips To Amateurs

Pitcher, St. Louis Browns

Too many pitchers make the mistake of putting everything behind every ball they pitch.

To use baseball slang, they bear down from the start of the game to the finish, regardless of the score.

There is nothing that takes so much out of a pitcher as wasted effort.

I make it a point to adapt my pitching to the score of the game. If I happen to have a six or seven-run lead in the latter part of the game, I pitch entirely different than if I was leading by a run, or the game was tied.

My suggestion is to conserve your energy at all times and try to have something in reserve for the pinch.

A pitching threat is a most effective weapon.

NORTHERN HOCKEY LEAGUE TOTTERING.

Iroquois Falls and Timmins Will Not Have Senior Teams Next Winter.

OTTAWA, May 6. — Report, which is considered pretty accurate, has it there will be no N.O.H.A. senior series next year. Iroquois Falls will not have a senior team next season ,says the Journal here. Timmins has passed the idea of senior hockey up. Sudbury cannot get a team, and there is no possibility of any of the other northern towns getting in with the Soo Greyhounds. That leaves the team alone and they may be included in a league with American Soo, Marquette and Eleveth, though nothing has been done in that regard yet. The blow-up of the senior N.O.H.A. will be quite a blow to aspiring tourists.

STOCK MARKET

The market continues to swing in a narrow arc without much progress on either side it has a firm undertone and shows quite a good deal of resistance to the half hearted attacks launched against it by the professionals. Some covering has been done but the short interest is still large. They are many bright features in our industrial situation which must be discounted sooner or later, and it would not be surprise should stocks creep higher it is not likely to produce a boisterous market however, until all danger of a third party this fall, is entirely passed.

The mining market was quiet this morning with no special feature. W. Dome was inclined to shade off with dealings heaviest of any golds. There was a good demand for Keeley around 2.20, while Nipissing also came to life. The high-grade silver properties showed a decided firm tendency.

The Toronto and Montreal Boards were firm. Toronto rails closed at 88 1-2, up a half from the opening. Barcelona was firm at 17 1-2 on English buying. There is very little of this stock available under 20, and should the buying continue should sell over the 20 mark. The paper stocks were firm no rumours of amalgamation among big producers.

NEW YORK LETTER.

The New York market opened unchanged. Prices sold off all around for the first half-hour, but strengthened up toward noon, and the rails became quite active. The sales for General Motors showed a poor showing. Laidlaw & Co. say. One brokerage house is credited with holding about 25 per cent. of the floating stock of Baldwin Locomotive. The pool are still quietly buying Coca-Cola and delivering to the banker friends in Atlanta. It is reported that the shares of Cast Iron Pipe held by Durant will be sold by him under the unit system. It is impossible to say how much stock he has accumulated, as it is all cleared through his office and paid for in cash.

The leading operators, headed by Mr. Levermore, still continue to sell stock and continue bearish. The Textile industry is in a very bad shape and there have been several shut-downs, and would sell all Textile stocks especially think American Wool is a sale. The real reason given for the advance in Colorado Fuel and Iron is that the control has passed to the First National Bank. This is merely gossip on The Street, and not to be considered as market advice.

CHURCH UNION BILL BEFORE COMMITTEE

"The Living Hand of the Future" Invoked by Opponents.

OTTAWA, May 6. — (Canadian Press).—"The living hand of the future," was invoked by F. H. Chrysler K.C., counsel for the opponents of the church union bill in the commons' private bills committee, this morning in defence of the trusts on which the church property was held. He was being questioned by T. W. Bird of Nelson, a member of the committee as to whether the Presbyterian General Assembly had power to interpret the trusts on which local church property is held and had replied in the negative. "They are bound by the dead hand of the past then?" said Mr. Bird.

"And by the living hand of the future" was Mr. Chrysler's reply which brought applause from the audience which was in turn reproved by Chairman McGiverin.

SMITH'S COUNSEL TO ASK PARTICULARS OF CHARGES

TORONTO, May 6.—(Canadian Press).—In the event of Peter Smith, former Provincial Treasurer, being committed for trial at the police court hearing, which commences to-morrow it is expected that his counsel will ask for particulars of the charges to be levelled against Mr. Smith. It is probable that the trial will be deferred until the September sessions. When Mr. Smith appeared in police court on April 29 the crown laid ten new charges against the former provincial treasurer, supplementing the original holding charge of conspiracy.

MERE MAJORITY FOR PROPOSALS OF DAWES PLAN

German People in National Election Gave Narrow Majority to Dawes-Young Scheme-Nationalists Admit Germany Must Carry Out Treaties.

FRENCH HOPE FADES

(By Carl D. Groat—United Press Staff Correspondent).

BERLIN, May 6. — The German people gave the Dawes-Young plan a narrow majority in the National elections.

Whatever the ensuing Government and Parliament may do, the official results of Sunday's polling showed to-day that at least 15,000,000 of the 29,000,000 voters registered approval of the experts' proposals.

The total vote of the Socialists, Democrats, Centrists and Folkspartei candidates, all of whom were pledged to support the plan—was more than half the ballots cast.

Approximately 11,000,000 votes, those for the Nationalists Folkists and Communists, oppose the Dawes-Young report.

The remaining three million votes are either mildly for or against the plan. The ratio of 15 to 11 underestimates the success of the Moderates since many Nationalist votes were merely protests against general conditions obtaining under the post-war regime rather than shafts directed at the Government's foreign policy.

Moreover, it must be remembered that the Nationalists no longer are sharp opponents of the Dawes-Young plan—especially if they are given a hand in the Government, for their leaders, at the close of the campaign, disavowed the Helfferich slogan, "a second Versailles," and let it be known they were willing to cooperate with the experts when the latter declared, "We must deal with facts as they are."

In other words, even the Nationalists have admitted that Germany cannot escape the fulfillment of her treaty obligations.

The Government's latest revised election figures (up to noon there had been no new ones since midnight), showed the following seats won:

Nationalists 99, Socialists 99, Centrists 62, Communists 61, Folks Partei 45, Folkists 32, Democrats 24, Bavarian Folks 15, Bavarian Peasants 10, National Liberals 9, Hanoveraner 5, Deutsch Soziale 4.

France Losing Hope.

France, if to-day's press correctly interprets her attitude, sees in the result of the German elections a fading out of hope for an early fulfillment of the Dawes-Young plan, says a despatch from Paris.

The Paris morning papers declare the outcome, with the gains registered by the German Nationalist Party, renders the hope of fulfillment illusory, although none expects open resistance.

"Nothing will succeed against Garmany except force," Pertinax, writing in the Echo De Paris, declares. He points out the difficulty of understanding where a sufficient majority will be found to carry on a Government.

Le Matin forecasts that the general attitude of any new German Government will be resistance to treaty obligations.

THEATRES

AT THE REGENT

THE CAST IN "LUCK."

One of the greatest casts ever assembled for a feature motion picture comedy is to be seen in "Luck," the latest of the Johnny Hines' sure-fire melo-comedies which is now playing at the Regent.

Johnny Hines himself has reached the topmost rung on the ladder of fame and is now conceded by press and public to be without a rival in his particular brand of film features. These are a perfectly blended mixture of unusual thrills and humor of the finest, providing laughs and excitement, a perfect form of cinema entertainment. Hines scored a far-reaching triumph in "Burn 'Em Up, Barnes," the first of his melo-comedies, and followed this up with a whirlwind success in "Sure Fire Fling," a picture that received the unqualified endorsement of all the New York critics as well as those in all of the other big cities of the country.

C. C. Burr, who produces the Johnny Hines features, believes in all-star casts. In all of the films that he releases will be found players of renown, actors and actresses who have built up a reputation and who are liked by the public. This is especially true of "Luck," in which many stars are seen in addition to the peppery Johnny.

For instance, there is Violet Mersereau who has starred in many productions for the well known companies. She has a most successful stage career before entering the ranks of the cinema players, and is one of the best liked actresses appearing before the public. Then there is Robert Edeson, whose name has been linked with numberless successes of the stage and screen. He is an actor who has endeared himself to the public because of his sterling ability to portray a wide variety of characters considerably better than anyone else.

Edmund Breese, another star in his own right, is also a member of the cast appearing in "Luck." Breeze is too well known to the theatre-going public to need any introduction. His years on the stage have brought him to every city in the country, and now, thanks to C. C. Burr, he is making many new friends through his appearance in the films. Warner Richmond, a well-known player of character roles, is also a member of the cast to be seen in "Luck."

Charlie Murray, the same old Charlie of Keystone comedy fame and the stand-by of many a Mack Sennett picture, is also among those present in "Luck." Murray is seen in the role of a plumber, and it is not hard to imagine what he does in such a part. Still another comedy star appearing in "Luck" is Flora Finch, who will always be remembered for her ability to create laughs when she played alongside the late John Bunny in the Vitagraph comedies. Then there is Polly Moran, another Mack Sennett star and laugh maker extraordinary. In "Luck" she is given many opportunities to register laughs and she never fails to put them over.

Quite a cast and quite a picture. "Luck," in fact, is quite the best thing of its kind ever photographed. Apparently the management of the Regent Theatre is lucky to be able to present "Luck."

AT THE CAPITOL

With an exceptionally skilful vaudeville offering, with the Dailey Brothers doing their daring death leap, and an intriguing picture in "The Bright Shawl," the Capitol programme for the first three days of this week is an excellent one. In the feature production, the youthful Richard Barthelemess is the hero, with Dorothy Gish as the heroine.

As Charles Abbott, the adventuring young American who takes part in a Cuban revolution against the Spanish oppressors, Barthelmess is the gallant leader of a lost cause. Struggling for Cuban liberty with a handful of followers against the might of Spain, he has a co-worker the famous dancer, La Clavel. In this role is Dorothy Gish and she makes a memorable, fascinating figure. The facial expression work that is one of the fine arts of Lillian Gish is employed by her sister here, and the small piquant dark face puts over varying emotions by the sudden, vivid changes in her expressive countenance. La Clavel does a wonderful Spanish dance in the first portion of the picture.

There is an odd atmosphere, the atmosphere of the Joseph Hergesheimer stories, in this picture. Intrigue runs beneath the story like a scarlet thread and there is one of the strange still women whom he loves to depict in his tales, in the exotic Madame Pilar, capricious, cruel. The Spanish coloring predominates in the picture. There are Spanish interiors and Spanish balls and a Spanish characterization in the part of Gasper De Vaca, who "admires courage," fights with the young hero in a sword duel that leaves the American prostrate and defeated, and then extends a flickering mercy to his defeated opponent.

La Clavel has an extremely emotional role, filled to perfection. The bright shawl that is a gay portion of her costume becomes the treasured keepsake of the man she worships in tragic fashion. In contrasting effect to the vivid dancer is the young Narcissa, the innocent maiden whom Abbott loves.

A picture out of the ordinary, with romantic and thrilling situations, a colorful atmosphere and outstanding characterizations in its main roles, "The Bright Shawl" is very interesting.

There is a good comedy, and the usual run of Capitol short reels. The vaudeville number is a thrilling and exciting series of unusual acrobatic stunts by the Dailey Brothers. They do a number of extraordinary things that include some breathtaking, skilful feats. Turning handsprings in the air to light on a companion's head and execute a sprightly dance in that exalted position is only one of their daring exercises.

HAROLD LLOYD DRAWING CONTEST CLOSES TO-NIGHT

Get Your Sketches in To-Night, Sure!

To-night is the last time that sketches of Harold Lloyd's face will be accepted in the Harold Lloyd contest now being held by the Capitol Theatre to celebrate the showing of Harold Lloyd's new comedy, "Girl Shy," at the Capitol next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The contest is open to children under fifteen. All that you have to do is to make a freehand sketch of the head of the famous comedian and send it to Lloyd Contest Editor, Capitol Theatre, with your name and age clearly written in the lower right-hand corner. Prizes of $2.50 for the best drawing, $1.50 for the second best, $1 for the third best, and ten prizes of a free ticket to see "Girl Shy" will be awarded. Miss McRae, art teacher in the public schools, will be judge, and the awards will be announced on the screen of the Capitol next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, when Harold, in his newest and best-yet picture, "Girl Shy," will be shown.

LLOYD HURT IN MAKING COMEDY

Romance and thrill mingle with comedy to make Harold Lloyd's new feature Pathecomedy, "Girl Shy," which comes to the Capitol next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, a suitable introduction for him to the American public as an independent producer.

It was while making part of the thrill action for this new production that Lloyd received the injury which laid him low for two weeks and necessitated the taking of six stitches in his head.

Before making this particular scene, Lloyd's directors, Fred Newmeyer and Sam Taylor, tried to talk the noted comedian into using a double.

"It's very risky," they told him.

But Lloyd refused to let anyone take a chance that he himself would not risk, so he rode on the rear step of a hose cart driven at thirty-five miles an hour down a Los Angeles boulevard. This was the stunt which led to the injury. A fractious fire nozzle got away from Lloyd, striking him with trip hammer force across the forehead and knocking him off the fire engine.

For a minute the other members of the Lloyd company who witnessed the accident thought he had suffered a fractured skull, but it was soon apparent that while painful, the injury would not prove really serious.

Lloyd received immediate treatment at the home of a nearby physician, but it was several days before he recovered from the shock.

The scene in which Lloyd was hurt is a prominent part of the thrill sequence in "Girl Shy," and the danger of the situation is said to be quite palpable upon the screen.

AT THE ROYAL

DOMESTIC DRAMA SCORES A TRIUMPH

"Temporary Marriage" scored an artistic triumph at its opening showing at the Royal Theatre last evening. Immensely pleased audiences glimpsed the domestic conflict that goes endlessly on in certain types of American homes while witnessing this vital drama, which not only serves in establishing an object lesson, but is told in such convincing fashion that its theme will strike home.

"Temporary Marriage" is no preachment . . . although for those who would heed it carries a useful warning of shoals that frequently remain uncharted in the waters of domesticity.

Here we have a couple approaching middle age, although the wife refuses to acknowledge her advancing years. She regards her husband, a lawyer, as a "slow poke," whose romantic days are over. At least he is willing to give up ardent love to those who are younger. But the wife will retain her passing beauty at all costs. She indulges in beauty treatment and is happy in the thought that she will have a divorce.

The story carries on in effective sweep which stimulates the mind. And it is finely interpreted by a cast chosen for its adaptability for the roles as well as for their talents. Myrtle Stedman as the erring wife who is spared from being dishonored, and who is reconciled to her husband through his sacrifice in her behalf, gives a most compelling performance. She gets into the character of the idle, restless wife who would seek remance after it has passed her by—with complete abandon. Tully Marshall, as the husband, demonstrates again that he is without a peer in character roles. His is a finished portrayal—a study of poise and dignity and keen understanding. Kenneth Harlan and Mildred Davis take care of the love interest in an able manner, while Maude George and Stuart Holmes, as the conspiring villians, show their emotional capabilities. The picture is finely staged and directed, it also carries a most fitting atmosphere, and may be safely put down as one of the most vital and convincing stories of domestic strife which has ever been recorded.

NEW ROLE FOR RAY IN "ALIAS JULIUS CAESAR"

One of the funniest comedies Charles Ray has ever made comes to the Royal Theatre Thursday in "Alias Julius Caesar." With the versatility for which he has become the noted star blossoms out into a full fledged society blade at a fashionable country club.

The opening reel shows him striving to cope with the embarrassing situation of emerging from a shower after his clothes have been removed. The hoax is part of the plot to prevent him from attending the dance that evening, causing him to be deprived of the girl in whose affection he has rapidly won the favored place.

From that point the fun waxes fast and furious as the star, mistaken for an escaped lunatic in his makeshift attire, is locked in prison after he has facetiously told the guard that he is "Julius Caesar." The ensuing developments revolve around a battle of wits in Ray's efforts to foil the plotters to keep him from the dance, during which he runs into a series of humorous and exciting adventures.

Barbara Bedford plays the feminine lead. Eddie Gribbon, strong man o numerous Mack Sennett features, has the heavy role, and the remainder of the cast includes William Scott, Robert Fernandez, Fred Miller, Tom Wilson, Harvey Clark, Gus Thomas, Milton Ross, S. J. Bingham, Phillip Dunham and Bert Offord.
